A PREFATORY NOTE ON HA'RTITA SAMHITA'.

HA'RTITA originally wrote his Law-Treatise in Prose, but the original work is not available and the one, now extant, is a metrical abridgment of the same. The metrical work is also regarded by the Hindus as an authority in Achāra or duties in general. What is popularly called positive law is not to be found in this Treatise. The work consists of Seven Chapters and contains a hundred and ninety-four S'lokas or couplets.

The king Amvarisha asks the Rishi Mārkandeya about the duties of various castes and orders. In reply to his question the Rishi describes the conversation that took place between Hārīta and the Rishis in days of yore.

It is evident from this statement occurring at the commencement of the book that Hārīta delivered his discourse on Law in Prose and the Rishi Mārkandeya subsequently put the substance in verse. The work, that passes under the appellation of Hārīta Samhita, is really a treatise written in verse by Mārkandeya embodying the substance of the original exposition of Hārīta.

HA'RITĀ SAMHITA'.

CHAPTER I.

THE DUTIES OF BRA'HMAṆĀ.

[THE KING AMBARISHA PUTS THE QUESTION TO THE RISHI MA'RΚANDEYA.]

It has, before, been said by thee that the foremost of the twice-born ones,—residing on the earth, the atmospheric and the celestial regions, performing the duties laid down [in the ordinances] for the various castes and orders,—are [said to be] devoted to Kes'ava. (1)

O foremost of the good, do thou describe unto us the duties of castes and orders by which the eternal Deity Nara-Simha (Man-Lion) is gratified. (2)

Ma'rkandeya said:—I shall here recount the ancient and the most excellent conversation that took place between the high-souled Hārīta and the Rishis. (3)

Having saluted Hārīta, conversant with all forms of religion and effulgent like fire, all the ascetics, desirous of questioning about religion, said: (4)

"O thou endued with lordly powers, O thou conversant with all [forms of] religion and the institutor of all religions, do thou, O son of Bhrigu, describe unto us the duties of various castes and orders. (5)

O thou endued with lordly powers, do thou describe unto us, in brief, the Yoga-S'āstra and every thing else that goes to create firm faith in Vishṇu. Thou art our great preceptor." (6)
Having been thus accosted by them, the ascetic Harita said to them:—Hear, O ye all ascetics, I shall describe the eternal duties. (7)

O foremost ones, by following the duties of castes and orders, as well as [the precepts of] the Yoga-S'āstra, a mortal is freed from the fetters of birth and Samsāra[(mundane existence.) (8)

Formerly (i.e., before the creation) the Divine Creator of the Universe, the Great Soul [Vishṇu], was laying asleep with [his Consort] S'ree (the Goddess of Prosperity) on a bed of serpent in water. (9)

From the navel of that Deity, lying asleep, originated a huge Lotus. Within that Lotus sprang into existence Brahmá having the Vēdās and the Vēdāṅgās for his ornaments. (10)

He (i.e., Brahmá) was, again and again, asked by the god of gods, saying,—"Create the universe." He, too, having created the entire universe consisting of the Celestials, Asurās and the human beings, brought out from his mouth the sinless Brāhmaṇās for successfully performing sacrifices; the Kṣatriyās, from his arms; and the Vais'yās, from his thighs. (11—12)

Hear, O ye foremost of the twice-born, I shall describe the words,—capable of giving wealth, fame, long life, the celestial region and the fruit of emancipation,—which the Divine Grand Father Brahmá addressed to them all, in order of succession, after having created the S'ādrās. (13—14)

Those begotten by the Brāhmaṇās on Brāhmaṇa-women are known in the Smṛitis as the Brāhmaṇās. I shall describe their duties and the country worthy of being inhabited by them. (15)
O ye foremost of the twice-born, [a Brähmana] should live in a country where the antelope moves about freely by nature, [for there only] religious practices become successful. (16)

Sixfold works have been laid down for a high-souled Brähmana. He, who always lives with them (i.e., performs them) attains to happiness. (17)

Teaching, religious study, officiating as a priest at sacrifices, celebrating sacrifices, making gifts, and accepting gifts are mentioned as the sixfold duties of a Brähmana. (18)

Teaching is threefold, [namely,] for virtue or wealth, and service is described as the third [object.] (19)

In the absence, of at least one, of these works, a Brähmana becomes a Vrisháchára, (i.e., one acting like a bull). Learning should not be bestowed, by a person, on him who seeks [only] his [own] advancement. (20)

One should teach a worthy disciple and discard an unworthy one. For successfully performing a religious rite, one should accept a gift from a householder who is known as being freed from sins. (21)

One should, in a purified place, daily attentively study any Véda. Dharma-S'ástrás should be [similarly] studied by the pure-minded Brähmanás. (22)

They should be daily and nightly studied and listened to like the Véddás. To make a gift and offer food unto a Brähmana who is ignorant of the S'ruti and the Smriti, encompasses the destruction of the giver's family. Therefore a Brähmana, with all care, should study the Dharma-S'ástrás. (23—24)

The S'ruti and the Smriti are the two eyes of the Brähmanás created by God. If deprived [of the knowledge] of the one, [a person] is called one-eyed; and if of the two, a blind. (25)

A good Brāhmaṇa should zealously attend upon his preceptor and worship the Vivāha-Fire, morning and evening. (26)

Having bathed properly, he should offer, every day, oblations to the Vishwadēvās, and adore the in-coming guests, to the best of his power, and without any distinction. (27)

A person, leading the domestic mode of life, who is always devoted to his wife, and shuns other peoples' wives, should, also, adore other in-coming Brāhmaṇa-guests to the best of his power. (28)

An intelligent person should take his meal in the evening, after having performed the Homa. He should be truthful, have control over his passion, and never fix his mind on irreligion. (29)

Having undertaken the performance of his own duty, he should not neglect it from carelessness. He should always speak truthful words conducive to the well-being of all, and in the next world. (30)

This is the duty of a Brāhmaṇa described in brief. He, who performs this duty, attains to the station of Brahman, (i.e., emancipation). (31)

O ye foremost of the Brāhmaṇās, as accosted by you, thus the Code of Religious Regulations, which dissipates the entire multitude of sins, has been described by me. Hear, I shall now describe the duties of the Kshatriyās and severally of other castes. (32).
CHAPTER II.

[THE DUTIES OF THE KSHATRIYA'S, VAISHYA'S AND SU' DRA'S ]

I SHALL describe, in order, from the beginning to the end, [the duties of] the Kshatriyas and others, by following which regulations all come by most excellent condition. (1)

When placed in [charge of] a kingdom, a Kshatriya should protect his subjects righteously, be devoted to study, and should duly celebrate sacrifices. (2)

A king, endued with a righteous understanding, should always make gifts unto the twice-born, (i.e., the Brāhmaṇās), be always devoted unto his own wife and take a sixth part [of the income of his subjects as revenue.] (3)

He should be proficient in the Laws of Polity, well-informed in the true spirit of making peace and dissen-sion, devoted to the Deities and the Brāhmaṇās, and be intent on performing rites for the, Pitris (the departed manes). (4)

He should perform sacrifices righteously and shun irreligious works. By acting thus a Kshatriya attains to the most excellent condition [in after life]. (5)

A Vaishya should duly tend cattle, drive trade and agriculture, make charities and feed the Brāhmaṇās according to his power. (6)

He should be shorn of pride and stupefaction, [and] even by words he should not injure others, be devoted to his own wife and self-restrained, and avoid other people's wives. (7)

Having fed with his money, the Brāhmaṇās, and the priests at the time of sacrifice, he should live, with-out lording over, in religious matters till the fall of his body (i.e., till his death). (8)
He should zealously celebrate sacrifices, study religious books, make charities, perform the rite for the Pitris and worship the Man-Lion, (i.e., Vishṇu.) (9)

This is the duty of a Vaishya. He, who follows the duty of his own caste, and acts thus, forsooth, repairs to the celestial region. (10)

A Sūdra should, with care, serve the three Varnas and particularly act like a servant unto the Brāhmaṇās. (11)

He should make gifts without being solicited, earn his livelihood by hardship, and zealously worship the Deity according to the rules of Pāka-Yajña, (a simple or domestic sacrifice). (12)

Furthermore he should adore the Sūdras, who wend righteous and just ways. He should put on a tattered cloth, eat the remnant of a Brāhmaṇa's food, find pleasure only in his own wife and avoid another's wife. (13)

A Sūdra should always do this with his mind, words and deeds. Having performed righteous deeds and having his sins dissipated [thereby], he attains to the dignity of Indra. (14)

The duties of the various Varnas have, thus, been described by me, as they formerly emitted from the mouth of Brahmā. O ye lords of ascetics, listen now to the duties of the first Aśrama (i.e., the order of religious students) as I go on narrating them one after the other. (15)
CHAPTER III.

[BRAHMACHARYYA, OR RELIGIOUS STUDENTSHP.]

HAVING been invested with the sacred thread, a person (i.e., one of the three castes) should live in the family of his preceptor and do good unto it by deeds, mind and words. (1)

[He should] lead a life of celibacy, sleep on [the bare] earth, adore the Fire, and offer, unto his preceptor, pitchers full of water, sacrificial fuels and go-ghrāsha (i.e., morsels of grass for his cow). (2)

A Brahmachārin should study [the Vēdās] with propriety, without which he does not attain the fruit of Vedic studies. (3)

A wicked-souled person, divorced from regulations, even when he performs righteous deeds, disregarding the proper rules, does not attain the fruits thereof. (4)

Therefore for attaining success in his Vedic study, he should perform the rites laid down in the Vēdās. He should learn, from his preceptor, the many and varied rules [for attaining] purification. (5)

Being careful and attentive, a Brahmachārin should use a deer-skin [for his waist cloth] a piece of wood for cleansing the teeth, mekhalā, (i.e., the triple girdle worn by the first three castes), and the sacrificial thread. (6)

For procuring food, he should, having restrained his senses, beg alms in the morning and evening. Rinsing his mouth carefully every day, he should not cleanse his teeth.* (7)

* I.e., He should not rub his teeth with wood, after having rinsed his mouth at the time of bathing.
He should renounce umbrella, shoes, scents and garlands; and must, also, abstain from dancing and singing, useless conversation and sexual intercourse. (8)

Having restrained his senses, he should abstain from riding on elephants and horses. Observing his vow, a Brahmachárín should perform his evening adoration. (9)

After the termination of the evening adoration, he should salute the feet of his preceptor and reverentially meditate upon his parents (i.e., adore them mentally). (10)

These three (i.e., the preceptor, the father and the mother) being lost (becoming displeased), all the Deities are displeased. Shorn of pride a Brahmachárín should abide by the commands of all these. (11)

Having studied either the one, two or the three Védas, from the preceptor, he should make the usual present to him, and then being self-controlled, [he should] live in his village. (12)

A Bráhmaṇa, whose tongue, generative organ, belly and hands, have all been controlled, should, resorting to Sannyásá (renunciation), lead a celibate life near the same preceptor, as long as he lives; in his absence; near his (preceptor’s) son; [in the latter’s absence,] near his disciple or in his family. Neither marriage nor [absolute] renunciation is laid down for the Naishthika. (13-14)

A Brahmacárin, of firm vows, who, carefully following this regulation, renounces his body, is not born again in this world. (15)

* A perpetual religious student, who continues with his spiritual preceptor even after the prescribed period, and vows life-long abstinence and chastity.
A Brahmacharin, who, being self-controlled and devoted to the service of his preceptor, moves about on this earth, acquires an auspicious learning, so difficult of attainment, and comes by its fruit (i.e., virtue, worldly profit, desire and emancipation) so easily attainable [by such a person]. (16)

CHAPTER IV.

[GA'RHAStYA, OR THE DOMESTIC MODE OF LIFE.]

After having completed his Vedic studies and being acquainted with the true import of Dharma-S'astras, a person should wed a maiden of a different family, having a brother, endued with auspicious marks, perfect limbs and a good character. That foremost of the twice-born must do so according to the most excellent rite of Brāhma. (1—2)

Various other forms of marriage, according to caste and order, have been spoken of. Having duly collected sacrificial fuels, the foremost of the twice-born, being all the while wide awake, should offer oblations [to the Fire] in the morning and evening. Thereupon [he] should daily bathe after having previously cleansed his teeth. (3—4)

Having got up from bed at dawn he should duly perform [all] the purifying operations. The mouth remaining stale (i.e., not washed) every day, a person loses control over his own self. (5)

Therefore one should eat (use) a piece of wood, dry or wet, for cleansing the teeth. Karanja,* Khadira, Kadamba, Kurava, Saptaparni, Prisniparni, Jāmva,

* Name of a tree used in medicinal preparations.
Apâmârga, Vilwa, Arka, Udumvara,—these are mentioned as the most suitable woods in the operation of tooth rubbing. Thus is described, in brief, the wood which should be used for rubbing the tooth. (6—8)

All thorny woods yield virtue; and milky ones, fame. It is said that the wood, for rubbing the tooth, should be of the measure of eight fingers. Or it should be of the size of a span, measured from the tip of the thumb to that of the forefinger. With such [a piece of wood], one should cleanse one's teeth. (9)

If the teeth are touched with a twig on the first day of a lunar fortnight, the fifteenth day of the dark fortnight, the fullmoon day, the sixth and the ninth lunar day, one's seven generations are consumed. (10)

On the interdicted days, the mouth should be rinsed with twelve handfuls of water instead of a twig. (11)

Having rinsed the mouth, as laid down in the Mantram, one should again rinse it. Then sprinkling one's own self with water, as described in the Mantram, one should throw palmfuls of water. (12)

By virtue of the boon conferred by Brahmâ, whose birth is not known, the Râkshasâs Mândeha fight every morning with the Sun. (13)

The handfuls of water, thrown by the Brâhmaṇâs and inspired with the mystic verse Gâyatrî, destroy all the Râkshasâs passing under the appellation of Mândeha. (14)

Thereupon protected by the Brâhmaṇâs, the Sun proceeds along with the Yogins headed by the great Marichi and Sanaka. (15)

Therefore one should not studiously neglect the morning and evening adorations. One, who neglects the same out of stupefaction, forsooth, goes to [the infernal region of] hell. (16)

Having rinsed one's mouth, sprinkled one's own self with water, according to the Mantram, and offered handfuls of water in honour of the Sun, one should perform the rite of circumambulation and then purify one's self by touching water. (17)

Even when the stars are visible, one should duly perform the first Sandhyā adoration and recite the Gāyatrī till the Sun is not seen. (18)

Then having duly performed the evening Sandhyā, even when the Sun remains visible, one should recite the Gāyatrī till the stars are not seen. (19)

Thereupon reaching the house and performing the Homa, a learned and sage person should think of measures for supporting those who depend on him. (20)

Thereupon, for the behoof of his disciples, he should conduct Vedic studies for a little while; then a good Brāhmaṇa should approach his king for business. (21)

Then repairing to a distant place, he should fetch Kuśa, flowers and sacrificial fuels. Then he should perform the midday adoration at a holy and charming place. (22)

I shall [now] describe, in brief, the regulations, destructive of sins, [of that form of bath] by bathing according to which, one is freed from all sins. (23)

Having brought, for bathing, earth, together with pure rice and sesame, one should then, with a careful mind, go to a river having profuse pure water. (24)

A river existing, one should not bathe in another water. One should not bathe in little water while there exists a profusion of it. (25)
The water of a river is the best. One should bathe in the river, standing against the current. In its absence, one should bathe in a tank or in other pools. (26)

Sprinkling a pure spot with water, one should place one's all clothes there. Then carefully washing one's own body, one should rub it with earth and water. (27)

Just before bathing, a learned person should rinse his mouth. Then entering into water, controlling his speech duly, and mentally thinking of Hari, he should immerse himself in thigh-deep water. (28)

Then returning to the bank and rinsing his mouth according to the Mantram, he should sprinkle his body with water [reciting] the Varuṇa-Mantram and the Pavamani Rik. (29)

Then having carefully sprinkled his own body, with the water taken by the tips of Kus'a-grass, [and reciting the Mantram,—] "Syona prithivi," the twice-born should rub it [his body] with earth [reciting the Mantram,—] "Idam Vishṇu." (30)

Then, when immersing in water again, he should meditate on the divine Nārāyaṇa. Then entering into water properly, he should recite [the Mantram,—] "Aghamarṣaṇam." (31)

Having bathed, he should offer, as usual, oblations, of water with rice and sesame, to the celestial saints and the departed manes; then pressing out water [from his cloth] and reaching the bank, being self-controlled, he should put on two pieces of white cloth and Uttariya (cloth to cover the body). He should not shake his hairs. (32—33)

A dark-blue or a blue cloth is not preferable. A learned person should always avoid a dirty cloth [and one] that does not emit a good smell. (34)
Thereupon a learned person should wash his feet with clay water. Then, again converting the right palm into the shape of a cow's ear, he should see the water inside, drink it thrice and rinse the mouth twice therewith. Then sprinkling his head and feet with water, he should touch his mouth with three fingers. (35—36)

With the thumb and nameless finger, he should touch the two eyes. Then being self-restrained, he should touch his head with five fingers. (37)

Having rinsed his mouth, according to this regulation, a pure-minded Brähmana, shorn of idleness, should, with Kus'ā in hands and his face directed towards the east or the north, perform the Prāṇāyāma thrice, and thereafter perform the sacrifice of the recitation of the Gāyatri, the mother of the Vēdās. (38—39)

There are three kinds of Japa-Yajña; understand their secret meaning. Vāchika, Upāms'ū and Mānasa are the three forms. (40)

Of these three forms of Yajña, each succeeding one is superior to the preceding one. (41)

What is performed by reciting the Mantram, the various parts and letters being distinctly sounded either high or low, is called Vāchika Japa-Yajña. (42)

That, in which the Mantrams are recited slowly, the lips quiver a little, and the sound becomes audible to a slight extent, is known as Upāms'ū-Japa. (43)

That, in which the words and letters [of the Mantram] are comprehensible by the intellect, [though the words and letters are not audible, and the meaning of the words is meditated on, is called Mānasa. (44)

Being daily lauded with the recitation, the Deities become propitiated. They being pleased, the sages acquire a large family. (45)
When the recitation is performed, the Rākshasās, Pis'āchās, and the dreadful huge serpents do not come near but fly away from a distance. (46)

Knowing the metre and the Rishi (saintly author), one should zealously recite the Mantrams. And knowing their meaning, a twice-born one should mentally recite the Gāyatrī, day and night. (47)

He,—who daily recites the Divine Gāyatrī, the highest [form of recitation] being a thousand times; the middling, a hundred times; and the lowest, ten times;—is not sullied by sin. (48)

Then offering, with upraised arms, handfuls of flowers to the Sun, he should recite the Sūkta,—Udutyan etc., and then Tatachakshu. (49)

Performing the rite of circumambulation and covering [his face] with hands, a twice-born one should bow unto the Sun and then propitiate the other Deities with the Tirtha-Water. (50)

Then pressing water out of the cloth with which he had bathed, he should rinse his mouth again. Bathing and making gift by a devout follower has been described here like that (i.e., they should be accompanied with the rinsing of mouth.) (51)

Seated on Kus'ā-grass, with Kus'ā-grass in hands and with his face directed towards the east, a person should reverentially perform Brahma-Yajña, according to the rites thereof. (52)

Thereupon having got up and placed his joined hands on his head, he should, reciting the Rik,—S'uchīshadi, offer Arghya of sesame, flowers and rice to the Sun. (53)

Thereupon having saluted the Sun-God he should again return to his house. And, going there, he should adore Vishnu, according to the rite laid down in the Purusha-Sûkta. (54)

Thereafter he should offer Vali (offerings of food) to the Vis'wadévás according to the rite thereof. A householder should wait for a guest till the hour of milching the cow. (55)

If a guest, not seen or known before, comes, he should, rising up, adore him with a welcome, offer of water and a seat. (56)

[On a guest] being welcomed, the Fires of a householder become gratified. On a seat being offered, the King of the Celestials becomes pleased. (57)

Water, for washing the feet, being offered, the departed manes attain to gratification which it is so difficult to secure. On food being offered, Prajâpati is pleased. (58)

Therefore, after the adoration of Vishnu, the guests should be daily worshipped by a householder with respect and according to his might. (59)

He should give unto the beggars and the mendicant Brahmachárins alms consisting of undedicated curry and rice. (60)

If a mendicant arrives at a house before food is offered to the Vis'wadévás, then keeping a part thereof for them, one should dismiss him by giving him alms. (61)

A mendicant, being fed, can remove the mischief done by the Vis'wadévás. But the Vis'wadévás can never remove the mischief done by the mendicants. (62)

Therefore when Yatins arrive at a house, one should respectfully offer them alms, for he should think without a shadow of doubt that Vishnu is himself a Yatin. (63)

After having fed well-dressed maidens, aged persons and children, a householder should then take his meal. (64)

With his face directed either towards the east or the north, abstaining entirely from speaking or controlling his speech, he should, with a delighted heart, salute the boiled rice in the beginning. (65)

Then offering oblations to the vital airs with different Mantrams, he should, being self-restrained, take sweet food. (66)

Then rinsing his mouth and remembering his Tutelary Deity, he should touch his belly. Then a wise person should spend his time in the study of history and the Purâṇas. (67)

Then going out, he should duly perform the evening adoration. Then performing the Homa and feeding the guests, he should take his meal in the night. (68)

Eating in the morning and evening has been sanctioned by the S'ruti for the twice-born. But they cannot take any intermediate meal. The rule for the Agni-hotrins is [to take meals only in] the evening. (69)

A Brähmana should teach his disciples but dismiss them on those days on which no religious studies are to be prosecuted. All the days mentioned in the Smritis and the Purâṇas [are to be accepted]. (70)

On the Mahánavami (the ninth day in the bright half of the month of A's'win, sacred to the worship of Durgâ), the twelfth day of the fortnight, Bharaṇi, the Parva-days (Fullmoon, and the last day of the dark fortnight, and the third day of the bright half of Vais'ákha, a Brähmana should not teach his disciples. (71)

On the seventh day of the fortnight in the month of Māgha, on Rathya Saptami, while rubbing oil, and at the time of bathing, one should avoid teaching. (72)
Seeing a dead body carried or placed on earth and hearing the sound of weeping in the evening, the foremost of the twice-born should not study [the Védás]. (73)

O ye the leading twice-born ones, charities must be made by a householder—the gift of gold, cow and earth. (74)

This is the essence of the duties of a householder described [by me]. He, who satisfies them with reverence, attains to the dignity of Brahma. (75)

By the favour of the Man-Lion, he acquires the most excellent knowledge. And, by it, a Bráhmaṇa attains emancipation, O ye twice-born ones. (76)

O ye Víprás, thus the eternal Code of Duties has been described, in brief by me, to you. If a householder carefully performs the duties laid down for the domestic mode of life, he becomes united with [the God] Hari. (77)

CHAPTER V.

[THE DUTIES OF THE VA'NAPRASTHA MODE OF LIFE.]

O ye great and most excellent Rishis, hear, I shall, hereafter, describe the duties of a Vánaprastha or a hermit. (1)

Having seen sons and grandsons and his hairs grow grey, a householder, consigning the care of his wife to his sons or with her, should enter into a forest. (2)

Having nails, hairs of the body and white skin covering the body, a hermit, living in a forest, should duly offer oblations to Fire. (3)
He should carefully daily offer oblations with paddy grown in the forest, unimpeachable rice growing without cultivation, leaves, roots and fruits. (4)

Having bathed thrice, he should practise austere penances. Either after a fortnight or a month, he should take his meals, cooking the food himself. (5)

Or he should take his meals at the fourth, eighth, or the sixth, period;* or he should sustain himself with air. (6)

Stationed in the midst of five fires in the summer, living without shelter in the rainy season and remaining inside the water in the dewy season, he should spend his time practising penances. (7)

That person of well-formed religious understanding, who performs these rites in order, shall, taking his own Fire, repair to the northern quarter. (8)

An ascetic, going to a forest, who; abstaining from speech, meditates on Brahman—who is beyond the ken of senses—till the destruction of his body, becomes glorified in the region of Brahmá. (9)

He,—who, living in a forest and being endued with mental abstraction and self-restraint, practises penances,—goes, freed from sins, purified and endued with a quiet mind, to the ancient, divine Purusha. (10)

* The fourth period is the evening of the second day, after fasting for a day; the eighth period is the evening of the fourth day, after fasting for three days; and so forth.
CHAPTER VI.

[THE DUTIES OF THE FOURTH ORDER, SANNYA'SA ]

I SHALL, hereafter, describe the most excellent fourth A's'rama or order, by following which with reverence, one is released from the fetters of worldly existence. (1)

Living in the Vánaprastha A's'rama as mentioned before and dissipating all his sins, a twice-born one should enter upon the fourth order according to the rules of Sannyása (renunciation). (2)

Having carefully made gifts unto the departed manes, the celestials and the human beings, performed S'rāddha for the departed manes and the human relations and performed the funeral rites of his own self, and taking the Sacred Fire with his own self, one, knowing the Mantram, should again enter upon the life of mendicancy. (3—4)

Since then he should desist from cherishing attachment for sons and conversing with them. He should give assurance of safety unto his kinsmen and all creatures. (5)

A triple staff, made of bamboo, of equal knots, measuring four fingers and covered with the down of a black calf, has been highly spoken of by the ascetics for physical and mental purification. A small strip of cloth [is allowed] for covering the body and a wallet for protection against cold. (6—7)

He should also take a pair of sandals and must not collect any thing else. These all, that have been described, are always his marks. (8)

Collecting all these, leading a life of renunciation and going to a most excellent shrine, [he should] bathe there and rinse his mouth with water inspired with the Mantrams. (9)

Then offering oblations to the Deities, he should bow unto the Sun according to the Mantram. Then with his face directed towards the east and abstaining from speech, he should perform the pránáyáma thrice. (10)

Having recited the Gáyatrí according to his might, he should meditate on the Para-Brahman. And, for supporting his own self, he should daily go out for receiving alms. (11)

Having arrived in the evening at the residence of the Bráhmanás, he should, with his right hand, beg for a mouthful of food. (12)

Having taken up the bowl with his left hand, he should collect alms with his right one. He should receive alms so long as food, capable of gratifying him, is not secured. (13)

Then returning, the self-controlled [mendicant] should place the bowl elsewhere. Then being self-controlled, he should take rice, containing all sorts of curries with four fingers and keep it in another vessel. Then sprinkling it with water and offering it to the elemental Deities headed by the Sun, the Yatin should take his meal either in two vessels or in one. He should never eat from a vessel made of fig-leaves, or one made of Kumbhi, Tuinduka, Kovidára and Kadamva. The Yatins, who eat from vessels made of belmetal, are all described as being covered with dirt. (14—17)

The Yatins, [who take their meals from a belmetal vessel], are visited by the sins of the householder, who cooks food in a belmetal vessel, as well as of all those [persons] who make others eat from the same. (18)
A Yatin should daily wash the vessel, with Mantrams, in which he takes his meal. Like the chámasa-vessel (ladle), of sacrifice that vessel is never sullied. (19)

Thereupon having rinsed his mouth and performed deep meditation, he should adore the Sun. A sage man should then spend his day in recitation, meditation, and the study of history. (20)

Then performing the evening adoration, he should spend the night in a temple and meditate on the eternal Brahman in the lotus of his heart. (21)

If [a Sannyásin] be thus religiously bent, be of a quiescent soul, impartial unto all creatures and self-restrained, he attains to the highest station from which he does not return. (22)

The holder of the triple staff,—who, withholding the senses from the external objects, gradually acts thus,—attains to the most exalted station of Vishnu, freed from the fetters of worldly existence. (23)

CHAPTER VII.

[ESSENCE OF YOGA.]

I HAVE described the duties of various Varṇas and A’s’rāmas, by following which men attain to emancipation and the celestial region. (1)

I shall now describe, in brief, the most essential and excellent Yoga-Sástra by listening to which, persons, desirous of acquiring emancipation, attain to it. (2)

All the sins are dissipated by the practice of Yoga. Therefore, resorting to Yoga and performing all religious rites, one should daily perform meditation. (3)

Having brought first the mind, difficult of being restrained, under control, by dhāraṇā (steady abstraction), one should control one's speech by prāṇāyāma; and the senses, by withholding them from their objects. (4)

Considering the individual soul as identical with the Great Soul, he should meditate on Brahman; that is all knowledge, freed from diseases, subtler than the subtle and described as the stay of the universe. (5)

Seated in a solitary place with a concentrated mind, he should, till death, meditate on the ātman, that is situated both in the mind and the external world, and effulgent like gold. (6)

He should think,—"I am that which is the heart of all creatures, which is situated in the hearts of all and which is worthy of being known by all." (7)

So long one enjoys the pleasure of seeing the ātman, he should not act against the religious practices mentioned in the S'ruti and the Smrīti (such as penances, meditation, etc.). (8)

As a car without a horse and a horse without a charioteer [are of no use], so is penance and learning. They become useful when [they are] united. (9)

As food united with sweet juice, and sweet juice united with food, [are useful]; as birds, with two wings, fly in the sky; so one, by jñāna (knowledge) and karma (action), attains to the eternal Brahman. A Brāhmaṇa—endued with learning and penance and given to the practice of yoga—having cast off the two bodies (the material and the subtle), becomes freed from fetters. There is no destruction of the soul when the material body is destroyed. (10—12)

O ye foremost of the twice-born ones, all the divisions of castes and orders and their duties have been described unto you, in brief, by me. (13)
Hearing of religious duties, which yield, as fruits, the celestial region and emancipation, the ascetics, saluted the Rishi, and, delighted, repaired to their respective habitations. (14)

MA'RKANDEYA said:

Having studied this Religious Code, in full, emanating from the mouth of Hārīta, he, who follows its religious teachings, comes by the most excellent state. (15)

By acting against the duties laid down for the Brāhmaṇās, those laid down for the Kshatriyās (sprung from the arms of Brahmā), those laid down for the Vais'yās (thigh-begotten), and those laid down for the S'údrās (foot-sprung), one is immediately degraded from his caste. Every one should perform the duty laid down for him (i.e., for his caste). The twice-born should, therefore, carefully satisfy their respective duties. (16—17)

Thus, O king, there are four Varnās, and four A's'ramas. Those, who abide by their own duties, come by the most excellent condition. (18)

The slayer of Madhu is not so much pleased with any other work, as the Man-Lion is gratified with the discharge of their respective duties by men. (19)

Therefore performing one's own duty in proper time and vigilantly, a person acquires habituation with the thousand-eyed King of the Celestials and the Man-Lion (Vishnu). (20)

By the power of the spirit of disassociation sprung in him, a Yogin, always performing religious rites, should meditate on Para-Brahman. Then casting off his body, he shall attain to the eternal and the ever-blissful station of Vishnu, which is without beginning or end. (21)

CHAPTER I.

[GENERAL DUTIES.]

HAVING bowed unto the ascetic Us'ana's son, born in the race of Bhrigu, the hermits, headed by S'ounaka, asked of him [an account of] the divisions of all the Religious Codes. (1)

"Hear ye all attentively, I shall rehearse [the Religious Code]—the instrument of virtue, worldly profit, pleasure and emancipation, and the destroyer of sins—which formerly Us'ana conversant with the secrets of the science of religion, [described] in the auditory of the Rishis."

Then saluting his father Us'ana born in the family of Bhrigu, he began to discourse on religious duties. (2—3)

Being invested with the sacred thread in the eighth year, either counting from the period of conception or from the [date of] birth, according to the regulation laid down in one's own Family Code of Rites, the foremost of the twice-born should study the Védás. (4)

A religious student should carry a staff, put on a girdle and the skin of a black antelope, live on what is got by begging, do good unto his preceptor and look at the preceptor's face. (5)

Formerly, cotton-made sacred thread was instituted by Brahmā. Strings of three threads are for the Brāhmaṇás. A hempen cord [is for a Kshatriya]; and a woolen one, [for a Vais'ya]. (6)

A twice-born one should always wear the sacred thread and tie up the tuft of hair on his crown. He should put on a most excellent white piece of cotton or silk cloth without any hole, but quite different from the one used before. (7)

The sacred skin of a black antelope has been described as the cloth for covering the upper part of the body. In its absence the skin of a Kuru-deer is allowed to be used. (8)

The sacred thread should extend from the left shoulder to the bottom of the right arm. One should always wear the sacred thread. Nivita is the sacred thread lying round the neck [and hanging down like a garland]. (9)

O ye twice-born ones, the sacred thread, worn over the right shoulder and passing under the left arm, is called Práchinavitā. It should be worn at the rite for the departed manes. (10)

In a room where the Sacred Fire is kept, in a cowpen, [while offering] oblations to the Fire, [while making] recitations, while feeding after Vedic studies, near the Bráhmaṇás, while the preceptor makes his adoration and at the two periods of junction, one should always wear the sacred thread. This is the eternal regulation. (11—12)

The triple girdle of a Bráhmaṇa should be made of the Muñja-grass, have three equal folds, and be plain. Muñja not being available, Kus'ā-grass is [next] spoken of, making either one-, or three-, folds. (13)

A twice-born one should carry a staff, measuring up to the tips of hairs in length, made of the Bel, the Palāšha, the sacrificial fig, or of the Udumvara wood. (14)

Being self-restrained, a twice-born one should make the Sandhyá or adoration, [both] in the morning and evening. He should never fail, out of lustful desire, avarice, fear or stupefaction. (15)

Thereupon, with a delighted mind, he should adore the Sacred Fire, [both] in the morning and evening. Having bathed, he should offer oblations to the Deities, Rishis and all the classes of Pitris. (16)

He should, then, perform the adoration of the Deities with flowers, leaves and water. Saying with proper humility,—"I, such and such person, salute thee," he should, every day, religiously bow unto his elders. [By this,] one acquires long life, health, wealth and prosperity. (17–18)

If another Bráhmaṇa salutes [him], he [the other Bráhmaṇa] should be [greeted in return], saying,—"Be long-lived, O gentle one." These words should be uttered after addressing him by his name. (19)

A Bráhmaṇa, who does not know how to return a salutation, on being saluted [by another], should never be bowed unto by a learned person. He is like a Sūdra. (20)

One should, first of all, bow unto him from whom one acquires temporal, Vedic, and spiritual knowledge. (22)

One should not [at the time of saluting] touch water, food acquired by begging, flowers, [and] sacrificial fuels, as also other articles that may have been dedicated to a Deity. (23)

The preceptor, the father, the eldest brother, or the king, after approaching him, shall accost a Bráhmaṇa of his well-being; a Kshatriya, of his health; a Vais'ya, of peace; and a Sūdra, of freedom from diseases. A maternal uncle, the father-in-law, the eldest brother, the maternal grandfather, the paternal grandfather, the head of the castes and a paternal uncle, are known as the seven Pitris or fathers. (24—25)

The mother, the maternal grandmother, the preceptor’s wife, paternal and maternal aunts, the mother-in-law, the paternal grandmother and the eldest sister, are to be known as elderly women. (26)

All of them are spoken of as the female and male elders: one should follow them with mind, words and deeds. (27)

Seeing an elderly person, one should get up and salute him or her with folded palms. One should not sit with the elders, nor should one quarrel with them on any account. (28)

Even for preserving his own life, one should not injure or speak ill of elderly persons. Even when endued with other accomplishments, a person, injuring elders, goes downwards. (29)

Of all elderly persons, five are to be particularly adored, viz., the father, the mother, the spiritual guide, the teacher and the priest; of them the first three are the foremost; and of them a mother is to be particularly adored. (30)

One who gives habitation even for a day, one who gives instructions even for a moment, the eldest brother and the protector [or the husband in case of a woman], are the five Gurus, (elderly persons worthy of respect). (31)

These five should be adored by one, seeking one’s own well-being, with one’s best personal exertion or even with the renunciation of one’s own life. (32)
With disinterestedness and renouncing all, a son should, devotedly, serve them both, so long as the father and the mother live. (33)

The father and the mother being pleased with their son's accomplishments, the son, by this deed, attains to [the fruition of] all [his] works. (34)

There is no Deity equal to mother; there is no Guru (elder) equal to father; there exists no return of their good offices. (35)

One should—by deeds, thoughts and words—do unto them what they like. Without being commanded by them, one should not perform any religious rite, excluding those which yield emancipation and the daily and obligatory rites. [To serve the parents] is laid down as the cream of religion, yielding delightful fruits in the next world. (36—37)

With his permission, taking leave of the preceptor who properly instructs him about good conduct, makes a disciple enjoy the fruits of his learning [in this world], as well as in the celestial region after death. (38)

The silly wight, who disrespectfully treats his eldest brother who is like unto his father, goes, by that sin, into hell. (39)

[One should keep an eye on] the good services and honour of a giver in this world. It is admitted that a protector should be adored by all men with mental concentration. (40)

The most exalted regions are for those men who renounce their own lives for procuring food for their protector. The divine Bhrigu has said so. (41)

One, younger in years, should get up [on seeing] maternal uncles, paternal uncles, father-in-law, priests and preceptors, and say,—"I am here." (42)
A person, younger in years, if he is initiated in a sacrifice, must not be called by name. A person, conversant with religious laws, should address him with the word,—"Bhos." (43)

\[\text{Brāhmaṇās, Kṣatriyās and others, seeking their prosperity, should respectfully bow down their heads unto [their elders]. This destroys all sins. (44)}\]

Even if they are endued with knowledge, good works and other accomplishments, and be sufficiently well-read in the Ś'ruti, the Kṣatriyās and other castes are never to be saluted by the Brāhmaṇās. (45)

The rule is that a Brāhmaṇa should bless all the other castes and a younger person of his own caste, and salute the elderly persons [of his own caste]. (46)

Fire is adorable unto the twice-born; a Brāhmaṇa, unto all the castes; the husband also is adorable unto wives, and a guest is adorable unto all. (47)

[He is to be reverenced,] who has learning, [pious] action, age, friend and wealth; these five are called objects of honour, each preceding one being more important [than the succeeding one]. (48)

He is a qualified person amongst the three Varṇas, who [at least] possesses one of these five [accomplishments]. Even if he happens to be inferior in any other respect, he is worthy of homage. (49)

[Respect should be offered\(^*\)] unto the Brāhmaṇās, who help in the offering of piṇḍas, unto the womankind, the king, his eye (\textit{i.e.,} his emissary), aged persons, those, pressed down by a heavy load, the diseased and the weak. (50)

\(^*\) The sense of the Text is, that if one of the persons, described therein, appears, one should give him way out of respect.
Having collected daily, in a devout spirit, alms from the houses of good people, one should dedicate them to the preceptor, and, then, with his permission, take one's meal, abstaining [all the while] from speech. (51)

A Brāhmaṇa, who has been invested with the sacred thread, should beg alms, using before [the word] Bhavat; a Kṣatriya [should use the word] Bhavat in the middle; a Vais'ya [should use the word] Bhavat in the end.* (52)

One should first beg alms from his mother, sister, or mother's sister, and should approach such [a woman] as does not insult him. (53)

It is said that one may receive alms from all of his own caste or from all castes; but he should shun the outcastes. (54)

A Brahmacārin should daily, in a devout spirit, collect alms from those who are given to the study of the Vēdās, the celebration of sacrifices, and be intent upon the performance of his own works (i.e., those laid down for their respective castes and orders). (55)

One should not beg alms from the family of his preceptor, from his kinsmen and from relatives made by marriage. In the absence of a house [from which alms may be collected], every preceding party should, in order, be avoided.† (56)

Persons, mentioned before, being not available, one, controlling his ownself and speech and without looking

* This refers to the various forms of expressions used while begging alms. A Brāhmaṇa should say,—"Bhavati bhikṣāṁ déhi;" a Kṣatriya should say,—"Bhikṣāṁ bhavati déhi;" and a Vais'ya,—"Bhikṣāṁ déhi bhavati."

† The meaning is, that if there is not any other family available, one could receive alms from relations by marriage; in their absence, from his own kinsmen; and in their absence, from the preceptor's family.
towards any direction, should approach every one of the village. (57)

Having collected food by begging, he should, every day with [the preceptor's] permission, devoutly, attentively and abstaining from speech, take a portion capable of keeping him alive. (58)

A Brahmacárin should daily support himself with food acquired by begging and suppress his passions. It is said in the Smriti that a Brahmacárin's supporting himself with alms is tantamount to fasting. (59)

He should daily adore his food and take it without speaking ill of it; on seeing it, he should be delighted and happy, and should welcome it with laudation. (60)

Taking too much or bad food is destructive of health, longevity, attainment of the celestial region and virtue, and is condemned by the community. Therefore, it should be avoided. (61)

With his face directed towards the east or the south, he should daily take his meals, according to the eternal regulation. But he should never eat facing the north. (62)

Having washed his hands and feet and been seated in a purified place, he should rinse his mouth twice after it. (63)

Having drawn a circular figure first, he should place the vessel on it, and eat till the recitation of the formulæ amritopídhán, etc., at the end of his meal. He should abstain from speech [all the while]. (64)
CHAPTER II.

[RULES FOR RINSING THE MOUTH AND KEEPING THE BODY PURE.]

After eating, drinking, bathing, walking, touching that part of a lip where there is no hair, changing clothes, passing semen, urine and excreta, conversing with degraded castes, at the commencement of study, after coughing or heavy sighing, after going to a cremation ground or to a crossing of many roads, and at the two Sandhyás or adorations, the foremost of the twice-born ones should rinse his mouth again. (1—3)

After conversing with a Chandála or a Mlechchha, after talking with abandoned women or with Súdrás, after touching an abandoned man or leavings of food, after shedding tears, after speaking an untruth, after taking meals at the two Sandhyás, after bathing, drinking or touching urine and excreta, one should rinse his mouth again, even if he has rinsed it once. Elsewhere [he should] rinse [it] once only. [Water for rinsing the mouth not being available, one, being self-restrained, can attain purification] by touching fire, kine or the right ear. (4—6)

By touching men, stones, or tying again Nivi,* one should touch pure water, grass or earth. By touch- ing one’s own hair or washing water, one should, seated at ease with his face directed towards the east or the north, [rinse his mouth] with pure water, which is neither hot, nor frothy nor sullied. (7—8)

* A cloth worn round a woman’s waist, or more properly the ends of the cloth tied into a knot in front.
By keeping the head or the ear covered, having the Káchhá* or the S’ikhá† untied, or by not washing the feet, one remains impure, even if he has rinsed his mouth. (9)

A learned man should never rinse his mouth with his shoes or with his headgear on, or while stationed in water. [Nor should he do it] with rain water, or with water mixed with clarified butter or while standing. (10)

[He should not rinse his mouth] with water placed in one palm, [and should rinse it] again [with water brought by all castes], excepting a S’údra. [He should not rinse it while] seated, with his sandals on, or keeping his hand outside the knee. (11)

He should not talk, laugh, cast his looks here and there, nor bend his body [while rinsing his mouth.] [He should not rinse his mouth] without seeing water or with water that is hot or frothy. (12)

[Nor should he do it] with water served by the hands of a S’údra or of a dirty person, or with alkaline water, [or with water] taken up by the fingers. He should not make any sound and must be self-centered [at the time of his rinsing]. (13)

[Nor should he do it] with discoloured and distasteful water, or with the water passing through a crevice or [through the pores] of animals (such as drops of perspiration), and at a time beyond the appointed hour. (14)

A Brāhmaṇa is purified by water going to his heart, a Kshatriya by a drop [going to his throat], a Vais’ya by that entering into his mouth, while a S’údra and a woman by merely touching [the water with lips]. (15)

* The hem of the lower garment tucked into the waistband.
† A lock of hair on the crown of the head.
Brahmaṇ is said [to reside] in the line at the root of the thumb. The space between the thumb and the forefinger, is the most excellent Tirtham (holy place) for the departed manes. (16)

The base of the smallest finger is called [the holy place] for Prajāpati or the Kāya-Tirtham. The tops of all the fingers are described as [forming the holy place] for the Deities; and the roots, for the Rishis. [These are] Daiva-, and A'ṛsha-, Tirthams. The middle part is described as that of Agni. It is also [called] Soumika (i.e., belonging to Soma or the Moon). Knowing all these holy places, one is not possessed by stupefaction. (17–18)

A Brāhmaṇa should daily rinse his mouth with the Brahma-, or with the Kāya-, or with the Daiva-, Tirtham, but not with the Pāṭi-[Tirtham], O ye twice-born ones.* (19)

It is laid down in the Smṛiti that a Brāhmaṇa, being self-restrained, should first drink water thrice. Closing the lips of the mouth, he should touch it with the root of the thumb. (20)

Then with the thumb and the nameless finger, he should touch the two eyes. Then with the thumb and forefinger, he should touch the tip of the nose. (21)

With the smallest finger and the thumb, he should touch the two ears. With them all (i.e., all the fingers) or with the palm, he should touch the breast. (22)

Similarly he should touch the head with the thumb, [once] or twice. He should sip water thrice, the Deities are gratified by this [method]. (23)

* These are described as holy places, and a Brāhmaṇa should drink water at the time of the āchamanam or rinsing, with these parts of the fingers.
We have heard that Brahmā, Vishnu and Mahes'wara become pleased [with him who performs āchamanam]. The Ganges and the Yamunā are pleased with sprinkling [the lips of water]. (24)

The Sun and the Moon are pleased with touching the two eyes; and the A'swins are gratified with touching the tip of the nose. (25)

When the two ears are touched similarly, the Wind and the Fire become pleased; and all the Deities become gratified when the breast is touched. (26)

The Purusha (ātman) becomes pleased when the head is touched. The drops that fall from the mouth on the limbs, do not make leavings [of a drink]. (27)

When [any particle of food,] fixed to a tooth, drops down at the touch of the tongue, the person remains impure [so long he does not rinse his mouth]. The drops of water, which fall at the feet [of a person offering water] to another for performing āchamanam (rinsing), are known as equal to [water] placed on a [pure] spot. By them, one does not become sullied. There is no impurity in Madhuparka,* Soma,† in chewing betel-leaves, fruits, roots and the sugarcane rod. Us'anā has said so. If while moving about in a place of eating and drinking, a Brāhmaṇa touches any leavings, he should keep on the ground [all the articles in his hands], rinse his mouth and sprinkle those articles with water. If while carrying metallic vessels [for adoration], he touches any leavings, he should rinse his mouth without placing those articles on earth and shall thereby attain purification. Similarly one should do on touching [any leavings, while carrying clothes]: there

* A respectful offering of five ingredients, such as honey, etc.
† The juice of the Moon-Plant.
being no difference between clothes [and metallic vessels]. (28—32)

In the night, when there is fear of thieves and tigers, on the way, if one passes urine and excreta without washing himself with water, [he does not become impure], nor the article in his hand becomes sullied. (33)

Placing his sacrificial thread on his right ear and facing the north, one should pass urine and excreta. In the night, he should face the south. (34)

Covering the ground with [pieces of] wood, leaves, clods of earth, or grass and bending his head low, one should pass urine and excreta there. (35)

One should not pass urine or excreta under a shade, in a well, in a river, in a cowpen, on a road, on a sacrificial ground, in water, fire, ashes or on the cremation ground. (36)

[One should not pass urine or excreta] on cowdung, on a foundation, in a cowshed, on a place covered with green grass; nor while standing, nor being naked, nor on the summit of a mountain. (37)

[Nor one should] do so in a dilapidated temple, or on an anthill, or in holes containing living animals, or while walking. (38)

[One should not do so] on husk, charcoal and skull, as well as on a public road, on a field of cultivation, in a hole, in water and at the crossing of four roads. (39)

[One should never ease oneself] near a garden, on a barren land, on another's excreta, with the shoes on, with an umbrella overhead, or having the atmospheric region in view. (40)

[One should not do so] before women, elderly persons, Brāhmaṇas and kine, or before [the image of a] Deity, a temple and a water. (41)
[One should not do so] casting his looks on a river or on luminous bodies, or facing them, or in an open space or looking towards the Sun, Fire or the Moon. (42)

Having brought [a clod of] earth, with it and pure water [already] brought, one should zealously wash oneself for purification till the bad smell is entirely removed. (43)

One should not bring earth filled profusely with the dust of a Bráhmaṇa's [feet], nor from clay, nor from a road, nor from a barren ground, nor from what has been left by another person after purifying oneself. (44)

What one drinks, by inspiring it with Mantrams and reciting all the letters of the Praṇava, Gáyatrí, and the Vyárhriti, is called Mantráchamanam.* (46)

Thus by Gáyatryáchaman,† Srútyáchamanam‡ is described. (47)

CHAPTER III.

[LIFE AND CONDUCT OF A BRAHMACHÁ'RIN, OR A RELIGIOUS STUDENT.]

Having thus purified his own body and restrained [the operation of] the body and others (speech, senses, etc.,) and casting his looks at the preceptor's face, [a religious student] should attentively prosecute his studies. (1)

Always keeping [the right hand] uplifted, performing the Sandhyá-adorations and observing good conduct,

† The same as above. Gáyatrí is the most sacred Vedic Mantram.

[and] when ordered by his preceptor with the saying,—'Sit,' should he sit before him. (2)

While accepting the order [of his preceptor] or conversing with him, he should not lie down on his bed, be seated, eat and stand with his face against him (i.e., the preceptor). (3)

Near the preceptor, [a disciple's] bed and seat should always be lower [than the preceptor's]. He should not take his seat of his own accord at a place which is within the range of his preceptor's vision. (4)

He should not, even in his absence, take merely the name of his preceptor.* Nor should he imitate his (preceptor's) movements and speech. (5)

Where any accusation of the preceptor, real or false, takes place, [the disciple] should close his ears [with the fingers]; or he should leave that place and go elsewhere. (6)

He should not adore him (preceptor) living at a distance, nor being irate, nor near women. He should not cut words with him; nor should he remain seated in his presence. (7)

He should daily bring pitchers full of water, Kus'a, flowers, and sacrificial fuels, and should daily wash his limbs and paste them with earth. (8)

He should never go over the flowers used by him, or his (preceptor's) bed, sandals, shoes, seat and shadow. (9)

Having received wood for rubbing the tooth, he should not dedicate it to him. He should never go [anywhere] without obtaining leave from him; nor should he be engaged in a work calculated to incur his displeasure or do him any harm. (10)

* While taking the name of his preceptor, a disciple should always use such epithets as āchārya, upādhyāya, etc.
Near him, he should never place his feet, and avoid yawning, laughing, sneezing and using an upper garment. (11)

He should always avoid cracking fingers in his presence. He should study at the appointed hour till the preceptor does not draw his mind [from teaching]. (12)

He should never sit on [his preceptor's] seat, bed and conveyance. He should run after him when going quickly, and follow him when going [slowly]. (13)

He is allowed to sit with his preceptor on an elephant, on a camel, on a conveyance [drawn by bullocks], in a royal palace, on a rock, on a chariot, on a seat made of stone, or on one made of a big piece of wood. (14)

He should always have control over his senses and mind, be shorn of anger and pure, and should always give utterance to sweet and beneficial words. (15)

He should studiously avoid scented garlands, [sweet] juice, maidens, the destruction of small animals, smearing the body with oil, collyrium, shoes, the holding of umbrella, lustful desires, anger, fear, sleep (i.e., too much sleeping), singing [bad songs], playing on musical instruments, dancing, gambling, detracting other people, looking at and conversing with women, injuring other people and wickedness. With a delighted mind he should bring pitchers full of water, flowers, cowdung, earth and Kus'a as much as is necessary for his own use. He should daily collect food [which a Brahma-chārin may take], except salt and what is stale. (16—19)

He should always be impartial, have no attachment for singing, etc., should not see his face in a mirror, should not rub his teeth, should not converse with notorious impure persons, women and S'údrás, and should not take the residue of his preceptor’s food willingly for medicinal purposes. (20—21)

He should never take such a bath as would remove the filth of his body,* and should not, without being permitted by his preceptor, salute his own elders. (22)

He should similarly behave towards those of his elders who confer learning, and towards those who are born of the same stock, who suppress irreligion and deliver wholesome instructions. (23)

Towards persons most prominent [in education and piety], preceptor’s wives, sons and kinsmen,—he should daily so behave himself as he does towards his preceptor. (24)

Whether a disciple be younger in years or of the same age [with him], the son of the preceptor teaching him, deserves respect, like unto the preceptor himself, in all sacrificial rites. (25)

He should not besmear the body of the preceptor’s son with turmeric, make him bathe, take the leavings of his food and wash his feet. (26)

All the wives of the preceptor should be adored like the preceptor himself. All his other caste-wives should be reverenced with salutation and rising up. (27)

Rubbing oil [on the person], bathing, cleansing with perfumes the body, and decorating the hairs, of the preceptor’s wife should never be done. (28)

The youthful wife of the preceptor should never be saluted by the feet. [The disciple] should salute her

* The Author here means that a religious student should not be overzealous in bathing so as to beautify his person. Students should not spend too much of their time in bathing in order to look handsome. They should have no eye on personal charms.
[placing his head on the ground] and saying,—"I am such and such a person." (29)

Remembering always [the tenets of] religion, a Vipra (religious student) should touch the feet and salute the wives, of the preceptor. (30)

The mother's sister, maternal uncle's wife, mother-in-law, father's sister, and the wives of all the elders, should be adored like unto the preceptor's wife. (31)

The wife of an elder brother, those of kinsmen and relatives, mother's sisters and father's sisters, and elder sisters, should be saluted by touching the feet. (32)

One should treat them all like his mother, but the latter is superior to them all. The preceptor should duly instruct the disciple,—living for a year [in his house], behaving himself in the [aforesaid] manner, [who is] intelligent and always doing good unto all,—in the Vedas, Dharma-Sūtras, and the Purāṇas, and [impart him] the knowledge of the Tattwās (principles). (33—34)

The preceptor removes the sins of his disciple within a year. An A'chārya's son, one who wishes to hear attentively, one who has given knowledge [in any other subject], a virtuous person, a person pure [in body and mind], a relative, one who is capable of understanding the scriptures, one who gives away money, a good man and a kinsman,—these ten should be taught according to the rules of religious teaching. A Kshatriya, [who is] grateful, shorn of malice, intelligent and always doing good; a Vais'ya, endued with similar accomplishments; a grateful Brāhmaṇa, a non-injuring Brāhmaṇa, an intelligent Brāhmaṇa and a Brāhmaṇa, doing good unto all,—these six should [also] be taught by the leading twice-born ones. Even though it be quite contrary to the established rules [of religious instruction], when a Vipra, invested with the sacred thread by another, comes, [he should be taught.] Instruction in the Védas should be given to these only, and not to any one else; so it is said. (35—37)

Having rinsed his mouth, controlled his mind, and with his face directed towards the north, [a student] should daily study. He should look towards the face of his preceptor and touch his feet [before commencing the study]. (38)

[When the preceptor] would say,—Adhishyabho (Oh, study), [the student should begin his study; and when he would say,—] Viramostu (stop), [he should close it.] Seated on a Kus'á-seat with their tops facing the east, being purified by holding the Kus'á-reed [in his hand] and first performing the Prāṇāyāma thrice, he should recite Om. At the close of the study, a twice-born Brāhmaṇa should also duly recite the Pranava. (39—40)

Seated with folded palms, he should daily study [the Védas]. The Vēda is the eternal eye of all persons. (41)

He should duly study [the Védas] every day; or else he will fall off from the dignity of a Brāhmaṇa. He, who daily reads the Ríc, propitiates the Deities with the oblations of thickened milk. (42)

The Deities, also, gratified, please him by granting him all desired-for articles. He, who always studies the Yajush, propitiates the Deities with curd. (43)

He, who daily studies the Sáman, propitiates the Deities with the oblations of clarified butter. The Deities are also propitiated by the daily study of Āngirasa's Atharvan. (44)

The Deities are also gratified by the study of the Dharma-S'ástras, Āngas (auxiliary subjects of the "Védas, such as, Grammar, Astronomy, etc.), Puráṇas and Mimámsá. [If unable to read any of these,] he should, daily, with a concentrated mind and following the prescribed rules, study the Gáyatrí, either near water or going into a forest. A thousand times form the highest recitation of the divine [Gáyatrí]; a hundred times, the middling; and ten times, the lowest. He should daily recite the Gáyatrí. It is laid down that recitation must be made thrice [in a day.] The Lord [Brahmá], weighing, in a balance, the Gáyatrí and the Védas, [placed] the four Védas on one [scale], and the Gáyatrí on the other. First reciting Om, he should then [recite] the Vyáhrítis (Bhúr, Bhuvaḥ, Swah). He should then attentively study the Gáyatrí. [One] becomes possessed of great prosperity [by the study of the Gáyatrí]. [The preceptor] with his understanding (i.e., mind) fixed on the Gáyatrí, should teach [his disciples]. (45—49)

In the former Kalpa, were produced the three Mahá-Vyáhrítis, named Bhúr, Bhuvaḥ and Swah, destructive of all inauspiciousness. (50)

The three Vyáhrítis [represent] Pradhána (Prakriti or Nature), Purusha (the soul), and Kála (time), or Brahmá, Vishnu and Mahes'wara, or Sattva, Rajas and Tamas, or Present, Future and Past. (51)

Om is Para-Brahman and the Gáyatrí is eternal. This Mantram (namely the Gáyatrí) has been described as the means of witnessing the Maha-Yoga, (great union). (52)

The Brahmachárin, who, understanding its meaning daily reads the Gáyatrí, the mother of the Védas, comes by the most excellent condition. (53)

Of all (Mantrams) to be recited, there is none superior to the Gāyatrī. It has been described, in the Smriti-S'āstra, as the [means of the acquisition of the] knowledge of the Real. O ye, leading twice-born ones, the commencement [of Vedic study] must take place on the Full-Moon day either of the months of A'shāda, S'āvana, or Bhādra. Going away from a village or a city, a Brahmachārin, being self-controlled, should study [the Vēdas] for four-months-and-a-half in a holy place. Under the constellation of Pushyā, the twice-born ones should perform the dedicatory rite of the Vēdas. (54—56)

[Or, he should do it] in the first part of the first day of the month of Māgha. After this, the twice-born ones should study the Vēdas in the light fortnight. (57)

In the dark fortnight, a person should study the Vedāṅgas and the Purāṇas. Both the teacher and the pupil should carefully avoid the [following] periods, when no Vedic studies should be prosecuted:— viz., the night when a roaring wind blows, the day when a dusty wind blows, when a down-pour of rain takes place accompanied with the flashing of lightning and roaring of clouds, and when huge fire-brands drop down. Prajāpati has laid down these periods as being unworthy of Vedic (studies). (58—60)

When one shall see all these (thunder, lightning, etc.) rise in the morning and evening when the Sacred Fire is lighted up, he should not study the Vēdas; and in other seasons, except the rainy, on seeing a cloud.* (61)

Appearance of a portentous sound in the sky, earth-

* This means that in the rainy season when thunder and lightning appear in the morning and evening when the Sacred Fire is lighted, no study should be prosecuted. It may be done at any other time in the rainy season, even if these inauspicious signs appear.
quake and the fall of luminous bodies, form, also the periods when religious study should not be prosecuted even in the rainy season. (62)

In any other season, except the rainy, if the roaring of thunder and cloud appear in the morning and evening when the Sacred Fire is lighted up, the study should be stopped at once. So the Muni has said. (63)

Those, who wish for cleverness in actions, should never prosecute [religious] studies in villages or cities. And every day [the study must be stopped] when any bad smell [comes in]. (64)

No study [is allowed] in a village inhabited by low-caste people,* near an irreligious person, when cries are heard and where there is a multitude of men. (65)

In water, in the middle of the night, when one passes urine and excreta, while touching the leavings of food and after eating articles offered at a S'rāddha,† a twice-born one should not even think [of the Vēdas] with the mind. (66)

Having accepted an invitation for the Ekoddhista-S'rāddha,‡ on the birth of the king's son and on solar and lunar eclipses, a learned Brāhmaṇa should not study the Vēdas for three days. (67)

As long as the scent and paste, dedicated at the Ekoddhista (S'rāddha) exist on the person of a learned Brāhmaṇa, he should not study the Vēdas. (68)

Lying down, seated by placing the soles of the feet on the seat, sitting with a cloth girt round the legs and

* Another reading is antargate s'ave, i.e., where there is a dead body.
† The meaning is that after taking food offered at a S'rāddha one should not even think of the Vēdas for full twenty-four hours from that time.
‡ A funeral rite performed for a definite individual deceased.
knees, taking fish or meat, or food rendered impure by birth or death, a twice-born one should not study [the Védas]. (69)

On a day covered with mist, on hearing the sound of an arrow, at the two Sandhyás, on the last day of the dark fortnight, on the fourteenth-, and the eighth-, day of the two fortights, and on the Full-Moon day, [a twice-born one should not study the Védas]. (70)

Before the commencement of Vedic study and after the performance of the dedicatory rite, [the study] must be put a stop to, as laid down in the Smriti, for three nights. One should not prosecute Vedic studies on Ashtakas, at the termination of the seasons and in the nights. (71)

The three eight days in the dark fortnight, in the months, of Ágraháyaña, Pousha and Mágha, have been designated by the sages as Ashtakas. (72)

A twice-born one should never study under the shade of S'lesmataka, S'álmali, Madhuka, Kovidara, and Kapithwa trees. (73)

On the demise of a person studying the same branch, or that of a fellow-religious-student, or that of the preceptor, [abstention from study] for three nights is prescribed in the Smriti. (74)

On all these faulty occasions, abstention from study is laid down for the Bráhmaṇás. The Rákshasás do mischief unto them who study [on these interdicted occasions]; therefore one should avoid them (i.e., these occasions). (75)

There is no stoppage of study in the daily rites of the Sandhyá-adorations, in the preliminary and dedicatory rites of Vedic study and in the Homa-Mantrams. (76)
On an Ashtaka-day, when a high wind blows or in [any other] calamity, a twice-born one should study one Rich-, or one Yajus-, or one Sáma-, Mantram. (77)

There is no prohibition in the study of the Vedáṅgas, or of the Itihásas (History) and the Puránas; or of the Dharma-Sástras and other [works]; but a twice-born one should abstain from studying all these on parva-days. (78)

I have thus described, in brief, the duties of the Religious Students. Formerly Brahmá described them before the Rishis gifted with the knowledge of self. (79)

A twice-born person, who without studying the S'rúti devotes his care elsewhere, (i.e., to any other subject) is, indeed, a foolish wight opposed to the study of the Védas. He should not be accosted by the twice-born. (80)

The foremost of the twice-born ones should not be satisfied with merely reading the Védas. The mere recitation of the Védas becomes useless like a cow in mire. (81)

He, who studying duly the Veda (Samhitá) does not discuss (i.e., master) the Védánta, becomes like a S'ádra with his entire family. And he is not entitled to have water for washing his feet. (82)

If a twice-born person wishes to lead the life of a perpetual religious student at the house of his preceptor, he should serve him diligently and assiduously till the destruction of his body. (83)

Or (i.e., in the absence of his preceptor), going to a forest he should duly offer oblations to Fire. And being self-restrained, he should ever and anon study the Spiritual Science. (84)

Having bathed and besmeared his body with ashes, he should, always, study the Vēdas, and especially the Savitri and S'atarudra (verses) of the Vēdas. (85)

O ye twice-born ones, having studied [either] one, or two, or three, of the Vēdas, or the [entire] four Vēdas and understood their meaning properly, the foremost of the twice-born should [celebrate the occasion with the terminating] bath. (86)

He should zealously perform, every day, his own duties as laid down in the Vēda. Not doing:them, he immediately falls down on dreadful hells. (87)

Being self-controlled, he should practise [the recitation of] the Vēdas and never give up the [celebration of] great sacrifices. He should do all domestic works and the Sandhyā-adorations. (88)

He should, daily, study the Vēdas and put on his sacred thread. He should speak the truth and control his passion. [Such conduct] leads to the attainment of emancipation. (89)

Bathing, performing the Sandhyā-adorations and the Brahma-Yajña every day, being shorn of malice, mild and self-controlled, a householder succeeds in getting over worldliness. (90)

A twice-born man, who being self-restrained, reads religious books, discourses [on them], becomes glorified in the region of Brahmā. (91)

Having meditated completely on átman and thereafter performed the morning rites before making offering to all the Deities (made by presenting oblations to Fire before meals), he should feed the Brāhmaṇās in the mid-day. (92)

With his face directed towards the east or the Sun, he should take his meals. Seated on a purified seat, he should place his feet on the ground. (93)
To take meals with one's face directed towards the east, produces longevity; [to do so] with the face directed towards the south, yields fame; to eat with the face towards the west, brings on prosperity; and to eat with the face towards the north, yields [the fruits of] truthfulness. (94)

He (i.e., one leading the domestic mode of life), should himself take his meals afterwards and place the residue on the ground. This, Us'ana says, is equal to fasting. (95)

Again, washing his hands and feet, [and] rinsing his mouth and being shorn of anger, he should take his meals in the night in a purified place after having it [properly] cleansed. (96)

Reciting the Vyāhriti and encircling the food with water, he should sprinkle it afterwards with the Pari-s'echana-Mantram. (97)

Then offering food to Chitra-Gupta, sprinkling it and reciting the Mantram, [running as,—] Amritopistaranamasi, he should perform the rite of A'pos'ána.* (98)

With the recitation of Swáhá and Práñava, he should offer oblation to the [vital air] Práña. Then offering oblation to the Apána, he should offer the same afterwards to the Vyána. (99)

Thereupon he should offer the same to the Udána, and the fifth [oblation] to the Samána. Then understanding their true import, a twice-born one should offer oblation to his own self. (100)

Having meditated, in his mind, on the Divine Self-Existent Prajápati, he should, at his pleasure, take the last portion of the food with curry. (101)

* A kind of prayer repeated before and after eating.
After eating, he should recite [the Mantram] Amritopidhanamasi and drink water. Having sipped water, he should, again, perform the āchamanām. Then reciting the Mantram,—Gouriti, or thrice Gāyatrī, consisting of three pādās and destructive of all sins, he should touch his breast with the Mantram, Prānānām Granthirasi. (102—103)

Then taking up the thumb of the foot with the thumb, lifting his hand and being self-controlled, he should pass off water from his hand. (104)

Having offered oblations, he should inspire his ownself with Mantrams, reciting Swadhō. Then with the Mantram,—Yo yapet Brahmana, he should sprinkle himself with water. (105)

It is laid down in the Smṛiti that of all the yāgas [sacrifices], ātma-yāga is the foremost. In the afternoon of every A’māvasyā (the last day of the dark fortnight) S’rāddha should be performed by the twice-born. (106)

This S’rāddha is called Pīndanvāharyakam.* In the afternoon of the day, when the waning of the Moon takes place, the twice-born should perform it with sanctified fish and meat. (107)

In the dark fortnight there are [fifteen] tithis (days) such as Pratipad (the first day). Leaving off the fourteenth day, [one should perform it] on Pañchamī (fifth day), one after another.† (108)

* Pīnda means the Pitrīs or the departed Manes. It is so called because it affords gratification to them for a month.
† There are fifteen days in the fortnight. If these days are divided by five, three groups are formed. The three Pañchamī-days are accordingly the fifth, tenth, and the last or the A’māvasyā-, day. Of them, the second, i.e., the tenth, day is superior to the first or the fifth, day, and the last, i.e., the A’māvasyā-, day is superior to the second, or the tenth, day. The word uttarottaram in the Text signifies this superiority.
Amongst the tithis beginning with the first day after the Full-Moon-Day, divided into three groups, the A’mávasyá (the last day of the dark fortnight), and the three Ashtakas [are the best]. The three sacred Ashtakas, the fifteenth day of the dark fortnight in every month, and the thirteenth day of the dark fortnight in the month of Mágha and under the constellation of Maghá, are particularly [preferable]. During the solar and lunar eclipses, on all these days, and on the death* of boys, occasional funeral rites should be performed. Otherwise, a person becomes a dweller of hell. Kámya-S’ráddhas are praised in eclipses, on the last days of the summer and winter solstices, and when the Sun enters on its equinoctial passage. [A S’ráddha,—performed] when any conjunction of planets, foreboding evil, takes place, [yields] unending fruits. A S’ráddha, performed on the last day of all the months and on birth-days, [yields] eternal [fruits]. (109—112)

Under any planet and on any tithi and day, one may perform a Kámya-S’ráddha for a particular object. O ye leading twice-born ones, by performing the same under the influence of the Pleiades, one acquires the celestial region. (113)

Proper ingredients and worthy Bráhmanás being available, [one should perform the [S’ráddha]: there is no limitation of time in it. One should perform an Abhyudaya-S’ráddha at the commencement of all [festive and initiatory] rites, such as the birth of a son, etc. A S’ráddha, that is performed on a parva-day, is called Párvaná. What is performed every day, is called Nitya;

* In some Texts there is janana, i.e., on the birth of children. The S’ráddha is to be performed, because no child-death takes place in a family unless the Manes are offended.

[what is performed with a particular end in view, is called] Kâmya. [What is performed occasionally, when Ashtaka and other exceptional days appear, is called] Naimittika. (114—115)

He,—who disregarding a Brâhmaṇa, well-read in the Sruti, living at hand, gives the food to another,—that sinful wight consumes, by such a deed, his seven generations. (116)

If a Vipra [living at a distance] excels [the one living near] in character, learning, etc., [the performer of the Sraddha] should, himself, offer, with care, [the food] unto him, renouncing the one living near. (117)

An illiterate Brâhmaṇa, accepting funeral cakes, gold, kine, horses, lands and sesame seeds, gets consumed like a wood. (118)

The anniversary day of the death of the lady, devoted to her husband, who ascends the same funeral pyre with him, arriving, two separate funeral balls (pîndas) should be made. (119)

[For a deceased person,] oblations of water should be religiously offered; and Sraddha and Pârvana,—called Nagna (i.e., in which persons, qualified to offer pînda, should shave their heads)—should be performed. The rite of depositing bones [should be performed] within the first three days after death; and on the tenth day, the pînda for securing final beatitude [should be offered]. (120)

Ourdha—funeral rites should be performed on the tenth day and on the final day of purification [if the period is somehow increased]. If the rite of depositing bones takes place on the tenth day or on a day subsequent to that, on account of there being destroyed or lost, and if the dead body is to be cremated again, then one should duly perform anew the ceremony of offering water and the new or the first S'rāḍḍha. (121—122)

A twice-born man, whether he maintains the Sacred Fire or not, whose father is dead, should perform the S'rāḍḍha every day, particularly those at sacred places. (123)

If the Pitṛi-vessel lies upraised or askance, the departed Manes, being enraged, do not partake of the food. (124)

"May what is divorced from food, rite and Mantram become faultless." Having recited the foregoing, one should feed them with care. (125)

Ekoddistha, Ekoddhisthavidhika, Vṛiddhi, Pārvana and Pārvanavidhika,—these fivefold S'rāḍḍhas have been enunciated by Bhrigu’s son. (126)

The S'rāḍḍha, performed with care at the time of starting on a journey, is called the sixth. And the Pārvana, performed for purification, has been described by Brahmā as the seventh. (127)

The S'rāḍḍha, performed for the Deities, is the eighth, by doing which, one is freed from fear. At the two periods of junction between day and night,* and in the night no S'rāḍḍha should be performed, for no evidence is found [in the Vēdas in its support]. (128)

[Those performed at various] countries (pilgrimages) particularly, yield unending merits. (129)

A S'rāḍḍha performed at Gaya, and death at Prayāga (Allahabad, the confluence of the Ganges and the Yamunā), yield unending fruits. The intelligent sages all sing and describe this Gāthā (discourse.) (130)

* Some Texts read Rāhudars'ānāt instead of Ahorātromadars'ānata, i.e., during the eclipses, no S'rāḍḍha should be performed.
Many sons, endued with good character and accomplishments, should be sought for. If one, amongst that multitude, happens to go to Gayā, and even if going there accidentally in a company, performs the S'rāddha, the departed Manes are gratified by him; and he, too, comes by most excellent condition. (131—132)

On the Mountain Varāha, especially in Gayā and in such like pilgrimages, [if a S'rāddha is performed], the departed Manes are gratified thereby. (133)

With rice, barley, bean, water, fruits, roots, leaves of the sacred fig-tree, vegetables, rice growing wild or without cultivation, Priyaṅgu (a kind of creeper), wheat, sesame and kidney bean, one should gratify his departed Manes. At the time of a S'rāddha, he should give away sweet fruits, sugar-cane juice, sweet small cardamoms, Vidaryas (prickly pear) and ducks. He should give away with sugar and curd, fried paddy mixed with honey. (134—136)

One should, with care, give at a S'rāddha, deer, lamb and tortoise. With fish and meat, [the Manes attain to gratification for] two months; and [for] three months, with the meat of deer. (137)

With mutton, [they are gratified for] four months; with the meat of birds, [for] five months; with the meat of goat, [for] six months; and with the meat of Ruru-deer, [for] nine months. (138)

With the meat of buffalo and pork, [they] are gratified for ten months; and with the meat of hare and tortoise, for eleven months. (139)

With cow's milk and Pāyasā (milk and boiled-rice), [they attain to gratification for] one year. With the meat of rhinoceros, [they attain to] gratification for twelve years. (140)
Black pot herbs, sea-scrabs, meat of rhinoceros and black goat, honey and all other roots lead to their everlasting gratification. (141)

Having himself bought or obtained by begging all the ingredients necessary [for performing a S'rāddha] for a deceased person, a twice-born man should make a presentation of them, with care, [at a S'rāddha]. The fruit of such a gift is said to be eternal. (142)

One should avoid pepper, betel-nut, Masuraka (pulse), dirty bottle-gourd, Brinjal, incantation, the meat of crane, deceitfulness, big roots, broken rice, human flesh, and the milk of she-buffalos. (143)

The foremost of the twice-born ones should, with every care, avoid, at the time of a S'rāddha, Kodrava (a species of grain), Kovidara (fruit and leaves of the tree of the same name), Sthalapaka (a kind of grain) and A'mari. (144)

CHAPTER IV.

PERSONS WHO OUGHT TO BE INVITED AT A S'RĀDDHA.

Having duly bathed, offered libations of water to the departed Manes, Deities and the Rishis, one, being of a delightful mind and purified, should perform the S'raddha, of Pindanvaharyaka.* (1)

First of all, he should cast his looks towards the Brahmaṇas, who have mastered the Vēdas, for they are the most qualified in offering clarified butter and food [to the departed Manes] and are [to be reverenced like] a guest, according to the Smrīti. (2)

* A S'rāddha in which one should take his meals after the funeral rice-ball has been offered to the Manes.
Those, who are given to the drinking of Soma-Juice, who know the true form of religion, who are truthful, who observe penances, who follow regulations, who know their wives at the proper time after the menses, who preserve the Five Sacred Fires, who are given to Vedic studies, who know the Yayur-Veda, who know the Rig-Veda, who are Trisuparṇa, (i.e., study the same portion of the Vedas), who are Trinadhu (i.e., study the same portion of the Vedas), who are Trināchikēta, (i.e., study the same portion of the Vedas), who have mastered the Sāmā-Veda, who have duly studied the Sāman called the Vyēṣtha-Sāma; those, who have studied the Atharva-Sīras, especially the Rudrādhyāyi; who are is given to the performance of Agnihotra; the learned; those, who know all sins, who have read the Six Aṅgas; those, who are given to the adoration of the Guru, the Deities and the Fires, who are endued with spiritual knowledge, who are non-injuring, who do not daily accept presents, who constantly perform sacrifices, who are given to [the practice of] making gifts;—all such Brāhmaṇas are Paṅgtipāvanās* (i.e., entitled to seats of honour at dinner parties.) (3—7)

Even if they may not be of the same Pravara (lineage) and of the same Gotra (family), and [even if they be not] relations,—those Brāhmaṇas are to be known as Paṅgtipāvanās. (8)

First of all one should feed a Yogin, endued with the knowledge of self; in his absence, a Naishtika (a perpetual religious student); in his absence, a self-controlled Upakarvānaka (a religious student who wishes to pass on to the state of a householder). (9)

* Literally, those who purify Paṅgti, or persons who sit in the same raw to dine.
In the latter's absence, one should feed a householder, who wishes to acquire emancipation and who has given up company. But one should never feed a householder who performs various works expecting the fruits thereof. (10)

In this world, one, who feeds a Yatīn, who is conversant with the three Gunās (universal tendencies) of Prakriti (Nature) and the spiritual science, reaps fruits superior to that of (feeding) a thousand persons well-read in the Vēdas. (11)

Therefore one should, with care, feed the foremost of Yogins, endued with the knowledge of Ī'svara, with food and clarified butter; and in his absence, the twice-born persons. (12)

This is the first rule in the distribution of the Hadya (food) and the Kavya (clarified butter); the following is the minor rule which good people follow. (13)

One should feed his maternal grandfather, maternal uncle, father-in-law, preceptor, and daughter's son, if they are all learned and are like unto fire in Brahmanic energy. (14)

One should not feed a friend at a S'rāddha; he must be secured by money. Even if it is done without any money-present at a funeral offering, it secures prosperous fruits in the next world. (15)

[In the absence of a worthy person,] it is better to adore an accomplished friend, but never a qualified enemy. Clarified butter, partaken of by enemies, becomes fruitless in the region of the dead. (16)

Having offered the Havi to a person, who is not acquainted with the Vēdas, the giver does not attain to the fruits thereof. A person, not knowing the Vēdas, would, in the next world, eat as many burning maces.
with downward faces as the number of balls, which he would eat at the time of distributing the Havya and Kavya. If persons learned in the Védas and the Yogins [take their meals at a S'ráddha], the performer is honoured both in this world and the next. (17—18)

The twice-born men, as mentioned below, who partake of the Havya become A'sura (demonic). He, in whose family the study of the Védas and the [practice of] sitting on the sacrificial altar has been given, up for three generations, is to be known as a bad Bráhmaṇa, and he [should never be invited] at a S'ráddha. (19)

He, who is the servant of a S'údra; he, who is the servant of the king; he, who is proud; he, who is irreligious; he, who works as the priest for a [whole] village; and he, who leads the life of a butcher;—these six are contemptuous (nominal) Bráhmaṇás. Manu has designated them as degraded ones, even if they impart [lessons in the] Védas. (20—22)

The following are disqualified to be present at a S'ráddha ceremony:—Those, who sell the S'ruti; those, who marry widows; those, who enter into a locked room without the permission of the owner; and those, who officiate as priests for inferior castes;—are described as out-castes. Those, who teach unknown persons; those, who give instructions on receiving fees; those, who study the Védas by paying fees;—are described as Vritakás. The Srámanás (Bouddha ascetics); Nirgoodás, (a class of naked mendicants); those, who, know the doctrines of the Pancharátra;* the

* This is a sect amongst the Vaishnavás. The promulgater of this sect was S'ándilya. According to them, Vishnu is the Supreme Deity and the sole cause of all. Deliverance is attainable by the worship of this Deity.

Jindas,* the Kap\'ali\'k\'as; † the Pas'upatas; ‡—if these, and similar other heretics,—wicked souls pervaded by the quality of Tamas,—partake of the Havi, the Sraddha does not become successful, and it does not yield fruits in the next world. O ye leading Vipras, a twice-born man, who does not follow an established order of life; as well as the one, who enters upon a false one;—are to be known as Pa\'ngtidushak\'as (i.e., those who are unworthy to sit at a dinner party.) One, who has a bad skin; one, who has bad nails; one, who is afflicted with leprosy; one, who suffers from leucoderma (i.e., white leprosys); one, who has brown colored teeth; one, who is wily; one, who carries on a trade; a thief; a eunuch, an atheist; a drunkard; one, who knows an unmarried girl; one, who kills heroes; one, who has sexually known his brother's widow (not as a sacred duty, but for the carnal gratification of one's senses; an incendiary; one, who takes food, offered by an intelligent person called the Ku\'da; the Brahman\'as, who sell the Soma; one, who serves meals; an injuring person; a (Pariviti) younger brother who marries before his elder has been married; one, who does not perform the five great sacrifices; the son of a widow, re-married; one, who lives on usury; one, who lives by astrological calculations; one, who lives by singing and playing on musical instruments; one, who is afflicted with a disease; one, who is deaf; (23—30)

* A follower of Jaina doctrines.
† Followers of a certain S'airu Sect (the left-hand order) characterised by carrying skulls of men in the form of garlands and eating and drinking from them.
‡ A sect of S'airu worshippers; they hold that I's\'wara, the Supreme Being is the Efficient Cause of the world, its Creator and Superintending and Ruling Providence.
One, who is defective in limbs; one, who has extra limbs; a religious student, who has committed an act of incontinence; one, who vilifies a maiden; the son of a woman who commits adultery during the life-time of her husband; the bastard son of a widow; one implores with a curse; a low Brâhmaṇa, who subsists upon offerings made to an idol; (31)

One, who injures a friend; one, who is deceitful; one, who daily beats women; one, who renounces his parents and preceptor; as well as one, who renounces his wife; (32)

One, who has no issue; one, who gives false evidence; one, who cooks food; one, who lives by treating diseases; one who goes to sea; one, who is ungrateful; one, who breaks a high way; and one, who breaks an agreement; (33)

One, who is given to the vilification of the Vêdas; one, who is given to speaking against the Deities; one, who is given to speaking ill of the twice-born;—[all these] should be avoided in all rites appertaining to a Śrâddha. (34)

An ungrateful person; a deceitful person; a wicked soul; an atheist; one, who speaks against the Vêdas; one, who slays a friend; one, who knows another's wife; one, who falsely accuses a learned person; [should, also, be avoided.] (35)

What is the use of speaking more on this subject, even those, who after doing prescribed works perpetrate interdicted deeds, should, also, be carefully avoided in a Śrâddha. (36)
CHAPTER V.

[RULES OF S'RA'ADDA.]

HAVING purified himself with cow-dung and water and being self-controlled, [the performer of a S'ra'addha,] saluting all the twice-born, should invite them with welcome words. (1)

On the day previous, he should say,—“To-morrow shall my S'ra'addha take place.” If it is impossible, he should invite a Brāhmaṇa, endued with [all] the marks mentioned before. (2)

When the hour for the S'ra'addha arrives, his departed Manes, fleet like the mind, hearing his [invitation] and meditating on it with a concentrated mind, arrive there. (3)

The departed Manes, who range in the intermediate region, follow the Brāhmaṇās, remain there in the shape of the wind, and attain to the most excellent condition after partaking of the food [offered there.] (4)

When the hour for the S'ra'addha arrives, the Brāhmaṇās who are invited, should all lead continent lives and sit there being self-restrained (5)

They should all be shorn of anger and hastiness and be truthful and self-restrained. One, who takes meals at a S'ra'addha, should give up fear, sexual intercourse, wending a way and the recitation [of the Gāyatrī.] (6)

A Brāhmaṇa, who, being invited, accepts another's invitation, [is a sinner.] And a twice-born person, who, having invited [Brāhmaṇās, according to his acquirements], invites another out of stupefaction, is a greater sinner and is born as a virmin of excreta. (7)
A Brāhmaṇā, who being invited at a S'ṛāddha, holds sexual intercourse, is visited by the sin of Brāhmaṇicidal and is born amongst the degraded castes (8)

The departed Manes of the wicked-minded Vīpra, who being invited, wends a way; live for that month on dust. (9)

The departed Manes of the twice-born person, who being invited, picks up a quarrel, live for that month on dirt and excreta. (10)

Therefore, being invited at a S'ṛāddha; a twice-born one should become self-controlled. The performer of the S'ṛāddha, too, should be shorn of anger, remain purified and control his senses. (11)

Having gone to the southern quarter, [the performer of a S'ṛāddha] should, attentively, offer [unto the invited persons,] beautifying [the place], Durvā-grass with roots, having their tips directed towards the south, and pure water. (12)

He should paste, with cow-dung, a low ground in the south, cool, demarcated, possessed of auspicious marks, purified and secluded. (13)

The departed Manes are gratified [with oblations] offered at the secluded banks of rivers, pilgrimages, one's own ground, and the summits of mountains. (14)

One should not offer oblations to the departed Manes on another's ground. Whatever [rite] is performed [there], by men out of stupefaction, becomes lost on account of its ownership [being invested in another.] (15)

Forests, mountains, sacred shrines, sacrificial places, all these are described as having no owners. No one has any right of possession over them. (16)

A twice-born person should put boundary marks all over there and scatter sesame seeds. All places, sullied by the Asuras, are purified by sesame and the Aja (a kind of corn.) (17)

He should, then, according to his power, dedicate food, purified in many ways, not consisting of one curry, fresh and of which nothing has been spent, and prosperous with articles to be sucked and drunk. (18)

Then when the noon sets in, he, having approached the twice-born, who have pared their nails and shaved their beards, should offer them, as laid down in the ritual, sticks for rubbing the teeth. (19)

First of all he should offer unto [the Brāhmaṇās representing the] Vis‘wadēvās, in Udumvara-vessels, oil, unguents, water for bathing [and] other ingredients of bathing, and perfumeries of sorts. (20)

Then, having risen up and with folded palms, he should offer, in order, water, for washing the feet and rinsing the mouth, unto them, when they have returned from after bath. (21)

The seats, made of Kus‘ā, for those Brāhmaṇās, who, being invited for the first [party, the Deities], are beautifully seated there (i.e., the place where a S‘rāddha is performed), should be placed facing the east. (22)

They (i.e., those seats) shall have one Kus‘ā facing the south, and should be sprinkled with sesame-water. [The performer of the S‘rāddha] should make the Brāhmaṇās, like unto the Deities themselves, sit thereon, saying,—‘Sit.’ They (the Brāhmaṇās), too, should sit separately. (23)

Two, on the side of the Dēva, [should sit with their] faces towards the east. Three, belonging to the Pitris, should sit with their faces towards the north. Or one on each side should [be present] there. Such is [the rule in the case] of the maternal grandfather. (24)
The ceremony of reception, the determination of time and place, purity and the [acquisition of] qualified Brāhmaṇaḥ,—these five destroy [the true spirit of] the S'rāddha. Therefore many should not be invited. (25)

Or, one should feed only one Brāhmaṇa who has mastered the Vedas, is endued with good character and with [the knowledge of] the S'ruti, and who is shorn of [all] bad marks. (26)

All self-restrained persons, [desirous of offering] food to a qualified person, [should offer the same], in a temple, unto him returned from the three regions. (27)

He should then offer [a part of] that food unto the Fire and then unto the [invited] religious student. A Bhikṣu (religious mendicant) or a Brahmachārin being present for food, one should feed them to satisfaction after [the invited Brāhmaṇa] have been seated [to take their meals] at a S'rāddha. That S'rāddha is not well spoken of where an Atithi (uninvited guest) does not take his food. (28—29)

Therefore, even at places of pilgrimage, the Atithis should be adored by the twice-born ones with care. Those twice-borns, who take meals at a S'rāddha, if they, without spending a night, hold sexual congress or make gifts, are, forsooth, born in the species of crows. One having defective limbs, an outcaste, one suffering from leprosy, a merchant, the offspring of a Nishāda by a S'ūdra woman, one having a foetid nose, a fowl, a hog, and a dog should be shunned from a distance in all S'rāddhas. One should not touch a person of grim visage, a Mlechchha and a woman in menses. (30—32)

One should avoid persons putting on violet coloured raiments and [useless] silk raiments, as well as heretics. Whatever rites are performed there [in a S'rāddha] towards the Brahmans belonging to the Pitris, should all be done in the worship of the Vaishadévas. One should bedeck, with ornaments, all those [Brahmans] seated at pleasure. (33—34)

[Then] one should offer Arghya unto their hands with the Mantram,—“Yádivyá;” as also scents, garlands, incense, etc., according to one’s might. (35)

Then making the sacred thread hang down towards the left part of the body over the right shoulder, a wise person, with his face directed towards the south, should invoke the departed Manes with the Mantram,—“Us'antastwá.” (36)

Having invoked [them] and been commanded, [he] should then recite [the Mantram,—] “A’yántunás.” [Then with the Mantram,—] “S’annodói,” [he should place] water; [and with the Mantram,—] “Tilosi,” sesame, in the vessel. (37)

Having placed [water and sesame] and given again, as before, Arghya unto their hands, [he should], being self-restrained, place the remaining water of Arghya in a vessel. (38)

Having placed, with this vessel, the Arghya-vessel along with the Pitris (i.e., having kept it as a place of their residence) and then taken up rice soaked with clarified butter, he should ask—“Agnou Karishyé,” (i.e., if I can offer oblation to the Fire.) (39)

Being commanded with “Kurushwa,” (do it), he should, with the sacred thread on,* offer oblations [to

* This and similar other passages distinctly show that to put on the sacred thread always, was not the practice prevailing then. But the Brahmanás used to put on the sacred thread, as a distinctive mark, before the performance of any particular religious rite.
the Fire.] Wearing the sacrificial thread and with the Kus'a in hand, one should perform the Homa. (40)

Wearing the sacred thread over the right shoulder and under the left arm, one should perform the Homa for the Pitris and the Vis'wadévás. Then when serving meals to the Deities, he should lower down his right knee. (41)

Then reciting,—Somáya Pitrímate Swadhá, namas, Agnaye Kavyaváhanáya Swadhá, he should offer oblations. (42)

Being self-restrained and stationed near the image of a Great Deity or in a cowpen, he should consign them to the hands of a Vipra in the absence of the Fire. (43)

Therefore having circumambulated, at the command [of the Bráhmanáš], the [image of the] Deity and his own tutelary Deity, he should paint, with cowdung, before him, towards the south, on a little elevated place, an auspicious circular or square figure. He should, then, with a Kus'a-reed, rub thrice inside the figure. (44—45)

Thereupon having spread there Kus'a-grass, with their tips directed towards the south, he should, being self-controlled, make three balls [for the Manes] with the residue of the oblation. (46)

Thereupon having offered the Pinda there, he should rub, with his hands, those Kus'a-reeds for [the satisfaction of] the partakers of the paste. Then rinsing and rinsing his mouth thrice and suppressing the vital airs gradually, he should, by and by, throw the residue of the water near the Pinda. Then being self-restrained, he should beat the Pinda slowly. (47—48)

Thereupon one should duly feed a twice-born person, with the remaining portion of the food [forming the] Pinda. Here (i.e., in a Sráddha) a person, conversant with religious laws, should bow unto the six seasons, the departed Manes and the Deities. (49)

If the burning lamp is extinguished, while taking meals at a Srāddha, one should not again take food. Having taken it, one should perform the Chāndrāyana. (50)

One should offer corns, various cakes of flour, sweet boiled milk and rice, soup, vegetables, desired-for fruits, milk, curd, clarified butter and honey. (51)

One should dedicate desired-for boiled rice, various edibles and drinks and all that is liked by the leading twice-borns. (52)

One, seeking one's well-being, should give unto the twice-borns paddy, various kinds of sesame, sugar and warm boiled rice, but not (warm) roots, fruits, and drinks. One should not [while offering these] shed tears; nor should one be angry; nor should one speak an untruth. (53—54)

One should not touch boiled rice with the feet; nor should one scatter it. The Yātudhanās (Rākshasās) destroy what is offered angrily or hastily, or what is acquired by sinful means. One should not, with a moistened body, stand near a twice-born person. (55—56)

One should not look at the crows or drive away the birds; for the departed Manes, for knowing the real truth, come there in those forms. (57)

One should not give anything there with the hands [only], nor simple salt (i.e., without mixing it with any other article); nor should one give it in an iron vessel, nor disrespectfully. (58)

[By offering food] in a golden vessel, or in an Udumvara one, and particularly in the horn of a rhinoceros, one comes by the most excellent sovereignty. (59)

He, who feeds the departed Manes in an earthen vessel, goes, with the eater, to the most dreadful hell of Purodhá, (60)

One should not offer food in unequal quantities in the same row, nor should one beg food, nor should [the eaters] quarrel with [one another]. By begging food, one despatches oneself to a dreadful hell. (61)

Abstaining from speech, one should take food; even when accosted, one should not describe the real virtues [of the food]. As long as the merits of the Havi are not described, the departed Manes partake of the food. (62)

[Disregarding] many others seeing him, a twice-born person, seated in the first row, should not take his meals. Such an ignorant person takes upon [himself] the sin of the [entire] row. (63)

The foremost of the twice-born, [who is] engaged, should not leave anything in a S'ráddha. Even he must not prevent one from offering Másha-corns; nor shall he look at another’s food. (64).

A twice-born one, who being engaged in a rite for the departed Manes, does not eat Másha-corns, is born, after death, as a beast for twenty-one births. (65)

One should make them [i.e., the invited Bráhmanaś] listen to the Vedic recitations, Dharma-Sástras, Itihásas (History) Puráṇs, and the most beautiful portion [of the S’ástras] dealing with [the performance of] the S’ráddha. (66)

Thereupon one should offer food and scatter it on the earth before those who are unfed. Then accosting the gratified [Brāhmaṇś] with “Swāditam” (are you satisfied?), he should make them sip the water. (67)

After they have sipped the water, he should address them “Bho ramyatām,” (Hon’ble Sirs, please take rest). Thereupon the Brāhmaṇś should say,—“Swadhā.” (68)

Thereupon he should communicate the residue of the food unto the [Brāhmaṇś already] fed. Then command-ed by the twice-borns, he should do what they say. (69)

In a Pitṛi-Srāddha (i.e., Ekoddhistha and Pārvanā) “Swadita” should be uttered; in a Goshtha (i.e., a Srāddhā; described by Vis’wamitra) “Sunrita”; in an Abhyudaya Srāddha, “Sampannam”; and in a Daiva, “Ruchitam.” (70)

Being speechless, he should send away first of all the Brāhmaṇś representing the Deities. Then looking towards the south, he should beg [the following] of the departed Manes. (71).

May [the number of] givers [in our family] multiply; may our children [be given to the reading and teaching of the] Vēdas; may reverential faith [in the Vēdas] not disappear [in our family]; may riches, to be given away, multiply [in our family]. (72)

One should offer Piṇḍas and edibles unto the Brāhmaṇś, throw them into the Fire or water. The Vipras being seated, one should not cleanse the leavings of the twice-born persons. (73)

Thereupon one, seeking a son, should offer unto one’s wife, the middle [Piṇḍa]. Then washing the hands and rinsing the mouth, one should feed one’s kinsmen in the end. (74)

The kinsmen being gratified, one should, thereafter feed the servants. One should, afterwards, take, with one’s wife, the last portion of the food. (75)
So long the sun is not set, one should not look at the leavings; the pair should lead a continent life for that night. (76)

He,—who having made presents in a S'ráddha, or he,—who, having taken meals [three-at], holds sexual intercourse,—is again born as a virmin, after having passed through [the hell of] Maháraurava. (77)

One (i.e., the performer of the S'ráddha or the partaker of food) should be pure, shorn of anger, of quiescent soul, truthful and self-controlled. Even the performer or the eater, should give up [for that day] Vedic studies and meditation. (78)

The twice-borns, who, having made presents in a S'ráddha, take their meals elsewhere, are equal to great sinners and go to innumerable hells. (79)

I have thus attentively described, in full, the rituals relating to a S'ráddha. An Udásin (an indifferent ascetic) should perform the S'ráddha with A'ma (raw or uncooked materials) and not with any thing else. (80)

A twice-born one who does not keep the Fire, who wends ways and who is given to all sorts of evil habits, should perform the S'ráddha with raw rice. A S'údra should always do the same. (81)

A twice-born person, who is conversant with religious regulations, should, being endued with reverential faith, perform the S'ráddha with raw rice. He should [then] offer the same as oblations to the Fire and make Piñdas with the same. (82)

He, who, having controlled his mind, performs the S'ráddha, according to these regulations, attains to the station of Vishnu, being daily freed from his sins. (83)

Therefore the foremost of the twice-born ones, should perform a S'ráddha with all care. By it the Eternal Lord becomes perfectly adored. (84)

A twice-born person, the foremost of them, who is not rich should, after bathing and gratifying the departed Manes with oblations of sesame and water, perform [the S'ráddha] only with roots or fruits. (85)

One should not offer [Pindaś at a S'ráddha] in the lifetime of one's father. Homa and its terminating offerings are laid down [for such a one]. Or such a person may offer [Pindaś] for them to whom he [his father] offers the same. This is the opinion of the learned. (86)

One should offer [Pinda] for him who, amongst the father, grandfather, or great grandfather is dead, and not for any one else. (87)

One should, with reverence, feed any one amongst them who is alive, to his heart's content. Disregarding one alive, one should not offer [food to another]. Such is the S'ruti (Vedic regulation) transmitted. (88)

A Dvamushyāyana son* should offer Pinda [for his procreator], for he is born from his seed (semen); he should likewise offer [Pinda for the other father], if by his religious appointment he (i.e., the son) is procreated by another on his barren wife.† (89)

A son, [who is procreated] without any agreement [upon another's wife], should offer Pinda for [the father]

* This is a son, who is begotten by a person of good birth, on the barren wife of another person, with her husband's permission or with that of her elders in the absence of her husband. Such a son should offer Pindaś for his procreating father as well as the other father who is the husband of his mother. [See Yājñavalkya, Chapter I., Sloka 68—69.]

† i.e., if there is no such contract between the parties, (the one procreating the son, and the person on whose wife the son is begotten) as that the son shall belong to them both.
who gives seed, for he is born of his semen. Otherwise, [he should offer it] to the Kshétrí [father].* (90)

He should offer two Pindas both for the Kshétrí (father), and the Viji (procreator); or in one (Srāddha) he should offer it to the Kshétrí after mentioning the name of the Viji. (91)

On the day of death, he should perform [the Srāddha,] according to the regulation of the Ekoddishtha.† But determining the impurity, he should perform the Kāmya-Srāddha, if he seeks any thing. (92)

One, seeking prosperity, should perform the Abhyudaya-Srāddha in the fore part of the day. All [its rituals are like those of a] Daiva. No external rite should be performed. (93)

Darva (grass) should be spread over on all sides. Thereon he (the performer) should feed the twice-born ones. He should say,—"Be ye gratified, Nāndimukha-Pitrís." (94)

First of all, the Srāddha of the female ancestors should take place; then that of the male ones; then that of the [deceased] maternal grandfather. These three Srāddhas have been laid down in the Smritis for the Vṛiddhi (i.e., offerings made to the Manes on prosperous occasions, such as the birth of a son, et c.) (95)

First [before performing these Srāddhas], offerings should be made unto the Deities. No work should be done from the left to the right. (96)

* The father on whose wife he has been begotten by another person with the former’s permission.
† In the performance of the Srāddha for a particular person on the day of death, it is not necessary to take any notice of the purity or impurity of the day.
Having made adorations with flowers, incense, edibles and ornaments unto the variegated altars, the idols and the twice-born persons, one, with the sacred thread on, being self-controlled and facing the east, should offer Piṇḍas; and having adored the Mátris, a learned person should perform three S'ráḍḍhas. (97—98)

The Mátris (deceased female ancestors), being possessed by ire, seek to injure him, who, without performing the Mátri-Yajña, performs a S'ráḍḍha. (99)

CHAPTER VI.
[VARIOUS FORMS OF IMPURITY.]

If any, amongst the Sapinḍas, is born or dead, the impurity of the Brāhmaṇās, say the learned, extends over ten days. (1)

During the period of impurity, one should not perform any of the (Nitya) daily rites, and particularly those of the Kāmya; nor should one think of the Vedic Mantrams. (2)

At this time, one, who keeps the [Sacred] Fire, being purified and shorn of anger, should feed the other (i.e., pure) twice-born persons. He should, with dried rice and fruits, offer oblations to the Fire for the departed Manes. (3)

Others should not touch them [who are in impurity]; nor should they offer food to the Spirits. In [an impurity], consequent on the birth of a] son, no sin is committed by touching [the other] Sapinḍas, with the exception of the mother. Again, in [an impurity of] death, it has been said by the Sages, that one can, on the fourth, or the fifth, day, touch him who is given to religious study, who celebrates sacrifices, or who is conversant with the Védas. (4—5)

On the tenth day, after bathing, all [other castes] may be touched by them. Unmeritorious [impurity], in the case of servants and unworthy* Sapïndas, has been described [to extend over] ten days. (6)

A person possessing one qualification† [is purified] in four days; one possessing two,‡ in three days; and one possessing three, in one day. (7)

After the tenth day, one should fully read out the Vëda and offer oblations to the Fire. He (i.e., one who observes impurity for ten days) becomes worthy of being touched on the fourth day. So the Patriarch Manu has said. (8)

The period of impurity of those who do not perform religious rites, who are not read in the Védas, and who suffer from leprosy, etc., terminates with their death. (9)

The [period of] impurity, on the death of [Nirguna] Bráhmaṇás, ranges from three to ten nights. [Impurity on the death of a Sapïnda,] before he is invested with the sacred thread, extends over three nights; and for ten nights, thereafter. (10)

[If a child] is dead within two years after its birth, the same [period of impurity, i.e., ten nights] is for the parents. Such is desired [by the Law-givers]. [If the Sapïnda] is highly unmeritorious, [one attains to] purity within three nights. (11)

* Nirguna persons are those who do not maintain the Sacred Fires, as described in the Sruti and the Smriti.
† Two qualifications are the maintenance of either the Srauta-, or the Smârta-, Fire and Vedic studies.
‡ Three qualifications are the maintenance of both the Fires and complete Vedic study.
The same [is the period of impurity, i.e., three nights] for the parents on the death of a child before teething. Such is the deliverance [of the Rishis]. Three nights [form the period of impurity on the demise] of a child that has teethed. [A child is called] Jñātadanta when the teeth grow. (12)

Immediate is [the purification, on the death of a child] who has not teethed; [and impurity extends over] one night, before the ceremony of tonsure (Chudākaraṇam) [is performed within two years]; and three nights, before the investiture with the sacred thread (Upanayanam); and ten nights, afterwards. (13)

If a child is dead as soon as it is born, both the father and mother suffer from impurity consequent on the birth* [only]; the father, too, † becomes unfit to be touched. (14)

Immediate is the purification for the Sapindas, [if death takes place after ten days]. One day [is the period of impurity] for a uterine brother, if he is Nirguna (unmeritorious). (15)

If death takes place after the teething, one night is the period of impurity for the Nirguna Sapindas; and three nights, if it takes place after the ceremony of tonsure. (16)

O ye learned ones, if death takes place before the teething, one night [is the period of impurity] for the Sapindas, if they are highly disqualified. (17)

Immediate is the purification of the Sapindas on the dropping [of an embryo] by abortion. But if the Sapindas are greatly disqualified, a day and night

* i.e., the impurity consequent on death does not affect them.
† Mother, of course, is also not to be touched.
[form the period of impurity] on account of abortion. (18)

Three nights have been laid down [as the period of impurity] for kinsmen, if they act according to their desire. If any birth takes place during [the period of impurity consequent on] a birth and any death during [impurity owing to] a death, purification is attained with the termination of [the first impurity]. [If any such incident takes place] on the last day [of impurity, the period is increased by] two nights. [If impurity] for both birth and death simultaneously takes place, it terminates with that of death. (19—20)

If any impurity, multiplying sin,* takes place after [any other minor impurity],—one is purified by it (i.e. by its termination). Hearing of an impurity consequent on birth or death, a person, gone to another country, should observe impurity till the [remaining] period is completed. [If he hears of it] after the period of impurity is over, three nights have been spoken of [as the period of impurity] for the Sapindas. (21—22)

Hearing of a death after a year, a bath [brings on purification]. Under all circumstances and in all times,

* This is an impurity consequent on the death of father, mother, grandfather, etc., which is called Guru, or most important as’oucha, impurity. There is another reading “ardhavrittimadás’ouchamurdhama-nyenas’oudhyati,” meaning,—“if any impurity, of a more important character, takes place after half the period of another impurity is over, it lasts for the entire period to be observed for the latter, and at its termination one is purified.” Thus the meaning of the context is:—

Supposing a person is in impurity for the death of a Sapinda kinsman. After four days his father or mother dies. In this case, his impurity does not end with the last day of the first one, but extends over the entire period, beginning with the commencement of the latter. immediate is the purification for a person who is observing a vow, for one who studies the Védas, and for one who is engaged in a work for carrying on his livelihood. [On the death of] maidens who have been engaged by words but not married, the father and the Sapinda-relations [have to observe impurity for] three nights. If marriage has been solemnized, [their] husbands [are to observe impurity]. One day has been prescribed in the Smritis [as the period of] impurity on the death of a maiden who has not been even orally engaged. (23—25)

Impurity has been spoken of as immediate on the death [of a maiden] within two years from birth. [Impurity extends over] a night, [if she dies before] the ceremony of tonsure. (26)

Three nights [form the period of impurity if a maiden dies] before being given away in marriage; and ten [nights] after that [form the period of impurity in her husband’s family]. Three nights [form the period of] impurity on the death of a maternal grandfather. (27)

Similarly is to be known the period of impurity on the death of a uterine sister. Pakṣinī (a night with the two days enclosing it,) [forms the period of impurity] on the death of relations formed by marriage as also of Vándhavas (i.e., maternal uncles). (28)

One night has been laid down [in the case of the death] of the preceptor or a fellow religious student. Immediate [is the purification] on the death of the king in whose territory [a person] lives. (29)

On the death of a married daughter [living] in the house, the father [has to observe impurity for] three days; three nights [form the period on the death and birth of sons to] Punarvû-wives (i.e., widows married by him), of sons born in the family (i.e., not born of his own loins), and of the preceptor. A day and night is spoken of [as the period of impurity on the death of] a wife who has been visited by another person, [and on that] of the preceptor's son and wife. (30—31)

One night [is the period of impurity on the death] of an Upādhyāya, of S'rotriyās and of Sapinḍa-relations living in [a person's] house. (32)

Three nights [form the period of impurity] on the death of the mother-in-law as well as that of the father-in-law. Immediate purification is laid down on the death of a Sagotra (i.e., one of the same family after fourteen generations). (33)

A Brāhmaṇa attains to purity within ten days; a Kshatriya, within twelve days; a Vaishya, within fifteen days, and a S'udra within a month. (34)

It has been desired [by the Law-givers] that of all persons, born in the families of the Kshatriyās, Vais'yās, and the S'udrās who serve good Brāhmaṇās with undivided attention, one attains to purification within ten days like unto a Brāhmaṇa [himself]. (35)

[If a person born] in degraded castes, [serves the Kshatriyās and Vais'yās] [he attains to purification] like the Kshatriyās and Vais'yās. [On the death of a Sapinḍa-] S'udra, the impurity for the Vais'yās, Kshatriyās and the Brāhmaṇās extends, in order, over six, three, and one night. O ye leading Brāhmaṇās, [similarly on the death of a Sapinḍa-Vais'ya] the impurity for the S'udrās, Kshatriyās and the Brāhmaṇās extends over

* If a person serves a Kshatriya, he attains purification in that work within twelve days; and if a Vais'ya, within fifteen days.
a fortnight, six nights and three nights respectively. O ye foremost of the twice-born race, the impurity [on the death] of a Kshatriya, for the Brāhmaṇās, the Vais'yaś and the S'ūdrās [extends], it is said, over six nights and twelve days gradually.* (36—38)

On the death of a Brāhmaṇa, the S'ūdrās, Vais'yaś, and the Kshatriyās [should have to observe the usual period of impurity]. By performing the funeral rites of a Brāhmaṇa who is a Sapīṇda (i.e., for whom one is entitled to offer a Pīṇḍa), a Vipra attains to purification within one night. The Lotus-sprung (Brahmā) has said so. By taking meals or living with [that Brāhmaṇa], one attains to purification within ten nights. (39—40)

If having his mind possessed by avarice, one speedily burns [the dead body of a Brāhmaṇa], a twice-born person (i.e., a Brāhmaṇa) becomes purified within ten; and a Kshatriya, within twelve days. (41)

A Vais'ya attains to purification within a fortnight; and a S'ūdra, within a month; or again, in six, seven and three nights. (42)

Having cremated a helpless, friendless, poor Brāhmaṇa, the Brāhmaṇās and others attain to purification by drinking clarified butter after bathing. (43)

If out of love, a person of a lower caste touches, during the period of impurity, a higher caste, and a higher caste a lower one, he attains to purification with [the termination of] his impurity. [By following the

* These S'lokas conclusively prove that there was inter-caste-marriage prevalent at that time, otherwise these laws, relating to purification, would not have dead body of a] Kshatriya, [a Brāhmaṇa] attains purification in one day; and [following that of] a Vais'ya, in two days. (44)

[In following that of] a S'ūdra, three days have been spoken of [as the period of impurity]. [He should] again [practise] Prānāyām for a hundred times. If, before the bones of a S'ūdra are deposited, a Brāhmaṇa weeps with his (i.e., the S'ūdra's) own people, [his] impurity lasts for three nights. One night is for a Kshatriya and Vais'ya, [if they do the same]. Otherwise (i.e., after the depositing of the bones), a Brāhmaṇa [attains purification by bathing after a day or a night]. (45—46)

If, before the bones of a Vipra are deposited, a Brāhmaṇa weeps for him, he, forsooth, attains purification by bathing with the cloth, worn by him at that time, on. (47)

He, amongst the Brāhmaṇs or other inferior castes who takes food with them (i.e., those who are impure) or drives in the same conveyance, attains purification within ten days (i.e., the fixed period of impurity). (48)

He who wilfully takes their (i.e., impure persons') food, even if he be a Deity, attains purification after observing impurity [for the fixed period] and bathing after its termination. (49)

A person, who under the pressure of famine takes food offered by them, should observe impurity for the [number of] days [he has taken it]; thereafter, he should perform penances. (50)

The twice-born, who maintain [their] Sacred Fires, should on the death of their Sapīndas, observe impurity from the time of cremation; and others, from the hour of death. (51)

Sapīndatā (kinship connected by the offering of the funeral rice-balls to the Manes) ceases in the seventh generation ;* Samánodakabhávat† (relationship connected by the libations of water to the Manes of common ancestors) ceases when there is no knowledge of the name and birth [of a person]. (52)

Father, grandfather and great-grandfather [who are entitled to Šráddha], the Lepabhájas,‡ and one's own self,—these seven generations form the Sapinda. (53)

The Divine Prajápati has said that Sapinda-relationship extends over [three generations] upwards [from the great-grandfather]. Sapinda relationship extends over three degrees in case of persons of various Varnas begotten by one [father] upon many wives of various castes. (54)

Architects, artizans, physicians, maid-, and man-, servants, kings, and royal officers have been described as to have immediate purification. Persons, who make daily charities; one, who makes a Niyama (i.e., a particular promise); one, who knows the Brahman; religious students; those, who are initiated; those, who are engaged in religious rites; a king who has been duly installed and those who continually distribute rice,—[all these]—attain immediate purification according to ordinances. (55—57)

* From a person with whom the calculation begins, six generations upwards and six generations downwards constitute the Spindas.

† This relationship extends from the seventh or the (eleventh) to the thirteenth (or the fourteenth, according to some,) degree.

‡ Lepas means the wipings of the hand (or the remnants of the food sticking to the hand) after offering funeral oblations to the first three ancestors (father, grandfather and great-grandfather); these wipings being offered to the three ancestors after the great-grandfather i.e., to paternal ancestors in the 4th, 5th and the 6th, degree,
In a sacrifice, at the time of wedding, in any religious rite relating to a Deity, during famine or any other calamity, immediate purification has been mentioned. (58)

Immediate is the purification for those who have been killed by poison, by lightning, by the king, by the Brāhmaṇās, or by snake-bite. (59)

Immediate purification is laid down in a death by entering into fire, by jumping down from a high place, by taking poison, or by fasting; in that for Brāhmaṇās and kine; and in that while leading the life of a Sannyāsin. (60)

There is no impurity [at the death of] perpetual religious students, forest-recluses, Yatins, and religious students, as well as at that of an outcaste. [This has been said] by the learned. (61)

CHAPTER VII.

[PERSONS QUALIFIED TO PERFORM THE S'RĀ'DDHA.]

No cremation, no funeral rites, no depositing of bones, no shedding of tears, [no offering of] Piṇḍa and no S'rāddha whatsoever should be done for the degraded ones. (1)

There is no impurity for him who lays a violent hand on himself with fire, poison, etc. No cremation and no offering of water should be made for him. (2)

If, however, by a mistake one dies through fire, poison, etc., impurity should be observed for him and [the rite of offering] water should be performed. (3)

If a son is born [to a person], gold, paddy, kine, clothes, sesame, rice, oil, molasses, and clarified butter—all these raw materials may be accepted from him on that very day. (4)

From the house of a person who is in an impure state, fruits, sugar-cane, vegetables, salt, wood, water, curd, clarified butter, medicines, milk, and dried food may be accepted daily. One, who maintains the Sacred Fire, shall be duly burnt with the Three Fires. (5—6)

One, who does not maintain the three Sacred Fires [should be burnt] with the Sacred Fire consecrated in the house; and other inferior persons, with the ordinary fire; —by the twice-born. If the dead body is not found, an image should be made with Pallása [leaves]; —and be only burnt by the Sapinda-relations endued with reverence, controlling speech and [mentioning] only the name and family. Water, they should offer, only once. (7—8)

They all,* putting on wet cloth and with kinsmen, should duly offer every day, [both] morning and evening for ten days [consecutively], Pīndas at the gate of the house for the deceased person. They should feed four Brāhmaṇās. On the second day, shaving† shall be done along with all kinsmen. (9—10)

Then the bones [of the deceased person] should be deposited by the Jñātī‡ (chief-mourner) with all kinsmen. [The performer of the Sṛāddha on that

* The usual practice is that the son should offer the Pīndas. In the Text Sarva or all, is mentioned; because, in the absence of a son, all the Sapindaś are qualified to offer Pīndas.

† Shaving takes place generally on the last but one day of impurity.

‡ Here the word Jñātī means the next kin who performs the funer-ral rite; and he is, therefore, qualified to perform the Sṛāddha in the absence of a son.
day, should, with reverence, feed an uneven number of pure Brāhmaṇas not lesser than three. (11)

On the fifth, ninth, and the eleventh, day he should feed an uneven number of Brāhmaṇas. This rite is known as the first S'rāddha. (12)

On the eleventh day (for the Brāhmaṇas) and on [the day after] the twelfth (for the Kshatriyās), the person, who lights up [the funeral pyre], should, with reverence, offer a Pīṇḍa and a Pavitra (a Kusā-reed) in honour of the deceased. And he should [perform the S'rāddha] every month on the day of death for one year. (13—14)

It is said that after full one year, the Sapindikaran (annual S'rāddha for offering Pīṇḍas) should be performed. O leading twice-born ones, [in that S'rāddha the performer] should make four vessels, [one] for the deceased, and [three for] ancestors of three degrees upwards. (15)

Thereupon with the Mantrams,—"Ye Samānā, etc.," he should pour down [water from] the vessel dedicated to the deceased into those offered for the Pitris (grandfather, etc.). Pīṇḍas should be offered in the same manner. (16)

It is laid down that Sapindikaran, S'rāddha should be preceded by the Daiva, (i.e., offerings made to the Deities). There one should invite the departed Manes and point out again (i.e., invoke) the deceased.* (17)

No separate rite should be performed for those deceased ancestors for whom Sapindikaran has [once] been done. He, who makes separate Pīṇḍas, becomes a destroyer of the departed Manes. (18)

* A deceased person is called Prēta till the celebration of the Sapindikaran-S'rāddha, after which he is designated Pitti.
After the death of his father, a son should be well instructed in the word Piṇḍa. He should, every day, offer boiled rice and a pitcher, full of water, according to the rites to be performed for a deceased person. (19)

The annual Śrāddha, which should be performed every year, must be done according to the regulation of a Pārvaṇa-Śrāddha. Such is the eternal law.* (20)

[Every rite] for the parents, such as the offering of the Piṇḍas, should be performed by the sons. In the absence of a son, the wife should do it; and in the absence of a wife, the uterine brother should do the same. (21)

I have thus described duly the duties of the householder. [The duty] of women is to serve their husbands. There is no other duty laid down for them. (22)

He, who daily satisfies his own duties and has his mind dedicated to Īśvara, attains to that great station which has been highly spoken of in the Védás. (23)

CHAPTER VIII.

Penances for Various Sins.

Penance for Brahminicide.

The destroyer of a Brāhmaṇa, one who drinks spirituous liquors, a thief, and the violator of the preceptor's bed, and the one who associates with them,—are the great sinners. (1)

He, who lives for a year in their company, becomes

* This is the ritual when the father dies after becoming a Sannyásin or when the parents die on an Amávasya-day.
degraded. Even he, who daily sits [with them] on [the same] bed and seat, also, becomes degraded. (2)

A twice-born person, who knowingly performs religious rites for, holds sexual union with, teaches and takes meals with [those great sinners], becomes forthwith degraded. (3)

A twice-born one, who unwillingly and out of ignorance, receives religious instructions [from such a sinner] and a fellow-student remain outcasted for one year. (4)

One, who is guilty of Brahminicide, should, for self-purification, by making a hut, begging alms and carrying a rod with the skull of a dead [Brâhmaṇa] placed on its top, live in a forest for twelve years. (5)

He should avoid all the houses belonging to the Brâhmaṇās and temples. He should always accuse his ownself and think of the [dead] Brâhmaṇa. (6)

Every day when the fire is shorn of its smoke and all conversation about food is stopped, gradually he should enter into seven houses belonging to qualified castes and capable [of offering alms]. (7)

Or, [for purification,] he should voluntarily betake to fasting, jump down from a high place, enter into a burning fire or into the water. This is the first [part]. (8)

Or, for a Brâhmaṇa or a cow, he should, disinterestedly, give up his vital airs (i.e., life); or, making a Vipra, suffering from a long-standing disease, shorn of his ailment, [he attains to purification]. (9)

By offering food to a learned [Brâhmaṇa], one is freed from [the sin of] Brahminicide. A twice-born person is [also] purified by taking the final bath in a Horse-Sacrifice. (10)

The killer of a Brâhmaṇa, who gives his all unto a Brāhmaṇa conversant with the Veda, or who sees the Bridge,* is freed from sins. (11)

Penance for Drinking Spirituous Liquors.

A DRINKER of spirituous liquors should drink wine, red-hot like iron. A twice-born person, when his body is [thus] burnt, is freed from [the sin]. (12)

Or by drinking red-hot cow’s urine, or [similar] liquidified cowdung, milk, clarified butter or water, [he is] freed from the sin. (13).

Or for the expiation of the sin, he should, with a wet cloth on and being self-controlled, perform the vow of Brāhmanicide (for twelve years). (14).

Penance for the Theft of Gold.

A Brāhmaṇa, who has stolen gold, should, after approaching the king and describing his own misdeeds, once say,—“Do thou punish me.” (15)

Taking up the mace, the king should himself once strike him. Thereupon he [the perpetrator] becomes freed [from the sin]. Or by [practising] austerities a Brāhmaṇa-thief becomes freed]. (16)

Finding out and taking up by the hand a destructive mace, stick, or an iron rod sharpened on both ends, running about with dishevelled hairs, trumpeting his own sinful deeds, [a perpetrator of a crime should say,—] “Punish me.” The king should [then] strike the thief. (17—18).

Whether meeting with death or escaping it, thereupon, he is freed from [the sin of] theft. Without

* This refers to the Bridge, constructed by Rama over the Sea, at Rames’waram, in the District of Madura, in the Madras Presidency, popularly known as Adam’s Bridge. This shows that this Samhitā must have been written after the Rámayana Period.
punishing [a thief], a king is visited with the sin of the thief. (19)

The fruit (i.e., the sin) of gold-theft [committed by] another (i.e., a Brähmanā), is dissipated by [the performance of] austerities. Putting on a tattered cloth, a Brähmanā should practise the Brähma-vow in the forest [for twelve years]. (20)

By [either] taking the final bath in a Horse-Sacrifice, or by giving unto the Brähmanās gold equal to the weight of his own body, a twice-born person is [also] purified. (21)

A Brähmanā-thief of gold, for the expiation of that sin, leading a continent life, should practise hard austerities for a year. (22)

Penance for Knowing a Step-Mother.

By knowing a step-mother, under the influence of lust, a Brähmanā should embrace a female-form, made of black iron after his heart and heated. (23)

Or having cut off himself his generative organ and testes and taken them in his palms, he should proceed straight on to the south or to the west till the destruction of his body. (24)

Or, for expiation, he should meet with death for his preceptor, or he should practise the Brahma-vow [for twelve years]. In a year [he is also purified] by embracing the branch [of a tree] full of thorns. (25)

Being self-restrained he should lie down on earth. A Vipra, being self-controlled and with a tattered cloth on, should practise hard austerities for a year. One, knowing a step-mother, should thus be freed [from the sin.] (26).

The foremost of the twice-born becomes freed [from the sin] by taking the final bath in a Horse-Sacrifice,
Leading a continent life, always practising austerities, taking his meals at the eighth period (i.e., in the night of the fourth day after fasting for three days), standing or seated and lying down on earth,—a man, who has no money,* should thus, in three years, be freed from the sin. (27—28)

Or he should perform four or five Chándráyaṇas. (29)

Penance for the Sin of mixing with the Degraded.

If a twice-born person mixes, out of avarice, with a degraded person, he should once perform, for the expiation of the sin, the penance laid down for him (i.e., the degraded). Such a person, amongst those who associate with the degraded, attains to freedom [from the sin], or he should zealously practise hard austerities for one year. (30—31)

Half is the penance for associating [with them] for six months. Such purificatory rites dissipate even the impurity of the great sinners. (32)

One attains to freedom [from the sin] by taking journeys to holy places situate on this earth. O ye Vipras, a Brāhmaṇa, possessed by lust, after perpetrating the mighty iniquities of Brahmanicide, drinking spirituous liquors, theft, or knowing his step-mother, being self-controlled, should perform [the vow of] fasting at a holy place. (33—34)

Or meditating on Kapardin (S'iva), he should enter into the fire or water. Munis, conversant with religious rites, have not seen of any other means of redemption [for them]. (35)

* It shows that a rich man is freed from the sin by making proper gifts.
CHAPTER IX.

[Penances for Various Minor Sins.]

By willingly knowing his daughter, sister or daughter-in-law, a Vipra should enter into a burning fire. This is the law. (1)

By co-habiting with mother's sister, maternal uncle's wife, or with father's sister, or by knowing sister's daughter, maternal aunt's daughter, or paternal aunt's daughter, one, being self-controlled, [and] after practising hard austerities, should perform four or five Chándrāyaṇas. (2—3)

By knowing a maternal uncle's daughter, one should perform the Chándrāyaṇa. By co-habiting with wife's friend or with her sister, after fasting for a day and a night, one should perform the Taptakrichha (a kind of penance). By knowing a woman in [her] menses, [one should attain] purification [by fasting] for three nights. (4—5)

By co-habiting with a Kshatriya-woman, [a Brāhmaṇa] is purified by a Chándrāyaṇa or by a Parāka (a kind of penance). The Divine Unborn (Brahmā) has said so. (6)

By [consciously] killing a frog, mongoose, crow, cat, boar, mouse or a dog,—a twice-born person should perform a great penance extending over sixteen days. Or by [unconsciously] killing a dog, one should zealously drink milk for three nights. (7)

Or by [unknowingly] killing a cat or a mongoose, one should wend a way a Yojana [in length]. By killing a horse, a twice-born person should perform a hard austerity extending over twelve [days]. (8).

Having killed a servant, the foremost of the twice-born should give away a weapon made of crude iron.
Having slain a crane, Rânga-mouse, Krîtalambha-boar, a black-spotted raven, Tilâṭ, francolin the partridge or a parrot,—[one should give away] a two-years-old calf; and a three-years-old one, for having killed a heron. (9—10)

By killing a swan, crane, Vaka (a kind of crane), a Titti-bird, a monkey, or a Bhâsa,—one should make a gift of a cow unto a Brahmana. (11)

By slaying animals living on flesh or deer, one should give away a milk-cow; [by killing] animals that do not take flesh, a calf; and [by killing] a camel, gold weighing five rupees. (12)

By killing animals having bones, [one should] present something to a Vipra; and by killing those that have no bones, one is purified by Prânâyâma. (13)

By destroying trees yielding fruits, groves, creepers, and large trees loaded with fruits,—one should recite a hundred Rik-verses. (14)

To take clarified butter is the purification [enjoined for destroying] flowering [plants]. By killing, by mistake, [a cow], one should perform the Chândráyâna and the Parâkâ. (15)

There is no penance, for willingly killing her (i.e., a cow). By stealing men, women, houses, tanks, wells or other watery expanses,—one is purified by the Chândráyâna. By stealing articles of little value from another's house, one should perform the austerest Sántapana for self-purification. The five ingredients supplied by the cow (Pañchagavya) [form] the purification for pilfering rice, etc., and wealth. (16—18)

Fasting for three nights is [the penance for pilfering] grass, wood, trees, flowers, garments, hide, meat and fish. (19)
Fasting for twelve nights is [the penance for stealing] diamonds, corals, precious stones, gold, silver, iron, belmetal and pebbles. (20)

[For robbing] cloven-footed and one-hoofed animals, one should perform the self-same penance (i.e., fasting for twelve nights). [He, who] pilfers birds and medicinal herbs, [should live on] milk for three days. (21)

[There is] no [penance for taking] the meat [of animals] sacrificed unto a deity; [for taking any other meat, one] should perform the Chāndrāyāna. Or, fasting for twelve days, he should offer oblations of clarified butter to the Fire with the Kushmanda-[Mantram]. (22)

By eating [the meat of] a mongoose, owl or a cat, one should perform the Sāntapanam. By eating [that of] a dog, one is purified by performing a mortifying penance or by looking at an auspicious planet. (23)

And he should then perform the initiatory rites as laid down before [by the preceptors]. By eating a porcupine, crane, swan, Karandava (water-fowl), or a Chakravāka,—one should fast for twelve days. By eating a pigeon, Titiva-bird, Bhāsa, parrot, Sārasa (a kind of crane), a leech, or a goose,—one should perform the same penance. By eating a porpoise, bean, meat, fish, or a boar,—one should perform the same penance. By eating a cuckoo, a bird living on fish, a frog, or a snake,—one attains to purification by living, for a month, on barley boiled with the urine of a cow. By eating water-ranging animals, those born in water, those killed by Rākshasas, those having blood-red feet,—one should perform the self-same penance for a week. By taking the meat of a dead or a useless animal procured for one's use, one should perform the same penance for the expiation of the sin. By eating a pigeon, an elephant, a pot-herb, a fowl, a Rajaka. or an alligator,—one should perform the Prájápatya (penance). By eating onion or garlic, one should perform the Chándráyana. (24—31)

[By eating] the Vártāku, (the egg-fruit), or the Taṇḍuliya (broken rice), [or the both],,—one is purified by Prájápatya. [By eating] the As'mantaka (a plant from the fibres of which a Bráhmaṇa's girdle may be made), or what comes near,—one is purified [by performing] the Taptakrichha. By eating [the flesh of] a man or a hare, one is purified by Prájápatya. By eating bottle-gourd or turnip, one should perform the very same penance. (32—33)

By eating Udumvara, one is purified by self-sought [penance of] Taptakrichha. By eating useless (i.e., not dedicated to a deity), Krisara Samjáva (a kind of pudding), Páyasa (rice boiled with milk, cake, S'ushkali (a preparation of cake),—one is purified by performing this penance for three nights. By drinking milk, unworthy of being drunk, [all], especially a Brahmachāarin becomes purified in a fortnight by living on barley boiled with the urine of a cow. By drinking the milk of a cow that has not passed ten nights from the day of delivery, that of a (similar) she-buffaloe, that of a (similar) she-goat, that of a cow big with a young one, or that of a cow that has no calf,—one should perform the self-same penance. By taking unnatural transformations of these (such as, curd, etc.,) or drinking them out of ignorance,—one is purified within seven nights by living on barley boiled with the urine of a cow. By taking food of the first S'raddha, or on the occasion of a birth or death,—a Bráhmaṇa becomes purified by attentively (performing) the Chándráyana. A twice-born person, by taking the food of a person who does not perform the daily rites, the end of which is not ruinous, should fully perform the Chândrâyaṇa. Having taken food prepared by people who are disqualified to serve it, that of a degraded caste, or that offered at the monthly funeral rite of a deceased person,—one [should, so it is said, perform] the Taptakrichha. Having taken boiled rice from a Chandâla, a twice-born person should completely perform the Chândrâyaṇa. (34—41)

By unwittingly taking excreta, urine, or any other article sullied with spirituous liquor,—the three twice-born castes should again perform the Samśkāras (rites of purification). (42)

The twice-born,—amongst those taking, out of ignorance, urine or excreta of birds living upon flesh,—should perform the great Sāntapanam. (43)

[By taking] Bhâsa, frog, dog or a crow,—[one should] perform a distressing penance. A Brâhmana becomes purified by Prâjâpatya and a painfully restricted diet. (44)

By drinking water from a wine-bowl, a Kshatriya should perform the Taptakrichha; a Vaisya, three distressing penances; [and a Brâhmana,] the Chândrâyaṇa. (45)

By taking the residue of food or the remnant of drinking water left by a dog, a twice-born one becomes purified, within three nights, by living upon barley boiled with the urine of a cow. (46)

By drinking water sullied with urine or excreta, one should perform the Sāntapanam capable of purifying the body. (47)

If a Brâhmana unknowingly drinks water in a well or a vessel belonging to a Chandala, he should perform the Santapanam destructive of sins. (48)

By drinking water touched by a Chandala, the foremost of the twice-born becomes purified [by fasting] for three nights or by taking the Pañchagavya.* (49)

By taking food, without bathing after willingly touching a great sinner, a foolish twice-born person should perform the Taptakrichha. (50)

By marrying in another caste (i.e., a S'udra-maiden), one (i.e., a Brāhmaṇa) becomes a Mahāpātakīn (great sinner). By associating with such a sinner, one also becomes a sinner. (51)

By simply marrying a maiden of different caste, twenty-four penances are [to be performed]; half of those, for living with her; there is no penance in procreating a son [on her]. (52)

By taking food, out of ignorance, after seeing a Mahāpātakīn, a Chandala, or a woman in [her] menses,—one is purified [by fasting] for three nights. (53)

By taking [one's] meals, while still wet after bathing, one becomes purified [by fasting] for a day and a night. [By doing so] knowingly, [one attains to purification] with the [performance of] a distressing penance. So the Divine Lotus-Sprung Deity has said. (54)

By eating dry [meat], rotten or foul-smelling articles,—a twice-born person should fast. [He should] do it again and again. (55)

By officiating as a priest for servants, [or by helping] others (i.e., other castes) in other rites, by performing rites causing death to another person, and other

* The five products of the cow taken collectively, i.e., milk, curd, clarified butter, urine and the dung.
unworthy deeds,—[a Brāhmaṇa] becomes purified by three distressing penances. (56)

By performing the cremation of those who have been killed by a Brāhmaṇa, a twice-born person becomes purified by a Prājāpatya, living [all the while] on barley boiled with the urine of a cow. (57)

He, who having his body anointed with oil, passes urine or excreta, or has his beard shaven, or holds sexual intercourse, in the morning, becomes purified [by fasting] for a day and night. (58)

By disregarding (i.e., not performing Homa) Vivāha-Fire for a day, a leading twice-born person becomes purified in three nights; [and by doing so] for three nights again, [one becomes purified by fasting for] six days. (59)

By neglecting it for ten or twelve days, one should perform the most distressing Chāndrāyana for the expiation of that sin. (60)

By accepting an article from an outcaste, one becomes purified by throwing it away. He should, also, duly perform a penance. So has the Divine Lord said. (61)

By desisting from a fast [intended to bring about death] and returning from the order of religious mendicants, one should perform three distressing (Prājāpatyas) and Chāndrāyanas. (62)

[Then] by again performing all the purificatory rites, such as the Jātakarman, etc., twice-born persons [are] purified. They should, having an eye on religion, completely perform this penance. (63)

By not performing a morning adoration and offering sacrificial fuels to the Fire for pressure or urgency of work, [a Brahmachārin],—taking his meals once, and in the night only, [if] an evening [rite is neglected], and after being purified by bathing, governing his mind and restraining his self,—should recite the Gāyatrī eight thousand times and be [thus] purged of [his sin.] (64—65)

If a householder, out of mistake, does not perform his Sandhyā-adoration or deviates from the performance of a Saṅtaka-vow, he should fast for the day. (66)

In consequence of wilfully [neglecting the Sandhyā], the foremost of the twice-born should perform the distressing penance [of Prājāpatya for full one year, and should perform the Chāndrāyaṇa, [if he does so] for livelihood. [And] by making a gift of kine, [he is] purged of [his sins]. (67)

If he does so, prompted by agnosticism, a twice-born person should perform the Prājāpatya. By performing the Taptakrichha, one is purged off of [the sin of] acting against the Deities and preceptors. (68)

By willingly riding a car drawn by camels or asses, one becomes purified [by fasting] for three nights. One should not, being nude, enter into the water. (69)

The purification of the offspring [of sinners, is brought about] by taking food in the night of the third day for a month, the recitation of the Saṁhitā or the performance of Sākala-Homa.* (70)

By putting on a blue or a dark-blue raiment, a Brāhmaṇa should fast for a day and night, and he should purify [himself] by [taking] the Pañchagavya after bathing. (71)

By reciting the Vēdās, Dharma-S'āstras and the

* The rite of offering oblation to the Sacred Fire as followed by the Sākala School of the Rig-Vēda.
Purāṇas before the Chandālas, one is purified by the Chandrāyana. There is no other means of redemption for him. (72)

Having touched, on some occasion, [the dead body of a person] killed by hanging, a Brāhmaṇa becomes purified either by the Chandrāyana or the Prājāpatya. (73)

If, without washing his mouth after taking his meals, a twice-born person touches a Chandāla or any other low-born having still the leavings of food in his mouth, he should perform the Prājāpatya for purification. (74)

By touching a Chandāla, a woman who has given birth to a child, a dead body, a woman in [her] menses or those touched by her, or any outcaste, one should bathe for purification. (75)

If, out of mistake, one touches an article touched by a Chandāla, a woman who has given birth to a child, or a dead body, purification is attained by bathing, rinsing the mouth and [thereafter] reciting the Gāyatrī. (76)

By touching what should not be touched, the foremost of the twice-born should purify [himself] by bathing. And he should [also] rinse his mouth for purification. So the Divine Grandfather has said. (77)

If, on any occasion, a Vipra passes excreta while taking meals, he should then immediately wash himself, bathe, fast and offer libations of clarified butter to the Fire. (78)

By touching the dead body of a Chandāla, the foremost of the twice-born should perform the distressing penance [of Prājāpatya]. Then by [fasting] for a day and night [and] seeing a star in the sky, [he becomes] purified. (79)

Having touched spirituous liquor, a twice-born person should perform the Prāndyayam thrice [for] purification.
[By touching] onion or garlic, one is purified by drinking clarified butter. (80)

Being bitten by a dog [on the lower part of the navel], a Brāhmaṇa should drink milk only in the evening for three days; threefold is the penance, if bitten on the upper part of the navel. (81)

Threesfold is the penance, [if bitten] on the arms; and fourfold, if on the head. Being bitten by a dog, the foremost of the twice-born should, after bathing, recite the Gāyatrī. (82)

An indigent householder,—who, when not suffering from an ailment, daily takes his food without performing the Five Sacrifices,—becomes purified by performing half the Prajāpatya (83)

He, who does not adore the Sacred Fire deposited in his house on Parva-days, (i.e., on the day of the New-Moon, or on the day of any Planetary Conjunction);—as also he, who does not know his wife after the menses;—should perform half the Prajāpatya. (84)

He,—who, without water or entering into water passes urine or excreta,—becomes purified by being immersed in water with a cloth on or by touching it.* (85)

A householder, [who does so by practice], should fast for three days [and] recite the Gāyatrī for eight thousand times. The foremost of the twice-born, who follows the dead body of a Sūdra, should recite the Gāyatrī eight thousand times in a river. A Vipra, by swearing falsely in a matter relating to the destruction of another Vipra, should perform the penance of Chāndrāyana, living on boiled barley. By making unequal gifts in the same row, one is purified by [the distressing penance of \( \text{Prájápatya} \)]. (86—88).

* This is the penance for a person who cannot suppress the motion while in water and so forth.

By getting on the shadow of a lowcaste person, one should drink clarified butter after bathing. By looking at the Sun in an impure state, one should recite the Mantram “Agniindraja.” (89).

By touching human bones, one is purified by bathing. By completing his religious study, a Vipra should beg alms for full one year. (90)

[By becoming] ungrateful to a Bráhmaṇa [after having lived] in his house, [one] should perform the penance for five years. By disregarding an elderly Bráhmaṇa by uttering Hum or Thou, one, after bathing and rinsing the mouth, should, thereafter, please him with salutation. By striking [a Bráhmaṇa] with a reed, by binding his neck with a cloth or defeating him in a dissension, one should gratify him with salutation. By uplifting a rod [to strike him], one should perform a distressing penance; and by [actually] striking him, a most distressing one. (91—93)

By shedding a Bráhmaṇa’s blood, one should perform the most painful of all the penances. And by remonstrating with his preceptor, one should perform a purifying penance. (94)

By spitting before a Deity or a Rishi or reproaching [any of] them aloud, one should, for the expiation of that sin, [fast] one or two nights. (95)

By defeating a Bráhmaṇa in a discussion about Mímaṁśá, one should give away gold. A twice-born person, who passes urine or excreta in gardens attached to temples or who cuts a whole leaf, should, for purification, perform the penance of Chándráyāna. The foremost of the twice-born, who, out of malevolent feelings, passes urine in a temple, should, after cutting off his generative organ, perform the Chândráyana. For vilifying the Deities, the Rishis, or the Védás, a twice-born person should fully perform the Prájápatya. By conversing with such persons, one should, after bathing, adore the Deities. (96—99)

If a woman, in her girlhood, commits a great sin, she should have a penance performed by her father on her behalf. (100)

One can espouse such a maiden, if the penance has been performed. Otherwise he, [who marries her,] should be outcasted. Even in the destruction of a Kshatriya, one should perform, for a year, the penance for Brahmanicide. After that period, one should give away a thousand kine together with a bull. (101)

By killing all (insects, etc.), one should give away gold or silver to the weight of a Míshd. Copper, tin, lead, belmetal and iron are purified by water and earth. All metallic vessels, containing leavings, are purified by ashes and water. Gold, silver, precious stones, conch-shell, pearls, corals, diamonds, ebony, rope and hide are purified by water. (102)

Being touched by a Chandála or a S'wapacha while passing urine or excreta, one is purified by [fasting for] three nights. By taking the residue of food, one should fast for six days. (103)

If one's father, maternal grandfather or elder brother [does not perform] the Tapas and the Agnihotra, there is no sin in the younger brother's marrying before the elder. (104)

He,—who, on the last day of the dark fortnight, adores a Bráhmana-lady, thinking of the Grandfather Brahmá,—becomes freed from all sins. (105)
Having obtained the auspicious day of Amavasya, one should adore Yama (the Regent of the Dead) and Bhava (S'iva). And having fed the Brāhmaṇas [on that day], he becomes freed from all sins. (106)

Having adored, with all the leading Brāhmaṇas, Mahādeva on the eighth, or the fourteenth, day of the dark fortnight, one is freed from all sins. (107)

Having seen the three-eyed Deity with all the ingredients of adoration in the first Yama (part) of the night of the thirteenth day, one is freed from the entire multitude of sins. (108)

By accepting gifts from everywhere, sacrificial presents and a golden image, one is released by performing the Soma-Sacrifice and uttering benedictory verses. (109)

One, by reciting the Gayatri, for ten thousand times, is freed from all sins. (110)

CHAPTER I.

HAVING seen [the import of the Védás], the ascetic Ángiras described, from the beginning to the end, the regulations of penance for the various Varnás amongst the duties of the order of householders. (1)

Having partaken of boiled rice from low caste people, twice-born persons [should perform penances]; [The learned] have laid down the Chándráyana, Kṛichha and one half-[distressing like the latter] for the Bráhmaṇas, Kshatriyas and the Vais'yas [respectively]. (2)

A washerman, cobbler, actor, Varuda, Kaivarta, Méda, and Bhilla,—these seven are described in the Smṛiti as low castes. (3)

When one drinks water lying stale in a vessel in the house of a low caste person, he should perform a penance. (4)

What penance is laid down for the Varnás, if they, out of ignorance, drink water from a vessel or from a well belonging to a Chandála? (5)

A Bráhmaṇa should perform the Sántapanam; a Kshatriya, the Prájápatya; a Vais'ya, half the Prájápatya; and a S'údra, the Pádakṛichha. (6)

By drinking, unknowingly, water from degraded castes, a Bráhmaṇa, fasting for a day and night, becomes purified with the Pañchagavya. (7)

If, on any occasion, a Bráhmaṇa is touched by another Bráhmaṇa who has still the leavings of food in his mouth (i.e., who has not washed his mouth after taking meals), he becomes purified by rinsing his mouth. The ascetic Ángiras has said so. (8)
If he is, on any occasion, touched by a Sūdra who has not washed his mouth after taking meals, he should bathe and recite [the Gāyatrī] and shall become purified by [fasting for] half-a-day. (9)

If a Vipra is [similarly] touched by a Vais'ya, a dog or a Sūdra, he shall, after fasting for one night, become purified with the Pañchagavya. (10)

If [a Brāhmaṇa] is touched by a person who has still the leavings of food in his mouth, by being touched by whom in a pure state he is required to take [a purificatory] bath, he should have to perform the Prājāpatya. (11)

Hereafter I shall describe the regulations relating to the use of clothes dyed with indigo. There is no sin [in using them] while lying down on bed for co-habiting with one's wife. (12)

By rearing up indigo plants, by selling them, and acquiring his livelihood therefrom, a Vipra becomes degraded; and he is freed from the sin by three distressing penances. (13)

[Sacrificial] bath, charity, recitation [of Mantrams], the offering of oblations to the Sacred Fire, Vedic study and the offering of oblations to the departed Manes as well as the [Five] great Yajñas (Sacrifices) become profitless to a person, from the use of a cloth dyed with indigo. (14)

If one, out of ignorance, puts on a cloth dyed with indigo, one, after fasting for a day and night, becomes purified with the Pañchagavya. (15)

If by his carelessness an indigo wood pierces the body of a Brāhmaṇa, and if blood is seen there, the twice-born person should perform the Chāndráyāṇa. (16)

If a twice-born person eats rice boiled with the sticks of an indigo plant, he should, by vomiting out the food, be purified with the Pañchagavya. (17)
The three Varnas should perform the Chāndrāyana, if twice-born persons, carelessly and out of error, eat indigo: for this is the rule. (18)

The food, that is brought by a person putting on a cloth dyed with indigo, stands the giver in good stead, [but] the partaker thereof merely eats sin. (19)

Fasting for a day [is laid down] for Vipras fed with the rice which is boiled by [a person putting on] a raiment dyed with indigo. (20)

The husband of the woman, who on the demise of her consort, puts on a raiment dyed with indigo, goes to hell. The woman, too, [goes to hell] thereafter. (21)

The corns, which one grows on a field sullied with the sowing of indigo, are unworthy of being eaten by the twice-born. By eating [them, one] should perform the Chāndrāyana. (22)

Such a place (i.e., where indigo has been sown), should never be used for a procession with idols, for the dedication of a bull, for celebrating a sacrifice or for making gifts; for the earth [there] has become contaminated. (23)

The ground, where indigo has been sown, remains impure for twelve years and becomes pure thereafter. (24)

One should perform a penance, consisting of one portion, for those kine which are killed by being given [too much] food or drink, or by the administration of medicine. (25)

One should perform half the part of a penance where kine are killed or distressed by the defect of bells or other ornaments; for that has been made for decorating them. (26)

While controlling, binding with a rope, obstruc ting, or by an accident or otherwise, if kine are killed, one should perform the penance of Pādona. (27)
[The branch of a tree] of the bulk of a thumb-joint, measuring an arm in length, covered with leaves and having a top is called a Daṇḍa (rod). (28)

If a person strikes a cow with any [implement] other than the rod mentioned above, twofold is the penance for him for his purification. (29)

In breaking her horns or bones or by lynching her, one should perform a penance for ten nights if she recovers by that time. (30)

[In that case,] one should live on barley mixed with the urine of a cow. This is the most wholesome penance as viewed by Āṅgiras. (31)

Sin does not continue in him for whom, the father or preceptor of an incapable person or child performs a penance. (32)

One, who is aged eighty years, a child of less than sixteen years of age, women and diseased persons are allowed to perform half the penance. (33)

If a cow, when beaten with a stick, swoons away or drops down, [the recitation of] the Gāyatrī for eight thousand times is the purifying penance. (34)

A woman, in [her] menses, becomes pure on the fourth day after bathing. She should perform [a penance] after her menstrual period and never within. (35)

When the cataminal flow of women becomes excessive for any disease, they do not become impure by that: for this is not natural with them but the reverse of it. (36)

One does not become of pure conduct so long as the menstrual flow continues. When the menses is stopped, a woman may be employed in domestic works and known for sexual purpose. (37)

On the first day [of the menses], she is a Chaṭāḷā-woman; on the second, she is the murderess of a Brāhmaṇa; on the third, she is called a washer-woman; and on the fourth day, she becomes purified. (38)

When [a Brāhmaṇa] is touched by a woman in [her] menses, by a dog or by a Sūdra, he becomes purified by the Paṅchagavya after fasting for a night. (39)

A married couple is impure as long as they lie together on bed. Getting up from the bed, a woman becomes pure but the man continues still impure. (40)

One should never rinse his mouth or wash his feet [with water placed] in a belmetal vessel. Belmetal is purified by ashes; and copper, by acid. (41)

A woman is purified by her menses; and a river, by its current. [A stone vessel, etc.,] greatly crusted with impurities, becomes pure by being left on the ground for six months. (42)

Belmetal vessels, smelt by kine and those containing leavings of food partaken of by a Sūdra, are purified by being kept in ashes for ten days. Similarly those, sullied by crows, [are purified]. (43)

The purification of gold and silver [is encompassed] by air and the rays of the sun and moon. (44)

A woolen cloth is not sullied when marked with semen or touched by a dead body. It becomes pure when the part [affected] is washed by water and earth. (45)

By taking dried food, (cakes, etc.,) of his (a Sūdra's) a Vīpra must observe a penance for a week. Food, accompanied with curry, is digested in a fortnight. (46)

Milk and curd [are digested] within a month; and clarified butter, within six months. It is doubtful if oil is digested in the stomach within a year. (47)

He, who continually partakes of a Sūdra's food for one month, becomes a Sūdra in this birth and is born as a dog after death. (48)
Partaking of a S'údra's food, associating with a S'údra, sitting with a S'údra, acquiring knowledge from a S'údra, degrade even one burning with Brahman-energy. (49)

The twice-born person, who utters benediction before a S'údra and salutes him,—that Bráhmaṇa as well as the S'údra go to hell. (50)

A Vípra is purified on the tenth day; and a Kshatriya, on the twelfth day. A fortnight, it is said, [is for] a Vais'ya and a S'údra is purified in a month.* (51)

The soul, the Védas (Vedic study) and the Three Fires,—these five are destroyed, if an Agnihotrin-Vípra partakes of a S'údra's food. (52)

If a twice-born person, being fed by a S'údra's food, procreates sons, those sons belong to him (i.e., the S'údra who gives the food): for semen originates from food. (53)

Any article touched by a S'údra, or any residue of his food, should not be given to a twice-born out of carelessness or with the one palm. So the ascetic A'pastamva has said. (54)

One may always take a Bráhmaṇa's food; a Kshatriya's, on Parva-days; a Vais'ya's, in times of calamity; but never a S'údra's. (55)

[By taking] a Bráhmaṇa's food, [one attains to] poverty; [by taking] a Kshatriya's food, [one becomes] a beast; [by taking] a Vais'ya's food, one becomes a S'údra; [and by taking] a S'údra's food, one, forsooth, goes to hell.† (56)

* This refers to impurity consequent on the birth or death of a Sapinda relation.
† It means that a Bráhmaṇa should not beg his food from another Bráhmaṇa and live thereon. This Sloka entails restriction about taking food from the various castes.
The food, [offered] by a Brāhmaṇa, is ambrosia; that by a Kṣatriya is known as milk; that by a Vaiśya is simple food; and the food [offered] by a S'udra, is certainly blood. (57)

The iniquity of human beings stands resting on their food. One eats the sin of a person whose food he partakes of. (58)

When a Vīpra, who leads the life of a religious student and has mastered his senses, drinks any drink and unknowingly takes any food from persons suffering from the impurity of birth, he should vomit it out, rinse his mouth and bathe after going into the water. Then reciting the Varuṇa-Mantram, he should be qualified to perform his own work. (59—60)

One should leave off his shoes [before entering] the house in which the Sacred Fire is deposited, a cow-pen and the presence of a Deity, or a Brāhmaṇa, [and before] taking his meals, or reciting [the Gāyatrī]. (61)

[If a person] putting on [his] sandals, goes, from his house, to the Five Rooms,* a pious king should cut off his two legs. (62)

An Agnihoṭrin (i.e., who maintains the Sacred Fires), an ascetic, a S'rotrīya, one who has completely studied the Vēdās,—these may go there with [their] sandals on; others must be chastised with punishment. (63)

[On the S'rāddha] of a son who had gone through all the Saṃskāras from the birth to the Chādā, especially after the cremation rite (i.e., on the first S'rāddha), food should be partaken of only by the Sapindas. (64)

* The Five Rooms are,—the room for the Fire, the cow-pen, that of an idol, that of a Brāhmaṇa, the one in which one takes meals and the one in which the recitation of the Gāyatrī is performed.
By taking the food of a professional beggar, that at a new S’rāddha, that at the birth of a child and that at the Garbhādhāna ceremony of a woman, one should perform the Chandrāyāṇa. (65)

One should not eat the food of a maiden, who, after having been promised to be given away in marriage to one, is actually given to another. She is designated Punarbhū. (66)

If abortion takes place before the celebration of the Śāṅkhāiras, Puṁsavāna, or the Simantonnayan, then, it is laid down, [the child in the womb] is purified with [the performance of] the purificatory rites in the second conception. (67)

As long as a pregnant woman remains within ten months (i.e., does not give birth to a child), she should be protected by the king and others. Thereafter some other arrangement should be made. (68)

The food of a woman, who, disregarding the command of her husband, acts against him, should never be taken. She is known as one acting at her will. (69)

One should not take food in the house of a woman who has no issue. He, who does so out of stupefaction, goes to the Pāyasa-hell. (70)

The relations, who out of stupefaction live upon a woman’s wealth or use her clothes and conveyances—sinful wights [as they are], go to hell. (71)

A king’s food steals energy and a Sūdra’s food destroys Brahma-energy. But one, who takes food from persons suffering from impurity, eats the dirt of the [entire] earth. (72)

THE END.

YAMA SAMHITA.

The Dharma-Sūtra (Religious Code), the object of which is to discourse on penances, is founded on the duties of the four Varnas. (1)

Those, who have not been killed by water, fire, hanging, adopting the life of a mendicant, fasting, poison, falling down, Prāya (fasting till death), and self-inflicted strokes of a weapon—all these; [as well as] the drunk, and those interdicted by all persons are purified by the Chāndrāyana and two Taptakṛichhas. (2—3)

The sinful wights, who return from the order of Vānaprastha (hermits), lose both the worlds. By giving away a cow and a bull, they are purified by two Chāndrāyanas. (4)

By cremating the destroyer of a cow, of a Brāhmaṇa, or a person killed by hanging or by cutting off his (viz., the latter's) rope, one should perform a Taptakṛichha. (5)

One, bitten by a worm born in a wound, by a fly or a dog, should perform half the Prājāpatya and make a sacrificial present proportionate to his might. (6)

If pus and blood come out from an ulcer made by worms at a Brāhmaṇa's anus, he becomes purified by the Mouṇji-Homa.* (7)

* The offering of clarified butter to the Fire by a Brāhmaṇa after being invested with a girdle made of triple Muṇja-grass.
If a Kshatriya, a Vais'ya, a S'udra or one belonging to any of the mixed castes, take food knowingly [that pus is coming out of the anus],—they should particularly perform the penance of Chândráyana. (8)

One should make a morsel of the size of the egg of a hen; otherwise for faulty eating, he would never be purified by it. (9)

In the light fortnight, one should increase [the number of morsels] one by one, and decrease it [similarly] in the dark fortnight. One should not take one's meal in the Amávasyá. This is the regulation of the Chândráyana (10)

By drinking Surá (wine) and other spirituous liquors and taking beef, a Vipra should perform the Tapta-krichha. By it that sin is dissipated. (11)

If the performer, when the penance is undertaken, dies, he becomes purified, on that very day, both in this world and the next. (12)

As long as a person, living separate, is not purified by a penance, his other [kinsmen] should not be touched [also]; for they are all polluted. (13)

Their food should not be partaken of; nor any present should be accepted from them; they should not be given lessons in a study; no matrimonial alliance should be made with them; but all those persons, co-parceners of the same property, might become purified after they had repented and performed the penance. (14)

A father, brother, or any other relation should perform the penance for a child whose age is below the eleventh year and above the fifth. (15)

There is no offence or sin for a child younger than this. There is no punishment from the king for him, nor any penance. (16)
One, who is eighty years old, one who is less than sixteen years old, women and diseased persons are allowed to perform half the penance. (17)

What penance should those persons perform, who are touched by Chañḍāla-women and washer-women after the sunset? (18)

By bathing in and drinking the water brought in the day-time and mixed with silver and gold, all those persons attain to purification. So it is laid down in the Smṛiti. (19)

Of Sūdras, food may be taken from a servant, barber, cow-herd, one with whom hereditary friendship is maintained, those who cultivate the same plot of land, and from him who dedicates his own self. (20)

Those ignorant persons, who take food partaken of by a Sūdra, being required to undertake a penance, should perform a Chāndrāyāna. (21)

The father, who does give away [in marriage] his maiden-daughter after she has attained the twelfth year, drinks her menstrual blood, month after month. (22)

By beholding a maiden in [her] menses, her mother, father, and her eldest brother—these three go to hell. (23)

If any Brāhmaṇa, under the influence of lust, marries such a maiden, that Vipra, the husband of Vṛishali, should not be spoken to; nor [should he be] admitted into a row [for the purpose of taking meals.] (24)

A barren woman should be known as a Vṛishali; a woman who gives birth to a dead child, is [also called] a Vṛishali. A Sūdra-woman is to be known as a Vṛishali, and similarly a maiden in [her] menses. (25)

The [sin], that a twice-born person commits by associating with a Vṛishali for a night, is dissipated in three years by living upon food acquired by begging and reciting [the Gàyatrí] daily. (26)

She, who, renouncing her own husband, desires for the company of another man, is to be known as a Vrìshali; a S'udra-woman does not [necessarily] become a Vrìshali.* (27)

There is no redemption for the person who has drunk the saliva of a Vrìshali, has been sullied by her breathing, and has procreated a son on her. (28)

One suffering from white leprosy, one suffering from leprosy, one who has bad nails, one who has black teeth, one who perpetually suffers from a disease, one who has not all the limbs, one who has got an extra limb, a wicked person, one who always envies others, an ugly person, a eunuch, a heretic, one who vilifies the Védās, one who makes false discussion, one who officiates as a priest for the* S'údras, one who officiates as a priest for those to whom no such service should be given, one who is avaricious for gifts, a beggar, one who is addicted to worldliness, one who has got a very small tooth in the rows of teeth, a physician, one who makes a false talk—all these should be carefully shunned at a S'râddha and [while making gifts]. (29—32)

A [Brâhmaṇa who subsists upon offerings made to an idol, one who works as a servant, one who sells the Védās—these should be carefully shunned. Yama has said so. (33)

The departed Manes of the person and the Deities along with the great Rishis, go back disappointed, who engages all these in Havya (sacrifices) and

* This signifies that an unchaste Brâhmaṇa-woman is infinitely worse than a S'údra-woman.
Kavya (the rite of offering oblations to the departed Manes). (34)

[On] seeing a Mahishika* first, the husband of a Vrishali in the middle, and Vardhusika (a usurer) in the end, the departed Manes go back disappointed. (35)

An unchaste wife is called Mahishi. He who forgives her for her sins, is known as Mahishika. (36)

He, who purchasing an article at a fair price, sells it at a higher one, is named Vardhusika. He is the censured of the Brāhmaṇās (i.e., those conversant with the Védās. (37)

So long the boiled rice remains warm, [the Brāhmaṇās] should, abstaining from speech, eat it. So long the virtues of an offering are not mentioned, the departed Manes partake of it. (38)

The virtues ofHAVI should not be mentioned, where the departed Manes are gratified with oblations. On the departed Manes being gratified (i.e., after the Šrāddha is over), the offering should, afterwards, be described as excellent. (39)

The father, residing in the body of a Brāhmaṇa, takes as many morsels of food, as a person, conversant with Mantrams, takes in sacrifices and rites of offering oblations to the departed Manes. (40)

A twice-born person, who has the leavings of food in his mouth, on being touched by such a person, a dog, or a S'údra become purified with the Pañchagavya, after fasting for a night. (41)

Mere bathing is laid down in a case while [one is] touched by [one] having no leavings of food in the mouth. By being touched by [a S'údra] having leavings

* One who lives by the prostitution of his wife.
of food in his mouth, [a Brhadâna] should perform a Prâjâpatya. (42)

As long as the Vîpras are not adored with complete feeding and gold, so long that sin is not dissipated, even if one has performed a hard penance. (43)

If one's body is encircled by crows, cranes or vultures, or is touched by an unholy object, or if [such an article] touches the mouth or the body, the purification of such a person, sullied with a paste, [is effected] by bathing. (44)

If leaving aside the hands, the limbs [situate] above the navel are sullied [by the excreta of a crow, etc.], the upper part [is purified by] bathing; and the part beneath [the navel], by being rubbed with earth and water. By this only [the upper and lower limbs] are purified. (45)

In taking what should not be eaten, or what should not be drunk, or what should not be eaten by licking, or semen, urine or excreta,—what should be the penance? 46)

The leaves of lotus, Udumvara, Villwa, Kus'â, fig and Palâs'â [should be boiled with water]—by drinking this decoction for six nights, one becomes purified. (47)

A Vîpra,—who, being safe in a fire and a life of mendicancy, returns, lives disregarding the adoration of the Sacred Fire, and wishes again to enter upon the domestic mode of life,—should perform three Prâjâpatyas, and three Chândrâyanas. He becomes again purified with the Jâtakarma and [other SamSkâras] mentioned before. (48—49)

A mattress filled with cotton (or a painter's brush], pillows, flower, and crimson-coloured raiments, become purified by being dried in the sun and sprinkled [with water]. (50)
By knowing the place, time, one's ownself, articles, the necessity of articles, the cause and circumstances, one should perform a religious rite. (51)

A road, mud, water, articles made of iron, grass and brick-built houses, are purified by the air and the solar rays. (52)

When an occasion for bathing arrives in the case of a person suffering from a disease, one, who is healthy, should bathe ten times and touch him. By it, the diseased person becomes purified. (53)

A washerman, a cobbler, an actor, a Varuda, a Kaivarta, a Mēda, and a Bhilla—these seven are known in the Smṛitis as the degraded castes. (54)

By knowing the women of these castes, [a Brāhmaṇa] should perform a Taptakrichha. (55)

What is the penance laid down for various castes, when women in [their] menses touch each other? (56)

By touching a woman in [her] menses, belonging to the same family or having the same husband, either knowingly or unknowingly,—[one, i.e., a woman in her menses] becomes purified by bathing in proper time. (57)

A Brāhmaṇa-woman and a Sūdra-woman, both in [their] menses, touching each other, the first becomes purified by a Prājāpatya; and the Sūdra-woman, by a Pada (portion) [of a Prājāpatya]. (58)

A Kṣatriya-woman and a Sūdra-woman, touching each other while in [their] menses, the former should perform a penance complete in all parts; and the latter, half [its] portion. (59)

A Vais'ya-woman and a Sūdra-woman, touching each other while in [their] menses, the former should perform a Padakrichha; and the latter, half of it. (60)

If touched by a dog, a goat, a jackal, or an ass, a woman in [her] menses should remain fasting for that period (i.e., the period of menstruation) and purify [herself] by bathing in time (i.e., on the fourth day.) (61)

Being touched by Chandâlas, a woman in [her] menses [shall be purified] by the penance of Prâjâpatya; and one who is not in menses, by a century of Prânâyamâs. (62)

Being touched [by a woman in her menses] or by a degraded caste in the night, a Vipra should bathe, before the Fire, with the water brought during the daytime. (63)

Water is always holy when touched by the solar rays during the day, and by the rays of the stars in the night; at the two periods of junction and in the evening. (64)

If a twice-born person drinks water touched with the nails and fingers at the time of rinsing his mouth, he clearly drinks spirituous liquor. Such is the deliverance of Yama. (65)

In a ditch, tank, well, by [the strokes of] stones, by the stroke of weapons, by that of a stick or clod of earth, in a cow-pen, in an obstructed place, while being tied with a rope, in a cow-shed set up in a limited form, [being tied] to a wood, under a tree, in a place where it is difficult to come from, when tied with a rope or cloth,—I have told thee, that these are dangerous places for kine—whenever and under whatever circumstance, a cow may happen to die, one should perform a penance. (66—68)

[By killing a cow] with the stroke of a wood, [one should perform] the Prâjâpatya. Twofold is [the punishment, when killed] with a stone; when killed in a ditch, [one should perform] half the penance; and a Padakrichha, when killed under a tree. When [killed] with the stroke of a weapon, one should perform three penances; and two, [when killed] with the stroke of a stick. (69—70)

When [a cow] is strangled to death by a cloth, the slayer of the cow is purified by one Prâjâpatya. He should live amongst the kine near a river or a dreary forest, [and] shave, in the first part, the hairs of the body; in the second, the beards; in the third, the hairs, excepting the tuft on the crown; and in the fourth, the tuft too. (71—72)

The heads of women should not be shaven: they should neither follow a cow, nor pass the night in a cow-pen. Nor should they recite the Vaidic Mantram. (73)

Having taken up all the hairs, one should cut them off to the measurement of two fingers. This is the shaving of the head for women according to the Smrīti. (74)

Impurity originates, both on the birth and death of a person. But there is no impurity [on the death of] a sinful person. (75)

One should, in the evening, abstain from four works,—viz., from taking meals, sexual intercourse, [and] sleeping [these three], and Vedic study [forming] the fourth. (76)

From taking meals, [at that time], originates a disease; from sexual intercourse, a very wicked offspring is conceived; from sleep, prosperity disappears; [and there is] certain death in Vedic studies. (77)

O foremost of the twice-born, desirous of well-being unto ignorant castes, these institutes have been described by me; determine them with care. (78)

CHAPTER 1.

HAVING saluted Atri, the foremost of those conversant with the Védás, informed of the regulations of all the Scriptures, adored of all the Rishis, seated at ease after offering oblations at an Agnihotra, all [the Rishis] gave vent to these words:— 'For the behoof of all the worlds, describe, O lord, unto us [the religious institutions]. (1—2)

Atri said:—

"O ye conversant with the essence of the Védás and other Scriptures, I shall describe all that has been seen and heard by me [for the determination of] the doubt [about] which you have asked me. (3)

Having rinsed his mouth with the waters of all the sacred places, bowed unto all the Deities, and recited all the Súktas, Atri, following all the Scriptures, determined, for the four Várñas, a Religious Code, destructive of all sins, eternal and dissipating all doubts. (4—5)

Listening to this most excellent Code of religious injunctions, those, who commit iniquities in this world, and others, who vilify religion, are freed from all sins. (6)

Therefore this should be carefully studied by those who are conversant with the Védás and be communicated fairly unto disciples endued with good conduct. (7)

[The knowledge of] this Sústra should not be given by the foremost of the twice-born, unto those born in bad families, those leading a bad life, those who are foolishly ignorant, and deceitful twice-born persons. (8)

Even, if the preceptor communicates one letter to a disciple, there is no article on earth, by presenting which he may be freed from his debt. (9)

He, who does not regard a preceptor, the giver of even one letter, is born amongst the Chaṇḍālas after having gone through a hundred births in the canine species. (10)

He, who having taken [lessons in] a Vēda, disregards the other Scriptures, is immediately born in the species of beasts for twenty-one times. (11)

Those men, who perform their respective duties, become, by following their own works, beloved of the people, even if they live at a distance. (12)

To celebrate sacrifices, to make gifts and to study the Vēdās—[these three are] the religious works of a Vipra; to accept presents, to deliver instructions [in the Vēdās], and to officiate at sacrifices [are the means of his] livelihood. (13)

To celebrate sacrifices, to make gifts, and to study [the Vēdās], [are] the religious works of a Kshatriya; to live by arms, to protect mankind [are his means of] livelihood. (14).

To make gifts, to study [the Vēdās], and to celebrate sacrifices [are the religious works of] a Vais'ya; and agriculture [is his secular work]. To serve the twice-born [is the religious work of] the S'ūdras; and the work of art [is his secular work]. (15)

By following these Institutes [which] have been described by me, the Varnas come by most excellent condition after attaining to great honours in this world. (16)

The king, who punishes them who, renouncing their own religion, follow another's, becomes glorified in the celestial region. (17)

By following his own religion even a S'udra enjoys the celestial region. Another's religion should be renounced like the most beautiful wife of another person. (18)

The S'udra, who engages in the recitation [of the Gáyatrí] and the offering of oblations to the Sacred Fire, should be killed by the king; for by that he becomes the destroyer of the kingdom as the water is of fire. (19)

Acceptance of gifts, giving instructions [in the Védás], selling an article which should not be sold, and officiating as a priest at a sacrifice—the doing of these four, [is described] in the Smritis as outcasting the Kshatryiya and the Vais'ya. (20)

[By selling] meat, shell-lac and salt, [a Bráhmana] becomes immediately outcasted. By selling milk, a Bráhmana becomes a S'udra within three days. (21)

The king should punish, with life, the village harbouring thieves by giving alms to the twice-born, who do not perform religious rites and study the Védás. (22)

The kingdom, where the ignorant partake of the food which should be taken by the learned, courts draught (want of rain); or a great calamity appears there. (23)

There the god of rain pours down showers where the king adores these—the Bráhmanás learned in the Védás and well-versed in all the scriptures. (24)

Formerly the Bráhmanás were created for protecting all these, the three regions (heaven, earth, and firmament), the three Védás (Rik, Yajush, and the Sáman), the A's'ramas (orders), and the three Fires. (25)
The twice-born perform both the Sandhya-adorations by abstaining from speech, remain gloriously in the celestial region for a thousand celestial years. (26)

The king, who examines the virtue and sin [of all the four Varṇas], attains to fame, celestial region and solidarity of [his] kingdom; and his treasury becomes replenished again. (27)

The punishment of the wicked, the adoration of the pious, the enrichment of the treasury by fair means, impartiality towards those who approach him with prayers, and the protection of the kingdom,—these five have been spoken of as the sacrifices for the kings. (28)

The Brāhmaṇas, by a thousand sacrifices, do not attain to that piety which the kings do by protecting their subjects. (29)

In the absence of watery expanses attached to temples, [one should bathe] in lakes and ponds. By taking up four Pīṇdas [made of clay], one should bathe [in a tank] belonging to another. (30)

Fat, semen, blood, marrow, urine, excreta, dirt of the ears, nails, phlegm, bones, dirt of the eye, and drops of perspiration,—these twelve are the dirt of men. (31)

The purification of each six, in order, has been described by the learned sages;—the first six [are purified] by earth and water; and the second six, by mere water. (32)

Purity, desire for doing good unto others, absence of exertion,, absence of jealousy, absence of avarice, self-restraint, charity and mercy are the characteristics of a Brāhmaṇa. (33)

A really accomplished person does not try to suppress another's merit: he praises another's accomplishments;
he does not laugh at another's shortcomings; [such a spirit] is called Anasúyá (want of jealousy). (34)

Renunciation of forbidden food, association with those who are not badly spoken of, and abiding by good conduct—is spoken of as S'oucha (purity). (35)

To follow good conduct always and to renounce a bad one, has been described as Mangala by the Rishis well-read in Religious Codes. (36)

One should not do, to an excess, what afflicts the body, whether good or bad. This is called Anáyása (want of exertion). (37)

One should be contented with all articles, whenever what arrives; one should not long for another's wives; this is called Asprihá (want of desire). (38)

If external or spiritual pain is created by others, and one is not offended and does not wreak revenge, it (i.e., the spirit) is called Dama. (39)

Even from a limited income, something should be given away daily with care and liberal spirit. This is called Dána (charity). (40)

One should behave, like his own self, towards others, his own relations and friends, him who envies him, and an enemy. This is called Dayá (mercy). (41)

A twice-born person, even if he be a householder, who is possessed of all these marks, attains to the highest station [after death], and is not born again in this world. (42)

Maintenance of the Sacred Fires, and the adoration of the Vis'wadévás are called Ishta (holy ceremony or sacrifice). (43)

[The excavation of] tanks, wells, and other watery expanses, [the construction of] temples, [the distribution of] food, and [the laying out of] pleasure-gardens are called Purta (acts of pious liberality). (44)

Both Ishta-, and Purta-, [acts] should, with care, be performed by a Brāhmaṇa. By the Ishta one attains to the celestial region; and by the Purta, emancipation. (45)

Twice-born persons have equal rights in the religious acts of Ishta and Purta. A Sūdra is qualified to perform the Ishta, but not the Vedic rites. (46)

A learned person should always observe the Yamas (moral or religious duties or observances), but not the Niyamas (religious austerities) daily. By performing the Niyamas always and disregarding the Yamas, one becomes degraded. (47)

Absence of cruelty, forgiveness, truthfulness, abstention from injury, charity, simplicity, love, cheerfulness, sweetness [of temper], and mildness,—these are the ten Yamas. (48)

Purity, [celebration of] sacrifice, austerity, [making] gift, Vedic study, abstention from undue sexual intercourse, [observance of] vow, abstention from speech, fasting and bathing,—these ten are the Niyamas. (49)

One should immerse an image made of Kus’ā-grass in sacred waters. He, for whom it is immersed, gains eight parts of the purity. (50)

[The person],—mother, father, brother, friend, or the preceptor, for whom one bathes,—attains to twelve portions of the fruit [thereof]. (51)

The representative of a son should be appointed by a sonless person* with care, for the rite of offering Pinda and water. (52)

* i.e., should adopt a son.
If a father sees the face of a living son born, he is freed from the debt he owes to his ancestors and attains to immortality. (53)

With the very birth of a son, a father is freed from his ancestral debt and attains to purification on that very day, for he (i.e., the son) liberates him from the hell. (54)

Many sons should be desired: for if any [of them] would go to Gayā, or celebrate a Horse-Sacrifice, or dedicate a Neela Vrisha.* (55)

All the departed Mane's, dreading hell, desire for "the son, who would go to Gayā and become our saviour." (56)

By bathing in the holy [river] Phālgu, seeing the Deity Gadādhara (the holder of mace, Vishṇu) and touching the head of Gayā (Asura) with his feet, one is freed [even] from [the sin of] Brahmanicide. (57)

He who touching the water of a great river [like the Ganges] gratifies the Pitrīs with oblations of water, attains to eternal regions and delivers his own family. (58)

Listen to me discoursing, I shall describe the [means of] purification of the food [when it is taken] in a dangerous place, where there is no desirable and pure food. (59)

A Brāhmaṇa should take food for three days without salt or drink the extract of powerful Brāhmi-tree or S'aukhapushpi with milk. (60)

If a twice-born person, out of ignorance, drinks water from a vessel used for spirituous liquors, what is

---

* A bull that has white tail, hoops and horns and other limbs red.
his penance, and by what rite is he freed [from the sin]? (61)

By making a decoction [of] Palās’a, Villwa, Kus’a, lotus and Udumvara, leaves, one should drink it; [by doing so] for three nights, one attains to purification. (62)

He, who out of carelessness fails to perform the Sandhyā once, either in the morning or in the evening, should, with a concentrated mind, recite, after bathing, the Gāyatrī for a thousand times. (63)

If laden with grief or being fatigued, one goes out (i.e., fails to do) the bathing and recitation, one should, with reverence, perform the Brahma-Kurchha, and purify [oneself] by making gifts. (64)

One, bitten by a serpent, shall be purified by bathing in the water on the horns of kine, or at the confluence of great rivers, or by seeing the ocean. (65)

If a Brāhmaṇa is bitten by a wolf, dog, or a jackal, he shall be purified by drinking clarified butter mixed with water [sanctified with] gold. (66).

But a Brāhmaṇa-lady, if bitten by a dog, jackal, or a wolf, shall be immediately purified on seeing the rise of a star or a planet. (67)

Bitten by a dog, a person, while in the observance of a vow, should fast for three nights. By eating barley boiled with clarified butter, he should bring about the termination of his vow. (68)

He, who breaks a religious observance out of stupor, faction, ignorance or avarice, shall be purified by [fasting for] three nights. He should again undertake that religious observance. (69)

If a Brāhmaṇa unknowingly takes the residue of another Brāhmaṇa's food, he becomes purified by reciting the Gāyatrī for a couple of days. (70)

If a Brāhmaṇa unknowingly takes the residue of a Kshatriya's food, he becomes purified by fasting for three nights. As in the case of a Kshatriya, so it is in that of a Vais'ya. (71)

By taking forbidden food, the residue of a food partaken of by a Sūdra or a woman, or by eating forbidden meat, one should drink the extract of barley for seven nights. (72)

Bathing is laid down [for a person] touched by a dog. By partaking of the food taken by a dog, he should perform a distressing penance for six months. (73)

By being touched by castes that should not be touched, one should bathe. He, who takes the residue of their food, should perform a distressing penance for six months. (74)

By unknowingly taking excreta, urine or articles contaminated by spirituous liquor, the three twice-born Varnas should have again to perform all the purificatory rites. (75)

In performing again the purificatory rites, twice-born persons would not be required to shave their heads, hold girdles, carry staffs, or perform the practice of begging alms. (76)

I shall now describe the purification of a house contaminated by a dead body being placed inside. Earthen vessels and boiled rice of the place should be left off. (77)

By taking out all those articles from the house, one should have it pasted with cowdung; and, then, smelt by a goat. (78)

Being sanctified with the Brāhma-Mantraṃ and sprinkled with the water of Kuś'a and gold that house becomes purified. There is not the least doubt in it. (79)

A twice-born person, having been forcibly misguided by a king, or a degraded caste, should first undergo through all the purificatory rites and then perform three distressing penances. (80)

Bathing is laid down for him who is touched by a dog. By taking the residue of its food, he should, with care, perform the distressing penance [of Prâjá-patya]. (81)

I shall, hereafter, describe the regulations about impurity. And later on I shall, again, discourse on penances. (82)

A Brâhmaṇa, who maintains the Sacred Fires and is well-read in the Vêdas, becomes purified in one day; one, who has only mastered the Vêdas, in three days; and one, who is shorn of all accomplishments, in ten days. (83)

There is no impurity for a person who, being purified by (i.e., according to the injunctions of) the S'ástras, is engaged in the performance of a religious rite, as well as for him who maintains the Sacred Fires, for the king, and for him for whom a Brâhmaṇa so desires. (84)

A Brâhmaṇa becomes purified in ten nights; a Kshatriya, in twelve days; a Vais'ya, in fifteen days; and a S'údra, in a month. (85)

Funeral cakes and water should be offered to all the Sapinda, born in the same family, up to the seventh generation. Impurity, consequent on a death, should follow the same [precedent]. (86)

The impurity [consequent on a birth] extends for ten nights in the fourth generation; for six days, in the fifth; for three nights, in the sixth; for two days, in the seventh; for one day, in the eighth; and two praharas, in the ninth. In an impurity, consequent on a birth, in the tenth [generation], one becomes purified by mere bathing. (87—88)

The impurity, of female servants and of wives taken from inferior castes, consequent on a death or a birth, should be like that of the husband; and the husband being dead, [the impurity should be [like that of] the family of birth. (89)

The third [person], touching a dead body, 'i.e., one, who touches a person touching one who has touched a dead body,) should bathe with his raiment on; the fourth, should eat by begging from seven houses. Such is the regulation, of the Smṛiti, relating to the touching of a dead body. (90)

[On the birth or death of a co-wife’s son], the impurity, of wives married at the same time and living conjointly, should be like that of their husband. [But] when living separately, [their impurity would be] separate (i.e., according to each one’s caste). (91)

By drinking the milk of a she-camel or that of a she-goat, or by taking food [rendered impure] on account of a birth or death, or that of a cook, or that at a new S’ráddha, one should perform a Chándráyāna. (92)

The man, who partakes of an impure food having an irreligious act in view (i.e., with a desire of not performing the Sandhyā-adoration, etc.,) should fast for three nights and reside in the water for one night. (93)

On the occasion of a birth or death, one should not make arrangements for any great sacrifice, but with dry food or fruits, one should perform [the usual] Homa. (94)

Immediate is the purification, if a child dies within ten days of its birth; [no impurity, consequent on its] birth or death, should continue. (95)

After the ceremony of tonsure, [a boy] is qualified to perform the rite of offering water and funeral balls and recite the Swadhā and the name. (96)

A religious student and a Yatin [become immediately purified]. In the recitation of the Mantrams determined upon before, in a sacrifice, and in a marriage [wherein the rite of the Vṛiddhi-S'radḍha has been performed], immediate purification is laid down. (97)

There is no sin, if any intervening impurity, consequent on a birth or death, takes place, in the celebration of a marriage, festivity, or a sacrifice, determined upon before. So Atri has said. (98)

The purification, it is laid down, [for the impurity] of touching, on account of the birth of a stillborn child, [is effected] by rinsing the mouth, if one has not touched the mother who has given birth to such a child. (99)

The touching of a Kshatriya on the fifth day, and of a Vais'ya on the seventh day, is known (i.e., sanctioned) by the learned. (100)

The touching of the S'udra on the tenth day has been sanctioned by the learned. On the occasion of a birth or death, the purification of self is effected in a month. (101)

Perpetual impurity attaches to one who is always sickly, one who does not perform religious rites, one who is ignorant, one who is notoriously henpecked, one who is grossly inclined to vile practices, one who is always dependent upon others, and one who abstains from Vēdic study and the vow of celibacy. (102—103)

Two Prājāpatyas are laid down in the Srmiti for a Parivitti (an elder brother whose younger brother is married before him); one, for the maiden [so married]; the most distressing of all penances, for the person who gives away [a maiden in such a marriage]; and Sántapanam, for the Parivēttā (a younger brother married before his elder brother). (104)

There is no sin in a younger brother's marrying before his elder, [if the latter is] hunchbacked, dwarf, lame, of censurable conduct, ignorant of the Vēdas, or by birth blind, deaf or dumb. (105)

[The elder brother] being a eunuch, residing in another country, being outcasted, adopting the life of renunciation, being devoted to the study of the Yoga- Sāstra, there is no sin in the younger brother's marrying before his elder. (106).

There is no sin in the younger brother's marrying before his elder, if his father, grandfather or elder brother had not been qualified to maintain the Sacred Fires. (107)

In the case of the death [of the elder brother's wife, or in the case of his going to another country, or on his being sullied with a sin, [a younger brother] becomes qualified [to maintain the Sacred Fire]. (108)

If the eldest brother lives near, but does not maintain, the Sacred Fire, [a younger brother], permitted by him, may do so; such is the deliverance of S'āṅkha. (109)

[The maintenance of] the Sacred Fire, [the study of] the Vēdas, [the practice of] the austerities shall not contaminate [a younger brother] with the sin of taking before. But a younger brother can never perform a S'rāddha without the permission [of the eldest brother]. (110)

The daily and occasional rites described in the S'ruti and the religious rites performed with the sole intention of attaining to the celestial region, one should always perform and acquire piety therefrom. (111)

In the light-fortnight, one should increase [the number of morsels] one by one, [and similarly] decrease it in the dark-fortnight. One should not take meals on the Amávasyá. Such is the regulation about Chándrāyana. This had been described by the ancient sages as destructive of mighty iniquities. (112)

Sins, begotten of heinous crimes [like Brahmanicide, etc.], do not touch one who is given to the study of the Védas, forgiving, and devoted to the performance of great sacrifices. (113)

By seeing the sun during the day, living on air only, and reciting the Gáyatrí a thousand times, and living in the water during the night, one becomes purified except in Brahmanicide. (114)

[One attains to purification] by drinking the decoction of lotus, Udumvara, Vilwa, Kus'a, As'watha, and Palás'a, leaves. This is called Parnaśkrichha. (115)

By drinking the Pañchagavya, (milk, curd, urine of a cow, cowdung, and clarified butter made of the milk of a cow), one should fast the next day. This is the regulation about Sántapana. (116)

By taking each article of the Sántapana (such as the milk, curd, etc.,) for six days, one should fast on the seventh. This penance, extending over seven days, is called, in the Smriti, Mahá-Sántapana. (117)

[One should take these articles] in the evening for three days, and in the morning for three days; [then one should] take unsolicited food for three days; then one should take no food for three days; this is the regulation of the Prájápatya described in the Smriti. (118)
[In this penance,] twelve morsels in the evening; fifteen, in the morning; and twenty-four, [in the period] when unsolicited [food is to be taken] ;—are sanctioned by the Smṛiti. One should, as laid down in the Smṛiti, fast [for the last three] days. (119)

[One should] take only one morsel [only] every three days as before, and fast for the last three days. This is called Aṭiktṛichhrah. (120)

Know that for purification, a body-purifying morsel should be made of the size of a hen-egg or of the size of that which could conveniently be taken in one's mouth. (121)

[In a Taptakṛichhrah,] one should drink hot water for three days; and hot milk for [another] three days. And drinking hot clarified butter for three days, one should live on air for [the next] three days. (122)

One should drink water to the measure of six palas [for three days], and milk to the measure of three palas [for another three days]; and one pala of clarified butter [for the next three days]. Such is the regulation of the Taptakṛichhrah. (123)

One should take curd for three days; clarified butter for three days; [and] milk for [another] three days; and live on air for [the next] three days. (124)

One should take curd and milk to the measure of three palas and one pala of clarified butter. This is called the sacred Vedic penance of Kṛichhrāh. (125)

One should take one meal for a day, live on unsolicited food for one night and fast for a day. This is called Pādakṛichhrah. (126)

If one lives on milk for twenty-one days, [the penance is called Kṛichhrātikṛichhrah. And it is called Parāka when one fasts for twelve days. (127)
If one takes every day a morsel of oil-cake, curd and powdered grain [for four days] and fasts for another day, [the penance] is called Soumyakrichhraḥ. (128)

If each one of all these is performed, in order, for three days, (the penance) is known as Tulāpurusha [extending over] fifteen days. (129)

One should drink the tepid milk flowing from [the udders of] a Kapilā-(cow) when milched. This is the penance Vyāsakritah (performed by Vyāsa). It purifies even a Chandāla. (130)

To take meals in the night is known as Nakta (Vrata or night penance). Chāndrāyana is spoken of [as the penance] for sins for which no expiation is laid down. (131)

Persons, having asceticism for wealth, obtain the same fruits by these penances, as they get by performing Agnistoma and other Sacrifices with twofold sacrificial presents. (132)

One, given, to the study of the Vēdas and of forgiving, [disposition], if he makes enquiries into the Dharma-Sāstras; and a householder too, if he is endued with purity and good conduct;—become freed [from sins]. (133)

[The religious rites] of the twice-born have been described. O great Rishi, hear, I shall hereafter describe what brings about the fall of Sūdras and women. (134)

Recitation [of the Gāyatrī], austerity, and journeys to sacred places, adoption of a Sannyāsa-life, practice of Mantrams and adoration of Deities,—these six bring about the fall of women and Sūdras. (135)

The woman, who, during the lifetime of her husband, fasts while performing a religious rite, robs the longevity of her husband. Such a woman goes to hell. (136)
A woman, desirous of bathing in a sacred water, should drink the water washing the feet of her husband, of S’iva or of Vishṇu. She should, thereby, attain to the most excellent station. (137)

A woman is [always] the left limb, the husband being alive or dead; and he, the right one. But in a S’ráddha, sacrifice, and marriage, a wife should always [be placed] in the right. (138)

Soma (the Moon), the Gandharvas, and the Aṅgirah have conferred purity on them; and Fire, all holiness. Women are, therefore, always holy. (139)

By birth, one is known as a Brāhmaṇa; and by the purificatory rites, he is called a Dwija (twice-born). He attains to the dignity of a Vipra by learning; and by these three, to that of a S’rotriya. (140)

He, who studies the Védā-S’āstra and follows the import- of Scriptural injunctions, is called a Védavid (one knowing the Védas); his utterance is sanctifying. (141)

That religion is to be known as the highest which a leading Brāhmaṇa, knowing the Védas, follows—but not that which is followed by ten thousand illiterate persons. (142)

By reciting [the Gāyatrī] and making Homa (offering oblations to the Fire), foremost persons of the twice-born race shine like fire; and [they] meet with ruin, by accepting presents like fire by water. (143)

Like the wind driving away the clouds in the sky, the learned and foremost twice-born persons dissipate the sins begotten of accepting presents, by Prāṇāyāma. (144)

When a Vipra, after taking his meals or rinsing his mouth, remains with a wet hand, he gets his wealth, strength, fame, energy and life lessened. (145)

One should not partake of his food, who, seated on his seat, rinses his mouth in the dining room; and by taking it, one should perform a Chândriyana. (146)

One should not partake of his food, who, placing a vessel on his seat, rinses his mouth; and by taking it, one should perform a Chândrayana. (147)

[If] the foremost of the twice-born, after taking his meals and washing his hands, drinks the water thereof, the Asuras partake of his food; and the departed Manes go back disappointed. (148)

There is no Sôstra superior to the Véda; there is no elderly person superior to the mother; and there is no friend superior to charity both in this world and in the next. But what is given to an unworthy person, consumes the family up to the seventh generation. (149)

When food is offered in an iron vessel, the Celestials do not accept the Havyn; and the departed Manes do not accept the Kavya. That food is like excreta unto him who partakes of it; and the giver, too, goes to hell. (150)

A learned person should not serve food, placed elsewhere, with his left hand; nor should he do it in an iron vessel. (151)

He, who in a S'râddha, feeds the departed Manes in an earthen vessel—both he and the partaker—go to hell. (152)

When other vessels are not available, one may offer [food] in an earthen vessel with the permission of the twice-born persons. Their words, true or false, constitute an authority. (153)
There is no virtue for the person who gives alms in golden, iron, copper, belmetal, or in silver, vessels. The accepter thereof also partakes of sins. (154)

[A Bhikshu] should never, even in a calamity, take his food from belmetal vessels; for the Yatins should take their meals [only] on Palás’a-leaves, and a householder, from a belmetal vessel. (155)

A Yatin, taking his food from a belmetal vessel, reaps the sin of both the belmetal vessel and the householder. (156)

A Bhikshu is not visited by sin by taking food from golden, iron, copper, belmetal and silver [vessels]; but he commits a sin by taking those vessels. (157)

If [one] pours water into [a Bhikshu’s] hands, then offers alms and again pours water—that alms becomes like [the mount] Meru; and that water, like an ocean. (158)

[A Bhikshu] should collect alms by begging from door to door, as a bee collects honey from flower to flower, even from amongst the Mlechchha-families. But food, collected from one house, should not be partaken of even in Vṛihaspati’s house. (159)

One, who, leaving the domestic mode of life, begs boiled rice except in a calamity, should drink Vajra (sour gruel) for ten nights; and water, for three nights. (160)

Barley mixed with the urine of a cow and boiled with clarified butter is called “Vajra.” So the divine Atri has said. (161)

A Brahmacharin, a Yatin, a student, one who maintains his preceptor, a wanderer and a man of poor means,—these six are described, in the Smṛiti, as the Bhikshus. (162)
A mortal should know his enciente wife for [the first] six months; and again, after the child has teethed. Such is the religious prescription. (163)

The first is Brahmanicide; the second is co-habitation with a step-mother; and the third is the drinking of spirituous liquors; the fourth is called theft [of gold from a Brāhmaṇa-master]; the fifth is association with these sinful wights;—these are heinous crimes. (164)

For the purification of these sins, one should perform three penances for three years successively; by it, one becomes freed from the sin of Brahmanicide when committed unknowingly. (163)

It is laid down that one-half [of the sin] of Brahmanicide [visits a man for killing] Kṣatriyas; similarly, six and twelve portions, for [killing] Vais'yas and Sūdras. (166)

The destroyer of a woman is purified by taking his meals in the night and sleeping on earth for three months; and by performing thirty Prājāpatyas. (167)

A twice-born person, who takes food from a washerman, or from an actor, or from one who lives on bamboo-work, should perform a Chāndrāyana. (168)

By knowing women of lowcastes, taking their meals and lying with them on the same bed, one should get [himself] purified with a Parāka. (169)

By drinking the water [that lies] in a Chāndāla's vessel, the foremost of the twice-born should live, for thirty-seven days, on barley and the urine of a cow. (170)

A Brāhmaṇa, who unknowingly partakes of cooked food touched by outcastes or by women in [their] menses, should perform half-a-Prājāpatya. (171)

The [following are the means of] expiation for the four castes when they [happen to] partake of a *Chau-Atri Samhita.

data's food. A Brāhmaṇa should perform a Chāndrayaṇa; and a Kṣatriya, a Sāntapanam. (172)

A Vaiśya should perform a penance and live on the Pañchagavya for six nights. A Sūdra should perform [the same] for three nights and purify [himself] by making gifts. (173)

If a Brāhmaṇa, getting upon a tree, eats its fruits and a Chandāla standing down touches its root, what would be the penance [for that Brāhmaṇa]? (174)

With the permission of other Brāhmaṇas, he should bathe with the cloth on; that Vipra should take his meals in the night [for one day] and purify [himself] by taking clarified butter. (175)

If getting upon the same tree, a Brāhmaṇa and a Chandāla eat the fruits thereof, what then would be the penance [for the former]? (176)

Having obtained permission from [other] Brāhmaṇas, he should bathe with the cloth on. Then after fasting for a day and night, he should purify [himself] by taking the Pañchagavya. (177)

What would be the penance then, when a Brāhmaṇa and a Chandāla getting upon the same branch of a tree eat its fruits? (178)

He becomes purified by taking the Pañchagavya, after fasting for three nights. (179)

The purification for knowing a Mléchchha-woman [consists] in a Sāntapanam, or, it is said, [one may attain to] purification by performing a Taptakṛichhroh. (180)

If a person lives with a wife known by a Mléchchha, [he becomes purified] by bathing with the cloth on and drinking clarified butter. (181)

Again, [for knowing a woman] brought by another for [the purpose of] procreating a son, [one becomes] purified by bathing in the water of a river and drinking clarified butter. (182)

By co-habiting, unknowingly, with the women of the Chandálas, Miéchchhas, Swápáchas, as well as those who observe the Kapála-Vrata,* one is purified by a Paráka. (83)

But if one knows them, willingly, and procreates children, he is degraded to the same caste; there is no doubt in it, for that man is born as her son. (184)

If a twice-born person, being anointed with oil or clarified butter, passes urine or excreta; or if a twice-born person being anointed with oil or clarified butter, touches a Chandála;—he should, after fasting for a day and night, purify [himself] with the Pañchagavya. (185)

By touching hairs, insects, nails, nerves, bones, and thorns, one becomes purified by bathing in river-water and drinking clarified butter. (186)

By touching the bones of a fish, or of a jackal, nails, an oyster-shell, or a small univalve shell, one becomes purified by bathing and drinking hot clarified butter purified by gold. (187)

The purity [or otherwise] of a cow-shed, a boiler-house, oil-mill, sugarcane-press, women and diseased persons should not be discussed (i.e., they are always pure). (188)

A woman is not sullied by being known by another; nor a Bráhmana, by [harmful] Vedic rites; nor a [river] water, by urine and excreta; nor fire, by burning impure articles. (189)

Women were first enjoyed by the Celestials; then, by the moon, the Gandharvas and the Fires. Afterwards

* Lowcastes: offspring of a Brahma-mother and a fisherman father. came men to enjoy them. They are never affected by any sin. (190)

When a woman conceives by being known by a asavarna (i.e., one belonging to a higher caste than she), she remains impure till she does not give birth to a child. (191)

When, after delivery, the menstrual blood is seen, the woman becomes purified like pure gold. (192)

If despite her complete unwillingness, a woman is known deceitfully, forcibly or stealthily, that woman, unaffected by any sin, should not be renounced; for she has not done so willingly. [Her husband] may hold congress with her at the time of the menses, [for a woman] becomes pure at the flowering time. (193—194)

A washerman, a cobbler, an actor, a Varuda, a Kaivarta, a Médá, and a Bhilla—these seven are known, in the Smriti, as degraded castes. (195)

By knowing their women, taking their food and accepting gifts from them, if willingly, one should perform Prájápatya for a year; and, if unknowingly, two Chándráyaṇas. (196)

The woman, who has once been known by the Mléchchhas, or by the perpetrators of crimes, becomes purified with the Prájápatya and the menstrual flow. (197)

The woman, who has once, being taken away forcibly, or herself, by being imposed upon, been thus known, becomes purified with a Prájápatya. (198)

If the menses appears in women who have been practising hard austerities for a long time, their religious observances are not destroyed thereby. (199)

If a twice-born person drinks water from vessels contaminated by spirituous liquors, he becomes purified.
by a Krīchhrapāda and by undergoing the purificatory rites once again. (200)

The trees, belonging to degraded castes and having many flowers and fruits, could be enjoyed by all with their fruits and flowers. (201)

If a twice-born person drinks water touched by a Chāṇḍāla, he becomes purified by a Krīchhrapāda. So the ascetic A'pastamva has said. (202)

What would be the penance for drinking water from a well contaminated by phlegms, shoes, excreta, urine, menstrual blood of a woman and spirituous liquor? (203)

[To fast] for one day, two, and three, days, is the purifying penance for the [three] twice-born castes [severally]. To take meals in the night is the punishment for a Sūḍra. (204)

By touching [an article] immediately vomitted out, a Vipra should bathe with his raiment on; [by touching] what was ejected on the previous day, [one should fast for] a day and a night; [and by touching what was ejected] days before, [one should fast for] three days. (205)

The head, neck, thighs and feet being contaminated with spirituous liquor, one should fast, in order, for ten, six, three and one day. (206)

By once unknowingly drinking spirituous liquors, except Surā- (wine), the foremost of the twice-born becomes purified by living on the urine of a cow and barley for ten nights. (207)

The Celestials do not partake of the food nor drink the water offered by the foremost of the twice-born, who eats the food of a drunkard or of a Chāṇḍāla. (208)

The woman, who falls down from the funeral pyre, [of her husband], or who gets no menses on account... of a disease, becomes purified by a Prājāpatya and feeding ten Brāhmaṇas. (209)

The twice-born persons,—who, returning from a life of mendicancy or coming back alive from water, fire, or from a vow of fasting to death, desire again to lead the domestic mode of life,—should perform three Prājāpatyas or one Chāndrāyaṇa. And it is said that they are required to perform all the purificatory rites beginning with the Jātakarman. (210—211)

No impurity [should be observed], no water [should be offered], no tears [should be shed], no singing of merits, no expression of sorrow, and no living on a bare bedstead, should be done for those killed by a Brāhmaṇa's imprecation. (212)

He, who does so out of affection or fear, should perform one purifying penance by living upon the urine of a cow and barley. (213)

Three nights [form the period of purification] for him, who, being aged, losing all knowledge of the purificatory injunctions of the Smṛiti and neglecting the instructions of a physician, kills himself, by falling down from a high place, or by entering into water, or fire, or by fasting. His bones should be deposited on the second day. And performing the watery rite on the third day, [his son] should perform the S'rāddha on the fourth. (214—215)

Whence would his welfare come and how could his ignorance be destroyed in whose house there is not a single cow followed by a calf? (216)

A cow being killed by excessive milking, carrying an excessive load, by its nose being bored through, in a river or in a mountain, or by being shut up, one should perform a Pādana. (217)
The virtuous driving of a ploughshare, is by eight bulls; [to do so by] six bulls, is what is in general practice; to do so by four [is] the work of the cruel-hearted; one who does so by two bulls, is the killer of a bull. (218)

It is laid down in the Smriti that two bulls shall carry a plough for one prahara; four, up to mid-day; six, up to the third part of the day; and eight, for the whole day. (219)*

One killing a cow by a piece of wood, a clod of earth, or a stone, should perform the distressing penance of Sántapānam; if she is killed by a earthen clod, one should perform the Prájāpatya; and if by an iron, a highly distressing penance. (220)

When the penance is completed, one should feed the Brāhmaṇas and make a gift of a cow with a bull unto a Vipra. (221)

The penance for killing a Sūdra is also laid down for slaying a S’arabha-deer, camel, horse, elephant, lion, tiger or an ass. (222)

By killing a cat, an alligator, a mongoose, a frog or a bird, one should either drink [only] milk for three days or perform a Pādakṛichhra. (223)

[Fasting for] three nights [effects] the purification of one touched by a Chaṇḍāla or of one sullied by urine or excreta. And by taking the residue of one's own food, he should act similarly (i.e., fast for three nights). (224)

The purification of contaminated tanks, wells and pools [of water, is effected] by taking out one hundred...
jarfuls of water and then by [throwing into them] Pāñchagavya. (225)

[If the water of a vessel] is sullied by bones or skin, or by asses or dogs, all its water should be thrown off, and its purity, [effected by] rubbing. (226)

The water, of a vessel in which a cow is milked, that in a leather bag, that in an instrument for fetching water, that in the hands of an artizan or of a mechanic, that used by women, aged persons or by children, and that used by them whose impurity has not been marked, are [always] pure. (227)

The [question of] impurity should not be thought of when a city is besieged, in an inaccessible place, in an encampment, when the house is set on fire, when a sacrifice is begun, or in great festivities. (228)

By drinking water from a place whence travellers get water for drinking, in a forest (i.e., in an unknown tank), in a vessel, in a well, in a Droni (vessel containing water for bathing), or that trickling down from the sheath [of a sword], or that touched by a Ṣwāpāka or by a Chandāla, one becomes purified with the Pāñchagavya. (229)

If one drinks the water of a well polluted with semen, excreta or urine, one becomes purified in three nights. [By drinking such water] in a jar, [one should perform] the Sāṅkāpanam. (230)

If a leading twice-born person unknowingly drinks water contaminated by an entirely or partially rotten dead body, he should, by so drinking, perform the penance of Taptakṛichhrāk. (231)

By drinking the milk of a she-camel, that of a she-ass, or that of a woman, the foremost of the twice-born should perform the penance of Taptakṛichhrāk. (232)
The foremost of the twice-born, when, having still the leavings of food in his mouth, touched by a caste outside [the pale of the recognized castes], should, after fasting for five nights, get purified with the Pañcagavya. (233)

The water that gives satisfaction to the kine, that which is in natural state, that which lies on earth, that which is in a leather bag, that which is in currents, or that which is taken up by an instrument, is [always] pure. (234)

Bathing is laid down [for him, who is] touched by a Chandāla; when so touched while, he has still the leavings of food in his mouth, [one] should get purified [by fasting] for three nights. (235)

Articles brought from a machine are never impure; all the instruments are pure, except that which manufactures wine. (236)

Barley, gram, date, or camphor, whether broken or unbroken, are held to be pure by the Smriti. Other articles, when separated from husks, are pure. (237)

The actions of women are not to be discussed; [they are always] pure. Rain-drops are always unsullied, and so is the dust driven by the wind. (238)

If one, amongst many articles lying together, becomes sullied, only that one is to be considered impure, and not the others under any circumstances. (239)

Of all sitting in the same row but taking meals separately, if one puts on a cloth dyed with indigo, all of them [become] impure, according to the Smriti. (240)

He, in whose cotton cloth or silk raiment indigo dye is seen, should have to fast for three nights; and others, for one night only. (241)

"O lord, O thou having asceticism for wealth, do thou tell how could one be purified, if he touches what should not be touched in the night after sunset.”
[Said the Rishis.] (242)
[Atri said:—]

Touching, in the night, after sunset, the water brought during the daytime, "brings about the purification of all, except the touching of a dead body. (243)

Thereupon [a learned person] after examining the place, time, age, power and [the nature of] the sin, should determine the penance for the sin, the expiation of which has not been spoken of. 244)

There is no sin in being touched while going to see idols, in marriages, in sacrifices, and in all sorts of festivities. (245)

A’ranálam (gruel made from the fermentation of boiled rice), milk, fried paddy, curd, sour gruel, any article fried with oil, buttermilk, [even when made] by a Súdra does not bring on any sin. (246)

Raw meat, clarified butter, oil, and oily substances entrained from fruits, even when kept in vessels of degraded castes, attain to purification when brought out. (247)

By knowingly drinking water from the Súdras, a Brahmana should fast for a day and night and, [then] after bathing, should get [himself] purified with the Pañchagavya. (248)

The Vipra, who maintains the Sacred Fire, if he commits a great sin, should throw the vessels into the water, and then replace the Fire. (249)

His food should not be taken, who, without taking the Viváha-Fire (i.e., without marrying), wishes to lead the domestic mode of life; for he is known in the Smriti as one whose cooking is useless. (250)
By taking food from one whose cooking is of no value, a twice-born person should perform a penance. By thrice performing the Prāṇāyama in the waters, rinsing his mouth and taking clarified butter, he attains to purification. (251)

For the expiation of the sin of Pañchasūna,* one should perform a Vais'vadēva-[Sacrifice] in the Vaidik-, Loukik-(ordinary), and the Hutochchhista,-† Fire, either in water or on earth. (252)

If the eldest brother becomes disqualified, the youngest, endued with accomplishments and knowledge, [and therefore] the best, should marry and set up the Sacred Fire before [his elder brother]. (253)

If the eldest brother is unsullied by any sin and [the younger brother] sets up the Sacred Fire before, he commits the sin of Brahmanicide daily; there is no doubt in it. (254)

Bathing is laid down for him who is touched by a Mahā-Pātakin. Bathing is [also] laid down for him who partakes of his food. (255)

By associating with the degraded for a month or a fortnight, one attains to purification by living on barley and the urine of a cow for half-a-month. (256)

By [knowingly] taking once the food of a degraded person, the foremost of the twice-born should perform half-a-Kriṣhkhraḥ. By unknowingly eating it, he should perform a Sāntapanam. (257)

---

* Hearth, (iron) mortar, pestle, flat stone and a wooden mortar,—these five are called Sūnā. The expiation is for the sin that accrues from killing animals in all these.
† The fire that is kept up by clarified butter after the performance of the daily Homa.
When a person partakes of the food of a degraded one or takes his meals in a Chandâla's house, he should live upon water [only] for a fortnight. S'âtâtapa has said so. (258)

No cremation should be performed for those that are killed by a Brâhmaṇa or by a cow, nor for the degraded; this is the deliverance of S'âṅkha. (259)

The twice-born person, who under the influence of lust, knows a Chandâla-woman, should get [himself] purified by three penances [performed] according to the regulation of the Prâjâpatya. (260)

If a Brâhmaṇa takes food or accepts [a present] from a degraded person, he should, after vomiting the food and returning the present, perform an Atikrîichhraḍ (a highly distressing penance). (261)

One should not touch the wood, clod of earth, or the twig fallen on a dead body from the hands of a degraded caste, nor the residue of his food; [by doing so], one should fast for a day and night. (262)

By touching a Chandâla, an outcaste, a Mlêchchha, a wine-bowl, or a woman in [her] menses, a twice-born person should not take his meals. If [he is touched by any of these,] while taking [his] meals, [he must at once stop.] (263)

Thereafter he should not take his meals; and giving up his food, he should bathe. And being commanded by the Brâhmaṇas, he should fast for three nights. And taking Yâvaka (food prepared from barley) together with clarified butter, he should complete the sacrifice. (264)

Purification is [effected by fasting] for three nights, if a person, while taking meals, touches a crow or a fowl; [if he does so] with the leavings of food in his mouth,
[he should get himself purified by fasting] for a day. (265)

By undertaking the duties of a perpetual religious student, vowing lifelong abstinence and chastity, he, who deviates from them, should perform a Chándráyána extending over a month. S'átátapa has said so. (266)

Prajápatya is laid down for holding sexual intercourse with a beast, or with a harlot. By holding intercourse with a cow, one should perform a Chándráyána spoken of by Manu. (267)

By discharging semen into inhuman females except a cow, into a woman in [her] menses, into others that have no female organs (i.e., a man or a eunuch), or into water one should perform the penance of Sántapánam. (268)

If one touches a woman in [her] menses, a woman who has given birth to a child, or a lowcaste woman, he should get himself purified by [fasting for] three nights. This is the eternal regulation. (269)

If one cohabits with a woman in [her] menses or with lowcaste women, he is known as being obliged to perform a penance; he should [take his] bath before that. (270)

[By touching them while passing urine,] one should observe [fasting] for one night; and for three nights, while passing excreta; for three nights, while drinking water; and for five or seven nights, while holding intercourse. (271)

A Prajápatya is laid down for those touching [them], while taking meals; and [fasting] for a day and night, while cleansing the teeth with a piece of wood. This is the purifying regulation according to the Smrti. (272)

By being touched by dogs, Chandálas or crows, a woman in her menses should remain fasting till [the menstrual period] and should get herself purified by bathing in time. (273)

If a woman, in her menses, is touched by camels, jackals or hogs, she should remain fasting for five nights and get herself purified with the Pañchagavya. (274)

[In case of] women, in their menses, touching each other, a Brāhmaṇa-woman, touching another Brāhmaṇa-woman, should remain fasting for one night and get herself purified with the Pañchagavya. (275)

[In case of] women, in their menses, touching each other, a Brāhmaṇa-woman, touching a Kshatriya-woman, should get herself purified by [fasting for] three nights. This is the deliverance ofVyāsa. (276)

[In case of] women, touching each other while in menses, a Brāhmaṇa-woman, touching one born of a Vais'ya, should fast for four nights and get herself purified with the Pañchagavya. (277)

[In case of] women, touching each other while in menses, a Brāhmaṇa-woman, touching one born of a Śūdra, becomes purified by [fasting for] six nights. [This is rule when] a Brāhmaṇa-woman does so willingly. (278)

If a Brāhmaṇa-woman unknowingly touches them all, she should perform half the penance. This has been described as the purification for the four Varnas. (279)

S'aṅkha's deliverance is:—If a Brāhmaṇa is touched by another Brāhmaṇa having the leavings of food in his mouth, while taking meals or passing urine, he should bathe; the recitation of the Gāyatrī and performance of Homa are for the Brāhmaṇa who is [similarly] touched by a Kshatriya; when by a Vais'ya, he should perform a Nakta-Vrata (abstention from food during the night); and fasting [is for him, if similarly touched by] a Śūdra. (280—281)

A cobbler, a washerman, one making articles of bamboo, a fisherman and an actor,—having touched all these out of stupefaction, a twice-born person should, being self-restrained, rinse his mouth. (282)

By being touched by these, a twice-born person should drink water for one night; by being touched by them, having the leavings of food in their mouth, he should [fast] for three nights and get himself purified by drinking clarified butter. (283)

The Brāhmaṇa, who goes under the shadow of a S'wapāka, should bathe and get himself purified by drinking clarified butter. (284)

A twice-born person, against whom a charge is laid, should perform the penance for Brahmanicide in the forest, or fast for a month or perform a Chāndrayāṇa. (285)

When a false accusation is made, [one should] perform the penance for the destruction of an embryo. Fasting for twelve days, he should get himself purified by a Parāka. (286)

By killing a deceitful Brāhmaṇa, one should perform the penance for killing a Śūdra. A qualified person, having killed one who is shorn of accomplishments, should perform a Parāka. (287)

If a man, sullied with a minor sin, breathes his last, the person, who performs the funeral rite for him, should perform two Prājāpatyas. (288)

If a twice-born person, while taking meals, touches [another] out of excessive love, he should perform the Nakta (night-fasting) for three nights; and if not out of love, he should fast [for three nights]. (289)
By eating the residue of the food taken by a cat, crow, dog, or a mongoose, or a food contaminated by hairs or by insects, one should drink the highly powerful decoction of Brahmi-leaves. (290)

By willingly getting upon a conveyance drawn by camels or asses, or by bathing in a nude state, a Vipra, should become purified with the Pránayáma. (291)

[When one], having suppressed the vital airs, recites the Gáyatrí thrice with the Vyahriti-Prañava, and the Mantram-"A'pojyotih", it is called Pránayáma. (292)

In Pañchagavya, one must put one portion of dung; twice, urine; fourfold, clarified butter and milk; and eight times curd, of a cow. (293)

A Súdra who takes the Pañchagavya and a Bráhmaṇa who drinks spirituous liquors are equally guilty. They live in hell for good. (294)

The milk of a she-goat, of a cow, or of a she-buffalo which eat unholy things (excreta, etc.), [should never be used] in Havya and Kavya; and cowdung [of such a cow] should never be used for paste. (295)

The milk of those that have more or less udders, as well as that of those which drink milk from the udders [of other kine] must never be offered to the Celestials; even though offered, it remains A'huta [unaccepted, i.e., like that which has not been offered at all]. (296)

By taking food at the rite of depositing the Sacred Fire, in a Soma-Yajña (Moon-Plant Sacrifice), at the rite of Simantonnayana, at a Srāddha consequent on a birth, and at the first Srāddha, one should perform a Chándráyaṇa. (297)

A Kshatriya’s food destroys energy, and a Śúdra’s food destroys Brahma-vigour. He, who partakes of his daughter’s food, eats the dirt of the earth. (298)
If one's own daughter does not give birth to a child, the father should not take his meals at her house. He who takes food out of love, goes to the Puya-Hell. (299)

One informed of the esoteric meaning of all the Scriptures, who having studied the four Védas, takes his meals in a Kshatriya's house, is born as a virmin in excreta. (300)

The departed Manes, of a twice-born person, who, except in a calamity, takes food at the first S'rāddha, at that taking place in the third fortnight, at a six-monthly, monthly, or at an annual S'rāddha, become degraded. (301)

[By taking food] at the first S'rāddha, [one should perform] a Chandrayaṇa; at a monthly, a Paraka; at a third fortnightly, an Atikrichhraḥ; at a six-monthly, a Krichhraḥ; at an annual, a Padakrichhraḥ; and at the next annual, [he should fast] for a day. (302)

The departed Manes, of the twice-born person, who, without observing Brahmacharyya, takes his food in monthly S'rāddhas, Parva-S'rāddhas, at a twelfth-day S'rāddha, in a third-fortnightly, or at an annual S'rāddha, fall down, even if when stationed in the region of Brahmá. (303)

By fasting for a day, when taking food in a S'rāddha which should be performed on the eleventh day; and for three days when taking food prepared by many persons collectively;—a Vipra, duly reciting the Mantram- "Kushmaṇḍa," should offer clarified butter to the Fire. (304)

By taking the food of that wicked-souled wight in whose house twice-born persons do not take meals either in a fortnight or in a month, a twice-born person should perform a Chandrayaṇa. (305)
The house, which does not resound with Vedic recitation, which is not adorned with kine, and which is not filled with children, is like a cremation-ground. (306)

The place, where many people, even when laughing, do not speak of anything else but religion, is, even when without any Religious Code, religious and therefore holy, according to the Smrti. (307)

He, who unknowingly salutes a low caste person, should immediately bathe and get himself purified by taking clarified butter. (308)

If, when ready for bathing, a twice-born person takes his meal or drinks water, he should, after bathing and being self-restrained, recite the Gayatri for eight thousand times. (309)

To cleanse the teeth with a finger, to eat unmixed salt, and to eat earth is equally sinful like eating beef. (310)

[To live under] the shade of a Kapithva-tree during the day, [to take] curd in the night, [to live] under the shade of a S'ami-tree, to use a cotton-reed for cleaning the teeth, robs even Vishnu's prosperity. (311)

The Sun [when seen at the rising], the wind [of the cremation ground], the water on the finger-nails, the water in a pitcher touched by a cloth at the time of bathing, the dust of a broomstick, and water sprinkling from the hairs, destroy the virtue acquired in the day. (312)

He, who is covered with the broomstick dust and the water sprinkling from hairs, [both] originating from a temple, is [said to be] sprinkled with the Ganges-water. (313)

The earth, in an anthill, in the hole of a mouse, in the water, in the cremation-ground, at the root of a tree, in a temple, and that dug by bulls, should always be discarded by learned persons seeking their well-being. (314)

Earth freed from pebbles and stones, should be collected from a holy place. (315)

[While passing] excreta, [holding] sexual intercourse, [making] Homa, cleansing the teeth, bathing, taking meals, and making adorations, one should always abstain from speaking at all. 316)

He,—who, always abstaining from speech, takes his meals for full one year,—lives gloriously in the celestial region for a thousand Koti Yugas. 317)

Placing the feet on the seat and binding the waist and knee-joints with a piece of cloth (Proud'apâda, one should not bathe, make gifts, recite the Gâyatrî, perform Homa, take meals, adore the Deities, study the Vêdas and offer oblations to the departed Manes. (318)

He,—who, having killed a leading Brâhmaṇa, gives away his all,—reaps the fruit of destroying a foetus after having killed all creatures. 319)

To make gifts is known as necessary on the occasion of an eclipse, a marriage, the last day of a month and at the delivery of a woman. It is therefore better [to make gifts] even in the night. (320)

He, who gives away a sacred thread of silk, cotton, or patta (woven silk), wins the fruit of making a gift of a cloth. (321)

One should, with reverence and due rite, give away a belmetal vessel, beautified and filled with clarified butter. [By it,] he wins the fruit of an Agnistoma. (322)

He, who gives away a pair of excellent sandals at the time of a S'râddha, even when wending another (i.e., improper) way, wins the fruit of giving away boiled rice. 323)
The person, who attentively makes a gift of an oil-vessel completely filled, forsooth, goes to the celestial region; there is no doubt in it. (324)

He, who gives food during famine; he, who gives gold in a prosperous time; and he, who gives water in a forest [where there is no water], fares gloriously in the celestial region. (325)

A cow is known, in the Smriti, as the earth, so long she gives birth, half-way, to a young one. By him, who gives away such a cow, the earth is made a gift of. (326)

The fires are gratified with clarified butter; and the departed Manes, with oblations; and all the Celestials are adored by him, who gives food daily to the kine. (327)

All the sins, inherited by one, from birth, from father and mother, are all, forsooth, speedily dissipated by the gifts of food and cloth. (328)

He, who gives away a black antelope-skin with all the necessary ingredients, rescues, from hell, a hundred generations. (329)

The Sun, Varuṇa, Viṣṇu Brahmá, Soma, Fire, and the Divine Wielder of the Trident (S'iva), welcome the giver of lands. (330)

With the expiration of a hundred years [enjoyment in the celestial region], only an atom of sands, collected in heaps reaching the region of the Saptarshi, is destroyed.* (331)

No deterioration [of piety] is seen in him who gives away a maiden-daughter [in marriage], and in him who gives life in a disease. These three gifts bear equal fruits.* (332)

The gift of learning is superior to all these gifts.

* The meaning is that there is no end of his enjoying the piety so acquired.
One, who gives it with an end in view to a non-deceitful Bráhmana and to one's own kinsmen headed by the son, attains to the celestial region; and if disinterestedly, to emancipation. (333)

If a person seeks his own well-being, he should make gifts unto a Bráhmana, well-read in the Védas, versed in all the Scriptures, devoted to parents, knowing his wife in the time of Ritu, (i.e., immediately after the menstrual period), endued with good character and conduct, and given to bathing in the morning. (334—335)

Leaving aside learned Bráhmanás, one should not make any gifts to any other person. I have neither seen nor heard of such a course. (336)

I shall now describe the twice-born persons, who are worthy to take part in a S'ráddha;—by making gifts to whom the departed Manes live [in the celestial region] eternally; and [also] those, a gift unto whom becomes profitless. (337)

One should never feed these at a S'ráddha!—one who is short of limbs; one who is diseased; one who does not study the S'ruti and the Smrítí; and one who always speaks the untruth. (338)

[One should not feed] a hurtful person, a deceitful person; one who hiding his ownself learns the Véda; one who is a servant; one who is tawny-coloured; a deaf; one suffering from white leprosy; one who is diseased; one who has a bad skin; one who has withered hairs; one who suffers from jaundice; one who wears matted locks; one who carries a load; one who is angry; one who has taken two wives; and one who has married a Vrishali. (339—340)

He, who creates dissensions; he who injures many;
one who is short of limbs; or one who has an extra limb;—these should also be excluded. (341)

One who eats too much; one who has a poorly grave face; he who is egoistic; and one who is gifted with wicked intellect;—neither should any be ever given to, nor should any be ever accepted from any of these. (342)

He who contaminates a row by physical deformities but is well-read in the Védas, is not blameable, as Yama has said, and is the sanctifier of the row. (343)

The S'ruti and the Smriti are described as the two eyes of the Vipras. One who is deficient in either of the two, is described as the one-eyed; and one who is deficient in the both, as stone-blind. (344)

Atri has said:

"That wretch of a blind man, who has no [knowledge of] the S'ruti or of the Smriti, who has no character, no family, should not be given any present at a S'rāddha. (345)

Therefore the Brahmanahood (i.e., the status and dignity) of a Bráhmana [is encompassed] by both the Védas and the Dharma-S'astras; and not by the Védas only. The divine Atri has said so. (346)

He,—who, endued with eyes stationed in yoga, places the forepart of his foot (i.e., wends good ways), and observes the regulations and restrictions established by human usage, the Dharma-S'astras, the Védas and the Rishis,—is, indeed, one endued with most excellent vision and a master of all the S'astras. (347)

One should feed at a S'rāddha, one who observes religious vows, is born in a good family and is always devoted to the S'ruti and the Smriti. [By it, the residence] of the departed Manes [becomes] eternal [in the eternal region]. (348)
As long as [such Vipras] take morsels of food [offered] to the effulgent departed Manes, the father, grandfather and the great-grandfather, even when stationed in hell, become liberated and repair to the celestial region. Therefore, one should examine carefully the Brāhmaṇās at the time of a S'rāddha. (349–350)

A twice-born person, hearing his father dead, who does not perform the S'rāddha at the every wane of the Moon (i.e., Amāvasyā) is required to perform a penance. (351)

Wealth, sons, and the family of the householder, who does not perform the S'rāddha when the Moon is in conjunction with the Kanyā (the sixth sign of the zodiac, i.e., in the dark-fortnight of the month of A's'vin), become destroyed by the sighs of the Manes. (352)

When the Sun is in the Kanyā, the departed Manes get good sons. The region of the dead remains always empty till the seeing of the Vṛis'chika (the sign Scorpio, i.e., till the Amāvasyā of the month of A's'vin). (353)

Thereupon, if, at the advent of the Vṛis'chika (i.e., on the Amāvasyā), the departed Manes become disappointed [for the non-performance of the S'rāddha], they, imprecating a highly dreadful curse on the son, brother, daughter's son, or son's son, return to their own habitations. (354)

Those, who are devoted to the rites for the departed Manes, attain to the most excellent condition. (355)

As fire exists in all [pieces of] wood [in an invisible form but is manifested] by friction, so virtue is, forsooth, visible by gifts made at a S'rāddha. (356)

To make gifts at a S'rāddha is undoubtedly equal to the understanding of the meaning of all the scripturses, bathing at the sacred places and the fruit of all the scriptures. (357)

Like the Sun freed from all clouds, like the Moon released from Ráhu, one,—laden with all sins and minor sins,—does undoubtedly, freed from all sins, get over all miseries and attains, himself, to all sorts of felicity. (358—359)

Of all gifts, that made at a S’ráḍḍha is superior.
The gift [made] at a S’ráḍḍha is [the instrument of]. purification, when sin equal to [the Mount] Meru [in height] is committed. By performing a S’ráḍḍha, one reigns supreme in the celestial region. (360)

A Bráhmana’s boiled rice is ambrosia; that of a Kshatriya is known, in the Smriti, as milk; that of a Vais’ya is simple food; and that of a S’údra is blood. (361)

All this has been described by me at the time of a S’ráḍḍha [at a rite for] the Vais’wadévás, at the Homa, at the adoration of a Deity and at the recitation. (362)

Because the boiled rice of a Vipra is sanctified by the Rig-, Yajush-, and the Sáma-, (Mantram), it is ambrosia; because a Kshatryia’s boiled rice is subject to the dominations of laws and acquired by fair ways and religious rites, it is called milk; and a Vais’ya’s boiled rice is called so, because [it is acquired] by tending cattle. (363)

In the Smriti, there are ten classifications of Vipras, viz., a Déva, an ascetic, a twice-born one, a king, a Vais’ya, a S’údra, a Nisháda, a beast, Mlechchha and a Chandála. (364)

One who performs [both the morning and evening] adorations, the sacred bath, the recitation of the Gáyatrí, the Homa, the daily adoration of the Deities, and who receives guests and worships the Vais'wadévas, is called a Déva-Bráhmaṇa. (365)

A Vipra, who lives on vegetables, leaves, roots and fruits, always lives in the forest, and always performs a S'rāddha, is called a Muni. (366)

He, who daily studies the Védánta, gives up companionship, and discusses the Sáńkhya-Yoga, is called a Dwīja. (367)

That Vipra, who, in the very beginning of a battle and before all, strikes all holders of bow with weapons and defeats [them],—is called a Kśtra. (368)

That Vipra, who is given to agriculture, who tends kine, and who drives a trade, is called a Vais'ya. (369)

That Vipra, who sells shell-lac, salt, saffron, milk, clarified butter, honey, or meat, is called a S'údra. (370)

A Vipra, who is a thief or a robber, or who is ever prone to give bad advice or give vent to harsh words, and who is always fond of fish and flesh, is called a Nisháda. (371)

A Vipra who does not know the true nature and being of Brahmaṇ but is always proud of his sacrificial thread, is for that sin called a Pasu (beast). (372)

A Vipra, who unhesitatingly obstructs [the use of] tanks, wells, watery expanses, pleasure-grounds and lakes, is called a Mlechchha. (373)

A Vipra, who is devoid of all religious rites, is ignorant, innocent of all forms of religions and is cruel to all creatures, is called a Chāndāla. (374)

Those, failing to understand the Védas, study the Dharma-S'ástras; those, failing to master the Dharma-S'ástras, study the Puráṇas; those, failing to acquire proficiency in the Puráṇas, betake to agriculture; and those, failing in it, become Bhāgavatas (deceitful followers of Vishnu.) (375)

The astrologers (i.e., who live by astrological calculations); the followers of the Atharvan; and those, who recite the Purāṇas, without understanding their meaning;—should never be invited at a S'rāddha, sacrifice and at the distribution of great gifts. (376)

[In doing so,] a S'rāddha for the Manes, becomes dreadful, a gift becomes fruitless, and a sacrifice becomes profitless; therefore, one should always shun them. (377)

The four [classes of] Vipras, who sell sheep, who are painters, who are physicians, and who read the positions of stars, should never be adored, even if they are equal to Vṛihaspati in learning. (378)

The panegyrist, the flatterers, cheats, those who act harshly, and those who are avaricious,—these five Brāhmaṇas should never be adored, even if they are equal to Vṛihaspati in learning. (379)

A maiden, who is bought, should never be taken as a wife; the sons, begotten on her, are not qualified to offer funeral cakes to their departed Manes. (380)

Even when pierced with arrows in all his eight limbs, if a twice-born person drinks water with his palm, it is tantamount to the drinking of spirituous liquor or to the taking of beef. (381)

By washing the feet of Brāhmaṇas [lying] with thighs upraised, one lives like a Chandāla (i.e., in an impure state) till he immerses himself in the Ganges. (382)

The touching of the shades of lamps, beds, and seats, of the cotton-wood intended for cleansing the teeth, and of the dust raised by a goat,—robs even the prosperity of S'akra. (383)
[To bathe] in a well, is ten times more [meritorious] than [bathing] in the house; [to bathe] on the bank is ten times more [meritorious] than [bathing] in a well; [to bathe] in a river is ten times more [meritorious] than [bathing] on a bank. There is no enumeration [of virtues in bathing in] the Ganges. (384)

The current water is for a Brāhmaṇa; that of a tank, is for a Kshatriya; that of a well or a pond, is for a Vais'ya; that of a pitcher, is for a Śūdra. (385)

On the demise of a great Guru (i.e., father or mother), one should not, for a year, bathe at a sacred place, make great gifts and oblations of sesame to others. (386)

[In that year,] one should perform the S'rāddha at the Ganges, at Gayā, on the day of death and on the Amāvasyā-day; and offer the Maghā-pīndas, avoiding [the performance of] other [S'rāddhas.] (387)

Clarified butter, oil, milk and curd,—these four are the main ingredients of A'jya (offering of clarified butter); these should not be discarded even when offered. (388)

Having listened to these religious injunctions described by Atri himself, those Rishis, devoted to religious observances, again spoke to that high-souled one as follows:— (389)

Those, who would steadfastly follow these religious injunctions, shall attain to the celestial region after acquiring fame in this world. (390)

One, seeking learning, would obtain learning; one, desiring wealth, would get wealth; one, longing for a long life, would acquire longevity; and one, wishing for prosperity, would win great prosperity. (391)

SAMVARTA SAMHITA.

Having approached Samvarta, seated alone, well-versed in Spiritual Science, the Rishis, desirous of [listening to] religion (i.e., religious institutes) asked, saying,—"O lord, we wish to listen to rites capable of securing spiritual well-being. O foremost of the twice-born, duly describe, unto us, religion, discriminating what is good and what is bad. (1—2)

All [the Rishis] headed by Vámádeva put this question to that highly effulgent [Rishi]. He, of a delighted mind, replied to all those Munins, saying,—"Hear." (3)

The country, where a black antelope always ranges of its own accord, is to be known as a religious place, fit for the performance of religious rites for the twice-born. (4)

Being invested with the sacred thread, a Vipra should always do good unto his preceptor. A Brahmachárīn should renounce garlands, scents, honey and meat. (5)

He should duly perform the Sandhyá-adoration in the morning when the stars [are still visible], and the evening-adoration when the sun is half-set and the A'ditya (Sun) is still in the western sky. (6)

Standing up a Brahmachárīn, being self-restrained, should perform the first part of the recitation [of the Gáyatrí]. And being seated, he should steadfastly perform the after-portion of the recitation. (7)

Therefore an intelligent [Brahmachárīn] should perform the Homa at both the times; thereupon, he should study [the Védás], looking at the face of his preceptor. (8)
He should first recite the Prāṇava, then the Vyāhṛiti, and then the Gāyatrī from the beginning to the end, and then commence the study of the Vēdās. (9)

Placing the two hands firmly on the two thighs, with the permission of the preceptor he should begin his course. He should not have his mind strayed away [to any other subject]. (10)

A Brahmachārīn, observant of the vow, should always beg alms [both] in the morning and evening. Having dedicated it to the preceptor, he should, in a purified state and restraining his speech, take his meals with his face directed towards the east. (11)

To take meals in the morning and evening is sanctioned in the S'rutī for the twice-born ones. No food should be taken in the interval. The regulation, [in this] is equal to that of the Agnihotra. (12)

After rinsing his mouth, a twice-born person should take his meals, and wash his mouth after taking food. He, who takes food without performing the A'chamanam, is required to perform an expiation. (13)

A twice-born person, who drinks or eats without performing the A'chamanam, should be purified by reciting the Gāyatrī for a hundred-and-eight times. (14)

A twice-born, who stands without washing his feet, or who performs the A'chamanam without binding the tuft of his hair on the crown or without putting on his sacred thread, is impure. (15)

With the sacred thread on and the face directed towards the north, one may perform the A'chamanam with the Brāhma-Tirtha; or, a twice-born person may, with the sacred thread on, restraining his speech and facing the east, perform it daily in a purified state. (16)
In the water, one should perform the A'chamanam by standing. Eternal purification [is also effected] by performing the A'chamanam on the ground. By performing the A'chamanam both in water and on the earth, one attains to purification. (17)

One should purify one’s hands up to the wrist; and the feet, with water; without making any sound, one should perform the A'chamanam thrice, or four times with water, not hot, having its own colour, taste and smell, without any froth and reaching up to the heart. Rubbing his mouth twice, he should touch the twelve limbs. (18—19)

After bathing, drinking, eating or touching [an impure object], O ye leading twice-born ones, a Vipra, by performing the A'chamanam, according to this regulation, attains to purification. (20)

A S'údra becomes purified [by touching the twelve limbs] with his hand; a Vais'ya, with water [touching merely] the teeth. And a Kshatriya, by performing the A'chamanam with water reaching the throat, attains to purification. (21)

[By performing it,] being seated on a seat, or when sitting on his hams with a cloth girt round the legs and knees, or with one foot placed above another, one never attains to purification. (22)

If one fails to perform religious meditation, or evening-adoration, or to offer oblations to the Fire, he should, after bathing and being restrained, recite the Gáyatrí for a thousand-and-eight times. (23)

A Brahmachárin, who eats boiled rice of a person suffering from the impurity of birth, or that at the first Sr'áddha, or that at the monthly [Sr'áddha], should get himself purified [by fasting] for three nights. (24)
A Brahmachārin,—who, being stricken with lust knows a woman,—should, being observant of regulations, perform one most distressing penance of Prājā-patya. (25)

If a Brahmachārin happens to take somehow honey or meat, he should, after performing the Prājāpātya, be purified by a Mouṇji-Homa. (26)

On a Parva-day, a Brahmachārin should dedicate cakes and offer oblations of clarified butter to the Fire with the Mantrams of S’ākala-Homa. (27)

A Brahmachārin, who knowingly discharges his seminal fluid, should perform the expiation consequent on the breach of the vow; and if unwillingly, he should be purified by bathing. (28)

He should, then, after roving about for alms, be at his ease [again]; for the semen is like unto one’s own self. He, who takes food without taking his bath, should recite the Gāyatrī for one hundred and eight times. (29)

He, who takes his food or drink from a S’ūdra’s hands, should get himself purified with the Pañchagavya after fasting for a day and night. (30)

Having taken boiled rice, that is dry, or rotten, or that partaken of by another or contaminated with hairs, one should get himself purified with the Pañchagavya after fasting for a day and night. (31)

By taking food in a vessel belonging to a S’ūdra or in a broken plate, one should get himself purified with the Pañchagavya after fasting for a day and night. (32)

If a Brahmachārin, on any occasion, sleeps during the day in a healthy state, he should, after bathing and adoring the Sun, recite the Gāyatrī for one hundred and eight times. (33)
Thus is described the duty of those living in the first A’s’rama or order. By following it, one attains to the most excellent condition. (34)

Thereupon commanded by the preceptor, a twice-born person should espouse, according to the Brāhma form of marriage, a maiden, belonging to the same caste, born in a great family, endued with all good marks and possessed of character and beauty. A twice-born person should, daily and duly, perform the five sacrifices. A Vipra, seeking his well-being, should, under no circumstances, abandon them. One should, [however,] always abandon them [in an impurity consequent] on birth and death. (35—37)

A Vipra, [on the occasion of a birth or death] should refrain, for ten days, from making gifts or studying the Védás. A Kshatriya is purified in twelve days; a Vaiś’ya in fifteen days; and a S’údra in a month. Such is the deliverance of Sañvarta. (38)

[After cremation,] water should be offered, after bath, to the deceased by those born in the same family on the first, third, seventh and the ninth day. (39)

On the fourth day, one (i.e., the chief mourner) should deposit [the bones of the departed] along with all persons born in the same family. Thereupon after the depositing of the bones, the touching of the limbs of [the chief mourner] is laid down. (40)

On the fourth day, a Brāhmaṇa’s [limbs should be touched]; on the sixth, a Kshatriya’s; and on the eighth, and the tenth, a Vaisya’s and S’údra’s [limbs should be respectively touched.] (41)

Similarly regulations about [the impurity of] birth have been laid down by the learned. Refraining from adoring the Vais'wadévás [the Bráhmanás] become purified in ten nights. (42)

To bathe with the raiment on, is laid down for the father on the birth of a son. A mother becomes purified in ten days. The touching of the father [is sanctioned after] bath. (43)

There (i.e., during the period of impurity) Homa may be performed with dry food and fruits; but one should never perform any rite of the five sacrifices [in a period of impurity consequent] on birth and death. (44)

After the tenth day a Vipra, conversant with Religious Institutes, should make a full study [of the Védás]; [and] auspicious gifts, destructive of inauspiciousness, should be duly made. (45)

What is most pleasant unto the dwellers of the [three] regions, what is most sought for by a householder, should be given unto an accomplished [Bráhmana by one,] desiring for un-ending [fruits]. (46)

By giving unto a great Vipra, various sorts of articles, profuse riches and gems born in an ocean, a person, shorn of sins, attains to great prosperity. (47)

The person, who, being conversant with Religious Institutes, gives away scents, ornaments and garlands, enjoys always scents and remains happy wherever he is born. (48)

A gift, that is made with reverence to a person who is well-read in the Védás and born in a good family, yields a great fruit. (49)

Having invited a Vipra, possessed of character, knowledge of the S'ruti and good birth, a pure and highly learned person should adore him with Havya and Kavya. (50)
Various articles, yielding juice and kindling desire [for possession], should be made a gift of by one seeking his own well-being and desiring for eternal residence in the celestial region. (51)

One, who makes gift of a cloth, puts on a good cloth [in the next birth]; the giver of silver [attains to] beauty; a man, who gives away gold, gets a long life and energy. (52)

By giving [promise of] fearlessness unto creatures one comes by all desired for objects, attains to longevity and becomes happy. (53)

The giver of corns and water and that of clarified butter, enjoy happiness. Having made gifts of ornaments decorating [the person of a Brāhmaṇa] one attains to the fruits thereof (i.e., comes by ornaments in the next birth). (54)

By giving, unto a Vipra, fruits, roots, various vegetables and sweet-scented flowers, one is born as a learned person. (55)

A discriminating person, who gives betel-leaves unto the Brāhmaṇas, is born [in another birth] as an intelligent, lucky, wise, and handsome person. (56)

By making presents of sandals, shoes, umbrellas, bedsteads, seats and various vehicles, one attains to a divine position. (57)

He, who with great care makes gifts of fire and profuse fuels in winter, attains to fiery effulgence of the body, wisdom, beauty and good luck. (58)

By giving medicine, oil and food for curing the ailments of the diseased, one becomes freed from diseases, happy and long-lived (in another birth). (59)

He, who gives fuels unto the Vipras at the advent of the winter, daily winning victories in battle and being possessed of prosperity, shines with effulgence [in his next birth]. (60)

He, who, decorating a maiden with ornaments, gives her, unto a becoming bridegroom, according to the Brāhma mode of marriage, enjoys extraordinary prosperity by the virtue of the giving away of the maiden; acquires the applause of the pious, and attains to un-ending fame. (61—62)

Having given away [a maiden], sanctified with Homa-Mantrams, a person attains the fruits of hundreds of Jotisthoma-Sacrifice. (63)

Having given away a maiden-daughter, decorated with ornaments, clothes and seats a father attains to the celestial region and is adored of the Suras (celestials). (64)

The Moon enjoys a maiden when hairs grow on her person; seeing the menstrual blood the Gandharvas [enjoy her]; and seeing her rising breasts, the Fire. (65)

[A maiden] eight years [old] becomes a Gouri; one of nine years a Rohini; one of ten years, a Kanyā (maiden); and after that, a Rajasvalā (a woman in menstrual period). (66)

By seeing a maiden in menses, her mother, father and eldest brother—these three go to hell. (67)

Therefore one should espouse a maiden before she has menstried; the marriage of an eight years old maiden is most preferrable. (68)

A learned person, who makes a gift of oil, seats and water for washing feet, becomes always of a delighted mind and happy in this world. (69)

He,—who gives away, according to his power, after decorating them, two bulls, endowed with good marks, capable of carrying carts and accompanied with a plough,—lives, having his soul purged off of all sins and secured all desired-for objects, in the celestial region for years equalling their downs in number. (70—71)

He,—who gives away, unto a twice-person, a milch-cow, after decorating her with belmetal bells and a cloth,—becomes glorified in the celestial region. (72)

By giving, unto a Brāhmaṇa, who has mastered the Vēdās, fertile lands and a young cow, one becomes glorified in the celestial region. (73)

The first offspring of the Fire is gold; Vishnū’s offspring is the earth; and kine are the daughters of the Sun. By him, who makes gifts of gold, earth and kine, three regions are given away. (74)

A man lives gloriously in the celestial region for years equalling the number of fruits and vegetables dedicated [by him]. (75)

The fruit, of all sorts of gifts, follows one birth; but the fruit, of the gift of gold, earth and of an eight years old maiden, follows seven births. (76)

That man,—who makes gift of a good-natured milch-cow with a calf, having its horns bedecked with silver or gold, covered with a cloth, and freed from any disease,—repairing to the celestial region, lives near Brāhmaṇa for so many thousand years as are the downs of the cow and the calf. (77—78)

He,—who, according to the regulation mentioned before, makes gift of a sound bull,—reaps fruits ten times more than what is got by the gift of a cow [only]. (79)

The giver of water, being freed from thirst for all objects, attains to incomparable gratification; the giver of boiled rice, being gratified with all objects, enjoys happiness. (80)
Of all gifts that of boiled rice, is considered as the highest in the Smriti; his life (i.e., the giver's) becomes more fruitful than those of all creatures. (81)

Since the Lord [Brahmá] creates, in every cycle, all creatures from boiled rice, therefore there has never been nor shall there ever be any gift higher than that of boiled rice. (82)

There is no gift superior to that of boiled rice, for from boiled rice all creatures, forsooth, originate and live. (83)

By giving, in order, unto a Vipra superior in accomplishments, earth, cowdung, Kus'á-reed and the sacrificial thread, one is born in a great family. (84)

He, who makes gifts of scents for the mouth and wood for cleaning the teeth, becomes endued with pure fragrance and expert in speech. (85)

He,—who gives, unto a Vipra, water for washing the feet, generative organ and the anus,—becomes always of purified understanding. (86)

He,—who gives, unto the diseased, medicine, food suited to ailments, oily substances, those for rubbing the body, and protection,—becomes freed from all sorts of diseases. (87)

By giving away molasses, sugar-cane juice, salt, curries, and sweet-scented drinks, one becomes greatly happy. (88)

The virtue, [acquired] by various gifts, has thus been completely described; by the virtue of the gift of learning, one lives gloriously in the region of Brahmá. (89)

The Vipras,—who give boiled rice unto one another, who adore one another and who accept presents from one another,—save [themselves mutually] and are saved. (90)
By an intelligent person, seeking his own well-being, these gifts and others should be made specially unto the poor, the blind and other distressed persons. (91)

The person, who gets the hairs shaved and the nails pared of the Brahmachárins and Yatins, is born possessed of excellent eyes. (92)

The man,—who places lamps in temples, in the houses of the twice-born, at the crossing of four roads,—is born endowed with intellect, discriminating knowledge and excellent eyes. (93)

A person,—by making gifts of sesame, according to his might in the daily and occasional rites, as well as in those undertaken with a particular motive,—is born possessed of children, animals and wealth. (94)

A Vipra, who, being solicited, gives away grass, wood, etc., as asked for, reaps fruits equal to that of the gift of a cow. (95)

A man, who being engaged in maintaining his own wife, commits culpable deeds, but knows her in the time of Ritu, comes by a most excellent condition. (96)

Living in the house, a Vipra, after [performing the duties of] the second order, should, on his flesh being loosened and hairs growing grey, resort to the third order. (97)

Taking his own wife, desirous of following him, and the sacred Fire, a wise man should repair to the forest and must not abandon the Homa-[Fire] (there.) (98)

He should duly, with forest-grown fruits, offer cakes [to the Celestials and the departed Manes]; and he should give alms, consisting of vegetables, fruits and roots, unto the mendicants. (99)

Offering oblations to the Fire, he should daily study,
[the Védás]; [and] on every Parva-day, he should perform the Ishti and the Párvana rites. (100)

Thus living in the forest and being informed of regulations about all objects, he should, after finishing the Homáz-rites and restraining his senses absolutely, resort to the fourth order. (101)

By placing the sacred Fire within himself, a twice-born person should adopt the life of mendicancy (i.e., of a Bhikshu). He should be given to the study of the Véda and be devoted to spiritual science. (102)

By begging eight, seven, or five, morsels of food and washing them all with water, that Muni, being self-controlled, should partake of them. (103)

After taking his meals, a Vipra should live alone in a solitary forest; and, controlling his mind, body and speech, should meditate on [the Para-Brahma.] (104)

He should not seek death or life; so long as the lease of life exists, he should await the appointed hour. (105)

Thus serving the [four] orders, a twice-born person, who has conquered anger and the senses and who has learnt the Veda-Sástra, attains to the region of Brahmá. (106)

The regulations, of all the A’sramas, have thus been described as a side-issue; I shall now duly describe the atonement for all the sins. (107).

The killer of a Bráhmaṇa, a drunkard, a stealer of gold, and one who knows his step-mother—all these are mahápitakins (great sinners); the fifth is one who associates with them. (108)

Clad in bark, wearing matted locks, and carrying a special mark, the destroyer of a Bráhmaṇa should repair into a forest; and, being shorn of all desires, he should live on forest fruits. (109)
If he cannot maintain himself with the forest-produces, like a mendicant he should roam in a village; [and] being self-controlled and carrying the mark of a bedstead that man should beg alms from the four Varnas. (110)

Having taken alms, he should again return to the forest; that sinful wight, shorn of idleness, should always live in the forest. (111)

That sinful wight, who has killed a Brāhmaṇa, should announce his crime and perform the penance for twelve years according to this regulation. (112)

Having controlled all the senses [and] being devoted to the well-being of all creatures, one, after performing the atonement for Brahmanicide, would be freed from the sin. (113)

Hereafter, O ye Vipras, I shall describe, unto ye, who are desirous of hearing, the means of expiation, laid down by the Veda-S'āstra, for the drinker of spirituous liquors. (114)

Goudī,* Paishthī,† as well as Mādhvī‡ are known as the three sorts of spirituous liquor; the one is as sinful as are the others; they should never be drunk of by the twice-born. (115)

The drinker of spirituous liquors, who wishes to be freed from the sin, should drink Surā (wine) after having heated it, or the urine of a cow of the colour of fire; or, he should eat cowdung of a similar colour. (116)

[Or, he should drink] heated clarified butter or similar milk; or, freed from all desires, he should live on particles of rice. (117)

---

* Spirit distilled from molasses.
† Spirit distilled from rotten rice.
‡ Spirit distilled from Mouā-flowers.
Or, the drinker of spirituous liquor should perform three Chāndrāyana-penances. With the performance of the penance, he would be freed from the sin. (118)

Undoubtedly this is the purification for a drinker of spirituous liquor. By drinking water kept in a wine-bowl, one is required to perform the purificatory rites again. (119)

By stealing gold, a man should communicate it unto the king. Then the king, taking up a mace, should kill the thief. (120)

If that thief survives [the stroke,] he would be freed from [the sin of] theft; or, by living in a forest, being clad in bark, he should perform the penance for Brahmamicide. (121)

Or, having made a female figure with iron and heated it, he should embrace it; such is the purification for theft according to the deliverance of Śaṅvarta. (122)

By lying on the bed of a step-mother, one should lie down on an iron bed; or, a twice-born person should perform three or four Chāndrāyana. A penance being thus performed, he would, thereafter, be freed from the sin. (123)

If any person, stupefied by sin, associates for six or more months with these, he should perform the penance mentioned before. (124)

By associating with the mahāpātakins (great sinners); such as the destroyer of a Brāhmaṇa, one should, for the purification of that sin, perform the penance laid down for each [sinner respectively]. (125)

By killing a Kshatriya, one becomes purified with three Kṛichchhras; being self-restrained, he should similarly perform three Kṛichchhras. (126)

If any how one, under the influence of ignorance, kills a Vais'ya, that man—the destroyer of the Vais'ya, should perform a Krīchkhātikrīchchhra. (127)

By killing a S'udra, one should duly perform a Tapta-Krīchchhra. (128)

I shall, in sooth, describe the redemption for a cow-slaughter. A person, killing a cow, should, after controlling his senses, sleep on the bare earth in a cowpen filled with kine for half-a-month. A twice-born, seeking freedom from sin, should live, in order, upon all these—Suktu (sour gruel), Yāvaka (boiled barley), Piuyāka (sesame-paste), milk, curd and cowdung. Shorn of nails and hairs, he would be purified in half-a-month. (129—131)

Bathing thrice and following kine, a person, being self-restrained and shorn of pride, should do all these. (132)

He should, according to his might, recite daily the Gāyatrī and the sacred verses. Then completing his vow, he should give a most excellent feast to the Vipras. (133)

The Vipras being fed, he should give away a cow as a present. (134)

Many kine being slain [by one] either by binding or by shutting up, the penance for his purification would be double of that for [killing] a cow. (135)

If, by an accident on any occasion, one [cow] is killed by many, they should severally perform each part of the penance [laid down] for [a cow-] slaughter. (136)

If, for branding [a cow], for treating a cow, or for bringing out a dead foetus, any calamity (i.e., death) happens, there would be no sin. (137)

There is no penance for [a cow] being killed by being bound in the night, by a serpent, tiger, fire, or by any other calamity. (138)
[When a cow is killed] by being shut up, one should perform one part of the penance; when by being bound, two parts; and [when killed] for cutting off a limb, [one should perform the full penance] less by one part. (139)

By killing it with stones, sticks, rods or weapons, one should perform a complete penance for purification. (140)

By killing an elephant, a horse, a buffaloe, a camel or a monkey, one should fast for seven nights in all these [sins.] (141)

By killing a tiger, a dog, a lion, a bear or a boar, a twice-born person should perform a penance and feed the Brāhmaṇas. (142)

By killing all sorts of forest-ranging deer, one should remain fasting for three nights and recite the Agni-Mantrams. (143)

By killing a swan, a crow, a crane, a pigeon, a Sārasa or a Bhāsa, one should spend three days [in fasting.] (144)

Chakravāka (ruddy goose), Krouñcha (heron), Sārikā, parrot, Tittiri, falcon, vulture, Vuluka, pigeon, Tittibha, Jálapáda (water-fowl having a net), cuckoo, fowl,—[in the destruction] of all these birds, fasting for a day [is laid down.] (145—146)

By killing a frog, a snake, a cat, or mouse one should remain fasting for three nights [and then] feed the Brāhmaṇas. (147)

By killing boneless worms, one is purified with the Prāṇāyāma; in killing those that have bones, a learned Vipra should make some presents. (148)

A twice-born person, who, stricken with lust, knows a Chāndala-woman, is purified, in order, with three Krichchhras [beginning] with the Prājāpatya. (149)
For knowing a Pukkasa-woman (the offspring of a Nishâda by a S'údra-woman), whether under the influence of lust or not, the penance of Chándráyâna is laid down as the highest purification in the Smrti. (150)

By knowing an actress, a S'ailûshi (a dancing girl), a washer-woman, one who makes her living by bamboo-made articles, and a cobbler-woman, one should perform a Chándráyâna. (151)

For him the penance of Sántapanam becomes destructive of sin who, under the influence of lust, knows a Kshatriya-, or a Vais'ya-, woman. (152)

By knowing a S'údra-woman for a month or half-a-month, a Brâhmaṇa would become purified in a fortnight by living on barley and the urine of a cow. (153)

By knowing [another] Brâhmaṇa's wife, a Vipra should perform a Prájópatya; a Kshatriya, by knowing [another] Kshatriya's wife, should perform the same penance (154)

By holding intercourse with a cow, a man should perform the penance of Chándráyâna. (155)

By knowing a preceptor's daughter, father's sister or her daughter, one should perform the penance of Chándráyâna. (156)

By unknowingly knowing a maternal uncle's wife, a woman of one's own family, the daughter of a maternal uncle, or a daughter-in-law, one would become purified by a Purâka. (157)

By knowing the wife of a paternal uncle, or a brother's wife, one should perform the penance [laid down] for knowing a step-mother. There exists no other redemption for him. (158)

By getting upon (i.e., co-habiting with) one's own father's wives other than his own mother, and by knowing any of these women, viz., a sister, a maternal uncle's daughter, a step-mother's sister, that vilest of men should perform a Taptakrishchhra. (159)

For that vilest of men, who knows his own mother, daughter, or his own sister no atonement has been laid down. (160)

For knowing a maiden, one should perform this (i.e., the Prájápatya); in holding sexual intercourse with an animal or a harlot, Prájápatya is laid down. (161)

A twice-born person, who knows his wife's friend, a maiden, his own mother-in-law, or his wife's sister, one engaged in Niyama, or one observant of a religious vow, should perform an ordinary penance and give away a milch-cow. (162)

A highly distressing penance is laid down for the expiation of his sin, who co-habits with a woman in her menses, or with one who is in the family way, or with a degraded woman. (163)

By knowing a prostitute, a Bràhmaṇa should perform a Krìchchhra; such is the expiation of sins according to the deliverance of Saṁvarta. (164)

By knowing another Bràhmaṇa's wife, a Bràhmaṇa would become purified by a Krìchchhra. (165)

If somehow, a Bràhmaṇa-woman comes in contact with a S'údra, she should perform the penance of Chándráyanya which is most purifying according to the Smriti. (166)

By somehow knowing a Bràhmaṇa-woman, a Ksha-triya or a Vaisya would be purified in a month by living on barley and the urine of a cow. (167)

By knowing the women of Chándâlas, Pukkasas, S'wapâkas, or of other degraded castes, one of a superior caste should perform three Chándráyanaṇas. (168)
Listen now to the means of expiation for [other] sinners [than those mentioned above]. A wicked-minded person, who, having adopted a life of renunciation knows a woman for procreating children, should thereafter, untiringly perform a penance, extending over six months. (169).

This is the penance for those, who after taking poison or entering into fire [for committing suicide], become dark-coloured or of variegated colour. This is also the penance, laid down in the Smriti, for those outcastes who vilify [chaste] women and know censurable women. (170)

[This is also] the purification for killing men; the King of the departed spirits (Yama) has said so. (171)

No tear should be shed by the good, seeking their own well-being, for those killed by kine, or for those who have committed suicide. (172)

He,—who carries the dead-body of, or cremates the same, or performs the watery rites for, any of these,—should perform the penance of Chândrāyana. (173)

By merely touching the dead-body (i.e., not carrying or cremating the same), or by only touching its cloth, the former should perform a penance; and the latter, fast for a day. (174)

[The offering of] water and funeral cakes [and the performance of] S'rāddha for the great sinners and for those who commit suicide, do not at all reach [them] but are stolen by the Râkshasas. (175)

No S'rāddha should be performed by those who have been killed by the Chândâlas, aquatic animals and snakes, [as well as] for those who have been killed by the punishment [given] by the Brâhmanâs. (176)
If [before cleaning himself] after passing urine or excreta or with the leavings of food in his mouth, a twice-born person is touched by a dog, etc., he should, after bathing, recite the Gāyatrī for a thousand times. (177)

By touching a Chāṇḍāla, an outcaste, a dead-body, a lowcaste, a woman in her menses, and a woman in a state of impurity consequent on child-birth, one should bathe with the cloth on. (178)

Bathing is laid down for him who touches an object which should not be touched [with an article in his hand]; after that āchomanam and sprinkling of that article with water is spoken of. (179)

The foremost of the twice-born, who, with the leavings of food in his mouth, is touched by a Chāṇḍāla or any other [degraded caste], becomes purified by living on barley and the urine of a cow for six nights. (180)

By being touched by a dog or by another woman in menses, a woman in menses should fast for the remaining days [of the menstrual period] and get herself purified by drinking clarified butter after bathing [at the end of the menstrual period]. 181

By drinking well-water contaminated by a Chāṇḍāla’s vessel, one becomes purified by living on barley and the urine of a cow for three nights. (182)

By drinking water, out of ignorance, in sacred waters, tanks and rivers polluted by the degraded castes, one becomes purified with the Pañchagavya. (183)

By drinking water from wine-bowls, from a place where it is distributed to travellers, and that which comes from the sky, a twice-born person, after fasting for a day and night, should take the Pañchagavya. (184)
By drinking water from a well contaminated by excreta and urine, twice-born persons become purified [by fasting] for three nights; Sántapānām is laid down, in the Smṛiti, as the expiation for drinking water from a pitcher [similarly contaminated]. (185)

[The following is] the means of purification for sullied tanks, wells and ponds. By taking out a hundred pitcherfuls of water, one should throw the Pañchagavya [into them]. (186)

By drinking the milk of a sheep, that of an animal whose hoof is not cloven, (as a horse, an ass, etc.,) and that of a she-camel, the foremost of the twice-born, for the purification thereof, should take barley for three nights. (187)

By taking the milk of a she-goat, that of a cow pursued by a bull for impregnating her, and that of an animal that takes excreta, one attains to purification [by fasting] for three nights. (188)

By taking excreta and urine, one should perform a Prājāpatya; taking the food partaken of by a dog, crow or a cow, a twice-born person should [fast] for three days. (189)

By taking the food partaken of by a cat or a mouse, a twice-born person should take the Pañchagavya; by taking the residue of a Súdra’s food one would become purified [by fasting] for three nights. (190)

By taking onion, garlic, as well as a domesticated fowl, a mushroom, and a domesticated hog, a twice-born person should perform a Chándrāyaṇa. (191)

By taking the urine or excreta of a dog, ass, camel, monkey, jackal or a Kaŋka (bird), a man should perform the penance of Chándrāyaṇa. (192)
By taking boiled rice, which is stale, or which is sullied by hairs or insects, or which has been seen by outcastes, a twice-born person should take the Pañchagavya. (193)

By taking food from the vessel of a degraded caste, or from that of a woman in menses, one would become purified, in half-a-month, by living upon barley and the urine of a cow. (194)

By taking all these interdicted food,—beef, human flesh and what is brought by the hand of a dog, one should perform a Chándráyana. (195)

[By taking food] at the hands of a Chândâla, a S'wapaka or of a Pukkasa, a Vipra would become purified, in half-a-month, by living upon barley and the urine of a cow. (196)

By associating with an outcaste for a month or a half, one would become purified, in half-a-month, by living upon barley and the urine of a cow. (197)

And on every occasion when a twice-born person would think himself impure, he should perform a Homa with sesame and recite the Gâyatri. (198)

This auspicious regulation about penance has been spoken of by me. The penance, for sins not mentioned [before], should now be spoken of [by me]. (199)

Forsooth, the foremost of the twice-born would be daily freed from sins by gifts, Homa, recitation of the Gâyatri, the practice of the Pránâyâma and Vedic study. (200)

The gift of gold, that of a cow, and that of earth, dissipate sins [committed in this life] and those committed in pristine life. (201)

He,—who, gives unto a self controlled twice-born person, sesame and a cow,—is freed from sins, such as Brahmanicide, etc.; there is no doubt in it. (202)

By fasting on the Full-Moon day when the month of Māgha sets in and giving sesame unto the Brāhmaṇās, one is freed from all [sorts of] sins. (203)

By fasting on the Full-Moon day in the month of Karttika and giving away gold, raiment and boiled-rice, a person is freed from iniquities (204)

Amāvasyā (the last day of the dark fortnight), the twelfth day of each fortnight, the last day of a month particularly, and a Sunday,—these are the most fitting days [for performing religious rites]. (205)

Bathing, the recitation of the Gāyatrī, Homa, the feeding of the Brāhmaṇās, fasting, and making gifts on all these days, each of these purifies a man. (206)

A learned person, after being bathed, purified, putting on a washed cloth, being of a purified soul, having controlled his senses, and resorting to the Sāttwik state of mind, should make gifts. (207)

For the expiation of minor sins, Homas, to the number of a thousand, should be performed, with seven Vyāhrītīs, by the twice-born ones seeking their own well-being. (208)

A twice-born person committing heinous crimes, should perform a Laksha (a hundred thousand) Homa; [and then] from the recitation of the Gāyatrī, [he] becomes freed from all sins. (209)

For the purification of all sins, one should, going to a forest or on the bank of a river, recite the most sacred Gāyatrī, the mother of the Vēdas. (210)

Bathing there, suppressing the vital airs, restraining his speech and being purified by three Prāṇāyāmas, a twice-born person should recite the Gāyatrī. (211)
Being clad in a pure cloth, seated on the ground and on a pure spot, and self-restrained, and by performing the āchamanam with a pure hand, one should begin the recitation of the Gāyatrī. (212)

By the recitation of the Gāyatrī, all the sins, both of this world and of another, are dissipated in five nights. (213)

There is no purification of iniquitous deeds superior to the Gāyatrī. (214)

By reciting the Gāyatrī accompanied with Mahā-Vyāhritis and Prāṇāyama, a Vipra becomes freed from all sins. (215)

Living on a restricted diet and being given to the well-being of all creatures, a Brahmachārin, by the recitation of one-hundred thousand Gāyatrī, becomes freed from all sins. (216)

By officiating as a priest for him for whom no priestly service should be rendered, by taking boiled rice of a censurable wight, one, by reciting one thousand and eight Gāyatrī, becomes freed [from sins]. (217)

As a snake throws off its slough, so a foremost of the twice-born, who daily studies the Gāyatrī, becomes freed [from his sins] in a month. (218)

A Vipra,—who being restrained and purified, always recites the Gāyatrī, goes, becoming like air and assuming the astral body, to the most excellent station. (219)

A twice-born person should daily recite mentally the seven Vyāhritis, accompanied with Praṇava; and the Gāyatrī, accompanied with S'irasā-Mantram. (220)

The suppression of one's own vital airs constitutes the regulation of the Prāṇāyama. Being self-restrained, one should perform the Prāṇāyama thrice every day. (221)
Three Prāṇāyāmas being practised, any sin, that is committed by the mind, word or the body, is forthwith destroyed. (222)

He,—who reads the Rīg-Vēda, the Yajush with its branches, and the Śāmans with their esoteric meanings, —becomes freed from all sins. (223)

By reciting the Pāvamāni-Sūkta, the entire Purusha-Sūkta, and the Pitṛi-Mantram [recited by] Madhuchchhandas, one becomes freed from all sins. (224)

By reciting the Brāhmaṇa-Mandala [of the Rīg-Vēda], Vṛihat-Kathā mentioned in the Rudra-Sūkta, Vāmadēva-Mantram, and the Vṛihat-Sāma, one becomes freed from all sins. (225)

By performing the Chāndrāyaṇa, the highest purificatory measure for all sins, one attains to purification and the most excellent station. (226)

This most sacred Dharma-S'āstra (Religious Institute) was described by Saṃvarta. By studying it, a Brāhmaṇa attains to the eternal abode of Brahmā. (227)

KA'TYA'YANA-SAMHITA'.

CHAPTER I.

Thereupon like unto a lamp [lighting up all objects in darkness], I shall fully point out the Regulation of all the rites mentioned, but not made clear, by Gobhila, as also of other [religious] works. (1)

Three circles of thread should be formed upwards; and three circles, downwards; thus a sacred thread becomes of three circles: then one knot should be made. (2)

That which hanging on the spinal chord and the navel reaches the waist,—such a sacrificial thread should be held (i.e., worn), and not one longer or loftier than it. (3)

One must always put on the sacred thread and bind the tuft of hair on the crown: what one does without having the sacred thread on or without binding the tuft of hair on the crown, is equal to an act not done. (4)

Drinking water thrice, one should, therewith, sprinkle the mouth twice; then [one should] sprinkle with water the following places:—the face, nose, eyes, ears, navel, breast, head and the ankles. (5)

Closing the three fingers, one should touch one's face; with the thumb and the forefinger, one should touch one's nose; with the thumb and the nameless finger, the eyes and the ears [should be touched] again and again. (6)
With the smallest finger and the thumb, [one should touch] the navel; and the breast, with the palm; with all the fingers, the head; and afterwards, one should touch the arms with the tips [of all the fingers]. (7)

Where instructions about a religious rite have been delivered to a person engaged in performing them, but no limb has been mentioned, there the right hand should be known as [the one] competent for performing the rite. (8)

Where there is no rule about the quarter in the performance of, the recitation of the Gāyatrī, and the Homa, Aindrī (east), Soumī (south-east), and Aparājita (north-east),—these three directions have been spoken [as the fittest]. (9)

Where there is no such regulation [that one should perform a rite] either standing, sitting, or bending the forepart of the body, one should do it by sitting and not by bending the forepart of the body nor by standing. (10)

Gourí, Padmá, S’achí, Médhá, Sávitrí, Vijayá, Jayá, Dévaséná, Svadhá, Sváhá, Dhriti, Pushtri, Tushti with Atmadévatá,—these Matris are the mothers of the Lokas. For performing a Vriddhi-rite (on the occasion of a marriage, etc.,) these fourteen, added by Ganes’a, should be adored. (11—12)

In all religious rites, the Matris with the leader of the Gañas (Ganes’a) should be adored with care. They, being adored, make [the performer] worthy of adoration. (13)

Having drawn figures on white images, canvas and dried paddy, [they should be adored] with separate Naivédyas (articles of worship). (14)

With clarified butter, one should make seven or five currents on the wall, neither very low nor very high, as Vasudhārās. (15)

Then, being self-controlled, having recited there longevity-giving-Mantrams, for the purpose of Śánti (peaceful completion of the rite), one should reverentially undertake a S'rāddha for six departed Manes. (16)

Without offering oblations to the departed Manes at a S'rāddha, one should not perform a Vedic rite; even there the Mātris should be adored first with care. (17)

The full complement of regulations, spoken of by Vasishtha, should be observed here without fish or meat. I shall, hereafter, describe what difference is there. (18)

CHAPTER II.

HAVING made an even number of Brāhmaṇās, invited in the morning, to take their seats on both the sides, one should, with an evenly extended palm, offer them Kus'a. (1)

The Kus'ās for a sacrifice should be of a green colour; those for Pākayajña, yellow; those for Pitris should be with roots; and those for Vis'wadēvās should be of a variegated colour. (2)

Green Kus'ās, with leaves, dried, plain, shorn of any defect and of the measure of a cubit (i.e., the distance from the elbow to the end of the closed fist), should be spread [with the Pitri-Tirtha.] (3)

When the Kus'ās, that are spread for offering funeral cakes, and those [spread] for offering water, are held while passing urine or excreta, they should be thrown away: so it is laid down [in the Smṛiti]. (4)
While performing a rite for the Deities, one should always lay down the right knee [on the ground]; and one should lay down the left knee, while performing a rite for the departed Manes. (5)

The right knee should never be laid low [in a Vṛiddhi Srāddha]; in it, one should always serve the Pitris reverentially like unto the Divinities. (6)

Having made them (i.e., the Brāhmanaṣ) sit on the Kus'ā offered to the Pitris, according to the following regulation, and having recited their family and name, one should offer Arghya to the deceased ancestors. (7)

In it, no Apasavya [going round a person, so as to keep the right side towards him] should be done; no Pitri-Tirtha is wished-for; the filling up of the vessels should be made with the Daiva-Tirtha (water). (8)

Having made, [amongst] all the pairs [of Brāhmanaṣ,] the younger place his hand on that of the elder, and their Pavitras being placed in the foreparts of their palms, Arghya should be given; in it, [the Arghya] should not be given separately. (9)

A Pavitra, in each and every place, should be made of Kus'ā-reeds, having tips and two rows of leaves and no leaves in the middle part, and should be of the size of the span of the thumb and the forefinger. (10)

This is the mark described of Piñjalī; this is also necessary for cleaning clarified butter. (11)

Some say that a Kus'ā-Piñjalī should be made of dried or withered blossoms or of fresh raw-blossoms. (12)

The recitation of the Pitri-Mantram, the touching of the heart, the seeing of degraded persons, passing wind, excessive laughter, speaking an untruth, the touching of a cat or of a mouse, speaking harshly and the rise of anger,—any of these portends taking place while performing a religious rite, one should touch water. (13—14)

CHAPTER III.

To perform no rite, to do that which is enjoined for another branch, and thirdly to perform improper rites, are the three classes of Akriyās (interdicted acts), mentioned by the learned, for those who perform religious rites. (1)

Fruitless becomes the operation of that stupid wight, who, renouncing the protection of his own branch, wishes to follow that of another. (2)

That which has not been mentioned in one’s own branch [of the Vēda,] but what has been mentioned in another branch, as not colliding [with one’s own regulation], should be performed by the learned like Agnihotra and other rites. (3)

If a person, after being engaged in a religious rite, commits an improper act out of ignorance, he should thereupon complete the same, beginning from the part where the irregularity has taken place. (4)

If he happens to know after the completion [of a rite] that an irregularity has been committed by him, he should perform it again; no re-performance of all the rites [is allowed]. (5)

When any irregularity takes place in a prominent religious rite, it should again be performed with all its parts; but if any irregularity takes place in any of its parts, neither it nor the [principal] rite should be performed again. (6)
[In a Pārvāṇa-S'rāddha], the recitation of the Madhuvāta-Mantram thrice after the Gāyatrī is laid down for those who wish to feed [the Brāhmaṇās]; but [the A'bhuyadīyaka-S'rāddha] is divorced from the Madhu-Mantram. (7)

In it, one should never recite a Mantram describing the greatness of the Pitrīs; but the recitation of any other auspicious Soma-, Sāma-, Mantram should not be omitted. (8)

[In a Pārvāṇa-S'rāddha, the Brāhmaṇās] being gratified [with food], boiled rice, near the residue, should be scattered like sesame or barley; [in an A'bhuyadīyaka,] the opposite procedure should be adopted. (9)

[In an A'bhuyadīyaka,] the question,—"Susaṃpannam" (is it well-done?), should be put instead of,—"Trīptāḥ sthā" (are you gratified?); when they say that "it is well-done," one should dedicate the last portion of the food. (10)

Having invoked [the spirit of one's father] at the base of the Kus'ā-reeds having their tops directed towards the east, one should pour water from the vessel at the root with the Mantram,—"Avanénikshva." (11)

At the middle and the topmost parts, [one should invoke] the second and the third [degrees of Manes, i.e., one's grandfather, and great-grandfather]; on the left side, [one should invoke] [the three grades of departed Manes,] such as, the maternal grandfather, etc. (12)

Having taken up the boiled rice from all [the collections]; mixed it with curry, barley, jujube and curd; been seated facing the east; and offered funeral cakes of the size of Bel-fruits, like unto the offering of water;—one should again sprinkle the Darbā-grass with the water, washing the vessel. (13–14)
CHAPTER IV.

In a Śráddha-operation, gradual [advancement of the giver is effected] by the gradual offering of funeral cakes [from bottom upwards]; and gradual degradation [is effected by offering the same] at the top downwards. (1)

Therefore in all the Śráddhas, principal and minor, one should offer small Pinda at the bottom, middle, and the top [of the Kusā-reeds]. (2)

Then one should dedicate scents and other [articles] silently and then make the twice-born persons perform the A'chamanam; in other places, (i.e., in other Śráddkas) this procedure, without barley, should be observed. (3)

[Funeral cakes should be offered] in a lowland, in the south; [the offerer should sit] facing the south; the Darbha-grass [should be scattered] with their tops directed towards the south; this is the regulation in other [Śráddhas]. (4)

[With the Mantram,—] “Suprokshitamastu” (it is sprinkled well), one should sprinkle with water the ground lying before [the Brāhmaṇās]; [with the Mantram,—]“Sivā A'pah santu” (may water become auspicious), one should pour water into the hands of a couple [of Brāhmaṇās]. (5)

[With the Mantram,—] “Soumanasyamastu” (be of delighted mind), one should, hereafter, offer flowers; and with,—“Akshatańchárishtańchástu” (may fried paddy remove ills), one should offer fried paddy. (6)

Akshayyodakadán (gift of inexhaustible water) should be made like that of Arghya; one should daily do it with the sixth inflection, and never with the fourth. (7)

In [the offering of] Arghya, of inexhaustible water, of Pinda, in sprinkling water on the Darbha-grass at a S'raddha-ceremony, and in reciting the Swadha [at the termination of the rite], no regular order needs be maintained. (8)

Replies being given by the leading twice-born in all the prayers, one, reciting the Mantram, for placing a vessel on the back with the face upwards, (i.e., "Urijām Vahantik," ) should sprinkle water on the Pindas strewn with Pavitra. (9)

Then the pairs of Brāhmaṇās should be made to recite "Swasti" (peace be unto you). Then joining the tops of both the thumbs and saluting the Vipra standing at the head, one should then follow him. (10)

The entire course of S'raddha-rules has thus been briefly described by me; they who know them never make mistakes in S'raddha-rites. (11)

He, who knows the sum-total of this mysterious science told by Vas'ishtha, knows the S'raddha-[rules] and not any one else. (12)

---

CHAPTER V.

In all those rites, which, once commenced, are to be performed respectfully, the adoration of the Mātris and the celebration of the (A'bhuyudayika-) S'raddha should not be done, on every occasion, by the performer of the rite. (1)

In depositing the Sacred Fire, in the two Homas (morning and evening), in the Vais'vadēva-[adoration] in the Vali-rite, in a half-monthly sacrifice, in that performed on the Full-Moon day, and in a new sacrifice, the learned sages, informed of rituals relating to sacrifices, hold, that one S'raddha should be performed and not separately. (2—3)
In an Ashtaka-(Homa), in a Sṛaddha [for the departed Manes], in a Soshyanti-(Homa), in Jātakarma (a ceremony consequent on a birth), and in a rite to be performed on the return of a person from a foreign country, no [A'bhuyudayika-]Sṛaddha should be performed. (4)

In all the rites beginning with the marriage and ending with the Garbhādhiṇa, which we have heard of, it is only in a marriage that one should perform this Sṛaddha and not at the beginning of every rite. (5)

For Nishkramana (the rite of bringing out a child to the public in the fourth month), and for that of entering into a house, there is one Sṛaddha in the night-fall. In a religious ceremony, performed for the attainment of religious prosperity, one should not perform a Sṛaddha in the beginning. (6)

In all the six rites, such as the application of plough, etc., one should perform [the Sṛaddha] separately. And at the recurrence of every such, one should perform one [Sṛaddha], but not in the beginning. (7)

There is no [performance of] Sṛaddha at the rites that are performed for the well-being of big animals at the appearance of a solar disc; and for that of smaller animals at the appearance of a lunar disc. (8)

It should not be performed in the end in rites for the crooked positions of the planets; and in rites like [the administration of] poison for being bitten [by a snake] and in the treatment of worm-bite. (9)

While performing a number of rites, the Mātrīs should be adored once, and a Sṛaddha should be performed once at the beginning and not separately in [all the rites]. (10)
Whenever a S'radhya takes place, there the Mātrīs [should be adored]. This has been spoken of [by me] as a side-issue. The main point I would [now proceed to] describe truthfully. (11)

CHAPTER VI.

If the eldest brother has deposited the Sacred Fire, then one should deposit the same being subject to the time of depositing and the person who has engendered the Fire. (1)

He, who takes a wife or deposits the Sacred Fire before his eldest brother, is known as Parivéttā. And the brother, born before, is known as Parivitti. (2)

Both the Parivitti and Parivéttā go to hell. Even if they have performed a penance, they partake of the fruits of Pādona. (3)

If superseding [the eldest and other] brothers,—living in foreign countries, having no generative power, having one testes, not born of the same mother, addicted to public women, outcasted, [and those who are] acting like S'údrás, suffering from a serious disease, innert, dumb, blind, deaf, hunch-backed, dwarf, lepers, greatly aged, widowers, given to agriculture, servants of the king, given to the multiplication of wealth and doing whatever they like, divorced from the family, insane and thieves,—a younger brother marries or deposits the Sacred Fire, he commits no sin. (4—6)

Even when hasty, one should, wait, at least for three years, [for a senior brother,] who multiplies his wealth by usury, who serves the king, who cultivates the land and who lives in a foreign country. (7)
When one hears of no news [of a senior brother] living in a foreign country, one should do it after [waiting for] a year; if he returns again, [the younger brother] should perform a part of a penance for purification. (8)

In a Lakṣmaṇa-rite (i.e., a rite beginning with Parisamūhana, i.e., sprinkling water round the Sacrificial Fire to Parishēka, (i.e., pouring water), one should draw lines with Kusā [around the Fire] leaving off seven fingers [on each side] [of the following lines]:—twelve fingers form the measure of the line that is directed towards the east; the measurement of another line touching its base and running towards the north, is twenty-one fingers; the remaining lines attached to the one running towards the north, are of the measurement of a thumb. (9—10)

If the rite of measurement and the person to do it, are not mentioned, the sacrificer should make the measurement. This is the conclusion of the learned. (11)

One should deposit the Sacred Fire, and it is highly spoken of by all. Sacrificial fuels should be collected by one willingly for kindling that Fire. (12)

He, to whom a maiden has been given by one by words, should collect the last sacrificial fuels for depositing the Sacred Fire; otherwise not. (13)

If in an unmarried state that maiden dies, he should not be guilty of the breach of vow. By that Fire, he may marry another maiden. (14)

If after soliciting, he does not get a maiden, he should consign that Fire unto himself and forthwith adopt the next order. (15)
CHAPTER VII.

It is said that Araṇī and the Uttara-Araṇī (i.e., the upper part) should be made of the branches spreading towards the east or north or upwards of an As'wattha, grown in an extensive ground and having a S'amī-tree attached to its root. It is preferable that Chatra and Ovili† should be made of the strongest parts of the wood. (1—2)

The [tree,] the root of which is attached to a S'amī, is called S'amīgarbha; in the absence of a S'amīgarbha, one should speedily create Fire from [one which is not so]. (3)

A length of twenty-four thumbs, a breadth of six thumbs, and a height of four, have been described as the size of the Araṇīs. (4)

A Pramantha is to be of eight fingers [in size]; a Chatram, ten fingers, and an Ovili, twelve fingers. These are churning instruments. (5)

Where instruction is given about the measurement of the thumb, there one should always take measurements with its bigger knot. (6)

A Nētra (the string of a churning stick) should be made with three circles of the down of a cow's tail mixed with hemp fibres of the size of a pure Vyāma (a measure of length equal to the space between the tips of the fingers of either hand when the arms are extended); by it, the Fire should be churned. (7)

The head, the eyes, the ears, the face, and the shoulders,—these five limbs of the Araṇī should be of

* A piece of wood of the S'amī-tree used for kindling the Sacred Fire by attrition; the fire-producing wooden stick.
† Sacrificial implements.
the size of a thumb each; the breast is spoken of [as measuring] two thumbs. (8)

The chest [is to measure] one thumb; the belly is known in the Smriti [as measuring] three thumbs; the hip is known [to measure] one thumb; the abdomen, two; and the anus, two. (9)

The two thighs, the two knee-joints, and the two feet, should severally measure four, three, and one thumb. These limbs of the Arañi have been described by those conversant with the rituals of a sacrifice. (10)

What is spoken of as the Guhyam (anus) of the Arañi is called the Dévayoni. The Fire, that is generated here, is spoken of as the most auspicious. (11)

Those who churn the Fire elsewhere, come by the fear of ailments. This is the regulation in the first churning, and not in the subsequent ones. (12)

The Pramantha (churning) should always be done with the upper part of the Arañi. He, who performs the churning by any other method, is affected by the sin of being born in a mixed caste. (13)

If the upper part of the Arañi be wet, has holes, has any circular part, or any cleft, it does no good unto the sacrificer. (14)

---

CHAPTER VIII.

Duly putting on a new cloth and a sacrificial thread, and with his face directed towards the east, one should hold the Yantra (sacrificial implement). (1)

Having firmly fixed the top of the churning stick on the Chatra-Vridhna and placed the Arañi in the north, a learned man should place on it the Vridhna. (2)
He should then place the Ovili, fixed to a pin attached to the base of the Chatra [on the Arani], turning its top towards the north; then being self-restrained and in a state of purity, he should, hold the Yantra with all his strength, so that it may not move. (3)

His wives, putting on new raiments, should put three folds of string around the Chatram and first of all, churn the Arani, so that Fire might drop in the east. (4)

The rite of placing the Sacred Fire should not be performed by the twice-born, if they have not even one wife; all the rites, that are done [in that state], know, as being not done at all. (5)

Many wives of the same caste and of other castes existing, the rite of churning, for producing the Fire, should be done by the chaste wives of the same caste, on account of the superiority of birth. (6)

Of them, one very capable, or any one of them, [or, in her absence,] any one of the wedded wives [belonging to other castes], should carefully churn the Fire. (7)

In it, one should not employ a S'údra-wife, or one who tries to injure her husband or is jealous of him, or one who does not perform religious observances, or one who lives with other men. (8)

Having made Lakshmana, for [the Fire,] born, placed it, lighted it, and put sacrificial fuels into it, he should make Brahmá seated. (9)

Then offering the libation, effecting the completion of the rite with all the Mantrams, and at the end of the sacrifice,—for the well-being of the house, [the sacrificer] should present unto a Bráhmaṇa two pieces of raiment and a cow. (10)
Where there is no instruction about the Homa-vessel, Sruva (sacrificial ladle) is mentioned in the Smriti [as the vessel for pouring] liquid substances; in minor rites, the palm is used [as the vessel]; with Srucha also, a Homa is performed. (11)

It is said in the Smriti that a Sruva should be made of Khadira-, or Palás'a-, wood; and be of the size of two vitasti (a measure of length, equal to twelve angulas or fingers); a Srucha should be of the length of an arm; and the handle should be round. (12)

The forepart of a Sruva should be like a nose; there should be two holes [on the two sides] of the circumference of two fingers [each]; the hole [in the] Sruva should be like that of a S'ard (an earthen tray-like vessel); one should make it on a nirváha-method and six fingers deep. (13)

Their cleaning should be done by a person, wishing to perform Homa, with Kus'á-grass, facing the east; when dipped in clarified butter, they should be washed with hot water. (14)

[One should place the articles] near the Fire either in the east side, facing the east; or in the north-side, facing the north; he should collect all the articles which should be used [in the Homa.] (15)

When no article for offering into Fire is mentioned, clarified butter is sanctioned for the Homa-rites; [and when Mantram or Deity is not mentioned,] the conclusion is that Prájápatya-Mantram (Vyáhriti), and Prajápati [should be recited, and adored]. (16)

One should never take fuels which are stouter than the thumb; those shorn of bark, those having worms, and those having clefts, [should not be used]. (17)

Those measuring more than a Prádes'a, those measuring less than a Pradēś'a, those having branches, those not completely made (i.e., having leaves), and those having no strength (i.e., useless ones), should never be used in Homa by one conversant [with rituals]. (18)

The measurement of a sacrificial fuel is described to be a couple of Pradēś'a (the span of the thumb and the forefinger); in all rites, such should be the sacrificial fuels. (19)

The learned say that there are eighteen kinds of sacrificial fuels, but in the Half-Monthly S'rāddhas, in that performed on the Full Moon-Day, and in other similar rites, twenty fuels [are used]. (20)

Before and after a Homa, one should, without [reciting] a Mantram or without [naming] a Deity, throw the Samid (a kind of tree); for it grows for generating the Fire. (21)

The preceptors have recorded in the Smriti that the sacrificial fuels, in a Homa performed with clarified butter, are for creating the Fire. I shall now clearly describe where this should not be done. (22)

It is laid down that no sacrificial fuel [should be used] in the rites called Aṅgahoma, Samittantra, [and] Soshyanti; in all those and [other] similar rites where no such mention is made (such as the Vais'wa-dēva, etc.); in a Homa performed for averting the calamity of breaking a limb; in a Watery-Homa; and in all the rites where oblations of Soma-Juice [are offered]. (23—24)

CHAPTER IX.

[In the evening] when the Sun is at a distance of thirty-six fingers before reaching the Setting Hill and [in the morning] after seeing the solar rays, one should generate the Sacred Fire. (1)

The Homa-regulation of those who wish to perform Homa at the rising of the Sun, does not become profane till the Sun does not rise a hand above the Rising Hill. (2)

As long as the Stars are not completely visible in the sky and the crimson rays do not disappear [from the firmament], one may perform the Evening- Homa. (3)

When the Sun disappears under dust, snow, or clouds, or behind a tree, one may offer oblations to the Sandhya; one's religious observance would not be stopped thereby. (4)

In Kshipra- Homa, a twice-born person should neither perform the Parisamúhanam (sprinkling water around the Sacrificial Fire), nor should he recite the Virúpáksha-Mantram; he should also avoid the Prapada (the Mantram beginning with Tapas'cha, Tejas'cha, etc.). (5)

In every rite, one should perform the Paruyukshanam (sprinkling water) with [the *Mantram,— Aditéhnviti and sing the Vámadévyā thrice, at the end. (6)

The seeing of the Moon, as mentioned, should be done in rites where no Homa is to be performed; the Vámadévyā should be sung in the end [when] a number of rites [is performed in a day]. The Vais'wadéva-rite should take place] after the Vali-rite. (7)

In those rites in which [Kus'á-reeds] are [already] scattered on the ground at the end, no [more] scattering should take place. For successfully performing one rite, one should leave off the circumference. (8)

In all oblations in sacrifice, not one of these three, —spreading the Kus'á outside, sprinkling water into the Sacrificial Fire, the recitation of the Vāmadēvya, should be done. (9)

It is said in the Smṛiti that in the matter of Havishya (vegetable diet), barley is superior; and next to it, is the Vṛihi (a kind of corn); one must avoid the Māsha (corn), the Kodrava (corn), and the white sesame, even if nothing is available. (10)

When any oblation is offered with a hand, the twelve knots should be filled; when by a belmetal vessel, the Sṛuva should be filled [with offerings]; clarified butter should be offered with the Daiva-Tirtha into the Fire having embers and flames. (11)

A man, who throws offerings into a Fire that has no embers or flames, becomes of weak digestion, suffers from dysentry and is born as a poor man. (12)

He, who seeks freedom from diseases, long life and great prosperity, should perform Homa with a Fire set with sacrificial fuels, and never with that into which no sacrificial fuels have been given. (13)

When prepared to offer oblations, one should not kindle the Fire with the Hasta, S'ūrpa, or the Vajra (sacrificial implement), or with wood; he may do it by a fan. (14)

The Fire is to be kindled by [the air of] the mouth, for it originates from the Mantram uttered by the mouth; that Fire should not be kindled by the mouth [is an injunction] applied to the Loukika-(ordinary) Fire. (15)

CHAPTER X.

If not suffering from any disease, one should daily, after washing the teeth, bathe in the morning, in rivers, etc., as in the day-time; when bathing in the house, one should recite the Mantram. (1)

The wood for cleaning the teeth, as spoken of by Nárada and others, should be cut measuring eight fingers and contain bark. With its tip, one should rub the teeth. (2)

Rising up, washing the eyes, becoming pure and self-restrained and reciting the Mantram, one should rub the teeth with a wood. (3)

[The Mantram is:—]“O tree, give us long life, strength, fame, energy, children, cattle, wealth, knowledge of the Védás, discriminative knowledge and genius.” (4)

In two months, beginning with S’rāvana, all the rivers get their menstrual courses. [No one] should bathe in them, excluding the rivers which go to an ocean. (5)

[The watery expanses,] the courses of which do not go beyond eight Kros’ās (16 miles), are not worthy of the name of a river: they are described as pools. (6)

[In offering water] in an Upākarmaṇ (a ceremony performed before commencing to read the Védás after the monsoon), in a rite of dedication, in a bathing after a death and at the solar or lunar eclipse, the Rajaka-(or menstruation-) impurity exists no longer. (7)

When the Brahmavadins go out for bathing in an Upākarmaṇ, or in a dedication rite, all the Védás, the Chhandas, the Celestials headed by Brahmá, the departed Manes, Marichi and other Rishis, gratified and seeking water, follow them in their bodily forms. (8—9)

Where these all appear, the sins of murder, etc., are, forsooth, dissipated what to speak of the impurity of a river? (10)

When the Rishis bathe and when a person, situate in their midst, has his body sprinkled with [their] scattering drops of water, [if he be] a Brāhmaṇa, he comes by learning and other desired-for objects; [and if] a maiden, she comes by a becoming bridegroom; and he, forsooth, attains to well-being in the next world. (11—12)

The Anirddas'āha* departed Manes, who are of the form of Rākshasás, eat all the impure offerings, water, etc., presented in a raw earthen vessel by a person in a state of impurity. (13)

During solar and lunar eclipses all the waters, that exist on earth and even that in a well, become like that of the Ganges. (14)

CHAPTER XI.

Hereafter I shall describe the regulations relating to the Sandhyā-adorations, since it is mentioned in the Smṛiti, that a Vipra, who does not perform the Sandhyā, is not entitled to perform a religious rite. (1)

Having taken up Kus'ā-reeds in the left-hand, one should perform the rite of A'chamanam; short Kus'ās are the most distinguished, while offering invocation; and the long ones shall form the bed or layer. (2)

The Darbhās are spoken of as being holy; therefore, in a Sandhyā-rite the left-hand should be made to hold them, and the right one should hold the Pavitra (two blades of Kus'ā-grass used at sacrifices in purifying and sprinkling the ghee). (3)

One should protect one's own self by sprinkling water

* The departed Manes, within ten days from the day of death, are called Anirddas'āha Prātas. on all sides, and sprinkle one's own head by drops of water with the Kus'ī. (4)

The Praṇava, Bhūrbhuvah, Swah Gāyatrī [forming the third], the three Mantrams,—"A’pohishta, etc.," [forming] the fourth, [are the Mantrams] for the Mārjanam (sprinkling the head with water). (5)

The three eternal Mahāvyāhritis, Bhūh, etc., Mahāk, Ṣanaḥ, Tapāḥ, Satya, the Gāyatrī, A’poyotirāsomritam, Brahma Bhūrbhuvah Swah, [forming] the first part of the Gāyatrī—at the beginning of all these Mantrams and at the end of the first part of the Gāyatrī, one should recite the Praṇava. (6—7)

Having restrained the vital airs, one should recite thrice these ten and seven Vyāhritis, Gāyatrī, Gāyatrī-S’irah (first part) and the Praṇava. This process is called the Prāṇayāma. (8)

"Taking water in his palm, putting the nose into it, and suppressing the breath or not, one should recite once or thrice the Aghamarshana-Sūkta. (9)

Standing up, one should throw water with joined palms towards the Sun, [reciting] the three Mantrams (Praṇava, three Vyāhritis and the Gāyatrī); then with the two Rik-Mantrams,—"Udutyāṁ," and "Chitram Dévānāṁ, etc., one should perform the rite of Sūryopasthanam (appearance of the Sun). (10)

The sages say that Sūryopasthanam should be performed at the two Sandhyā-adorations; if one wishes to do it during the noon, one should recite, in addition to it, the Mantram,—"Vibhrāt." (11)

With the heels not touching the heels, or with one foot touching the earth, or with that foot up-raised, or with joined palms, or with up-raised arms,—one should perform this rite. (12)
In whatever part there is greater distress and trouble, there is greater well-being; so say the learned for, well-being proceeds from hardship. (13)

According to one's own might, one should perform the first Sandhyá before the rising of the Sun; the middle one, in the noon; and the third, in the evening, before the Stars become visible; but at every Sandhyá, one should recite the three Riks (Pranava, the three Vyāhritis and the Gāyatrī). (14)

This is spoken of as the threefold Sandhyá, wherein exists the dignity of a Bráhmana. He is not called a Bráhmaṇa who has no reverence for it. (15)

As serpents cannot approach Garuda, so imperfection cannot approach him who fears the non-performance of the Sandhyá and who is always given to bathing. (16)

According to one's own might, one should, from the very beginning, recite the Véda-(Mantrams) daily. If one cannot recite all the Vedic Mantrams, one should invoke the presence of Rudra in the end. (17)

CHAPTER XII.

THEREUPON reciting in the beginning "OM," and "Tarpayami Namah" (I offer oblation), one should, with water and sesame, offer oblations to the Deities and the departed Manes. (1)

Brahma, Vishnu, Rudra, Prajápati, the Védás, the Divinities, the Chhandas, the Rishis, the Ancient Preceptors, the Gandharvás, the other tribes inferior to the Gandharvás, the incarnate months and years, the female Divinities, the group of Apsarás, the followers of the Divinities, the Nágás, the Oceans, the Mountains, the Rivers, Deified men, other men, Yakshas, the Rakshasás, the Supernás (the feathery tribes), the Pis'áchás, the earth, herbs, animals, trees, the four troupes of spirits,—unto these,—one should offer oblations being invested with the sacred thread. Yama, the emissaries of Yama, the Fire, the bearers of sacrificial offerings, Soma, Yama, Aryyamá, Agnishwátta, Somapa and Varhisshadas,—these Pitrís, unto each of them,—one should offer water every time. The three degrees of ancestors, on the paternal side—the three degrees of ancestors on the maternal side, unto each of these ancestors,—one should offer water thrice. Unto the eldest brother, the father-in-law, the paternal uncle, the maternal uncle, and unto others of the parental families, one should offer handfuls of water, saying,—"I gratify, with this last handful of water, all those who are desirous of receiving water from me." The S'lokas [relating to this rite are mentioned] below. (2)

As one, stricken by the solar rays in autumn, wishes for a shade; as one thirsty, for water; as one hungry, for food; as a child, for the mother, and a mother, for the child; as a woman, for a man, and a man for a woman;—so all elemental creations, movable and immovable, desire for water from a Vipra;—for he does good unto all. (3—4)

Therefore, he should every day offer watery oblations; by not doing so, he is visited with a great sin; and by doing it, he maintains the entire universe. (5)

For the shortness of the time for Homa and for the complexity of the rite of bathing, one should not take a prolonged bath in the morning; the non-performance of Homa is a censurable [act.] (6)
CHAPTER XIII.

The regulation of the Five great Sacrifices is spoken of; the constant performance of which enables a Vipra to attain to eternal residence. (1)

One should know, as great Sacrifices, those that are performed successively for the Deities, the Spirits, the departed Manes, for Brahmá and for mankind. (2)

To deliver religious instructions, is the Brahmayajña; to offer watery oblations, is the Pitriyajña; to offer oblations of clarified butter to the Fire, is the Dévayajña; to offer Valis (offerings), is the Bhutayajña; and to treat guests, is the Nriyajña. (3)

A S'raddha or the offering of Valis to the Pitris, is [also called] Pitriyajña; what is called the recitation of the S'ruti, is also designated as Brahmayajña. (4)

This (i.e., the Brahmayajña in the shape of the recitation of the S'ruti,) should be performed after the Tarpanam (the offerings of water); the next (i.e., the Brahmayajña in the form of delivering religious instructions,) should be performed after the Morning-Homa; and [that in the shape of singing the Vámadhéva should be performed] at the termination of the Vaiás'wadéva-rite; [it should not be performed] at any other time except at these three [periods]. (5)

If there is no other eater or [sufficient] eatable, one, for the attainment of success in a Pitriyajña, should feed at least one Bráhmaña. There is no Daivapaksha (divine fortnight) in it. (6)

Taking up a little quantity of boiled rice, a twice-born person should, every day, according to his might and with due order, offer it unto the departed Manes and human beings. (7)
Having said,—"Pitribhya idam" (i.e., this is for the departed Manes), he should recite "Swadha" [thereafter]; saying,—"Manushyébhya idam" (i.e., this is for men), he should recite "Hanta." And he should accordingly offer water. (8)

Two meals a day have been prescribed by the Sages for the Bráhmanás living on this mortal earth; one is in the day time, and the other in the night within a Prhara (a period roughly reckoned at three hours) and a half. (9)

Even when fasting, one should daily perform the Vais'wadéva and the Vali-rites, both in the evening and morning; otherwise, he will be affected by sin. (10)

"Amuskmai Namah" (salutation unto such a person)—such is the regulation laid down for the Vali-offerings; since for offering a Vali, one should only make a salutation. (11)

"Swáhá," "Vashat" and "Namah,"—[these three] are for the Celestials; "Swadha" is for the departed Manes; and "Hanta" is for mankind. (12)

Therefore one should daily make offerings to the Pitrís by reciting "Swadhá." Some say the word "Namah" may be added to it. But Goutama [says],—"not so." (13)

If the Valis are kept in one place in a compact form attached to each other, they do not become sullied even when touched by a huge cat; such is from the evidence of the S'ruiti. (14)
CHAPTER XIV.

Now about the placing of Valis (offerings of food). Like funeral cakes in a Vṛiddhi S'rāddha, one should place, one after another, four Valis for the earth, the air, the Vis'wadévás and the Prajápati; on their left side, those for water, herbs, trees, sky and Káma (desire) [should be placed]; on their left, those for men, Indra, Vásuki and Brahmá; on the right side of all those, for the Pitrís [should be placed]. These fourteen [should be placed] every day. There are Kāmya-Valis, such as, the A's'asya, etc. Both the sides of all should be sprinkled with water. The residue should be known as a Piṇḍa. (1)

The Homa-, and Vali-, rites are not the ordinary Kāmyas (i.e., rites performed with a particular end). It is specially said that the daily Homa-, and Vali-, rites should be performed first. (2)

They may be performed after the Kāmya-rites, but never in the middle; for another rite must not be undertaken, while one is being performed. (3)

Homa for the Fire and others, that spoken of by Goutama, S'ákala-Homa with Vali rites, are for him who has deposited the Sacred Fire. (4)

Touching water, looking at the Sun and with joined palms, one, before the recitation of the Vāmadédyā, should pray for the multiplication of wealth, freedom from disease, longevity, lordly powers, intellect, patience, auspiciousness, courage, energy, cattle, strength, the knowledge of the Védás, the dignity of a Bráhmaná, good luck, success in business, headship of the family and excellent mastery. [He should say,—] "O thou the witness of all, grant us all these; may we not be shorn of wealth." (5—7)
There is no Sacrifice superior to a Brahmayajña; there is no gift superior to that of the Védás; all other gifts and all other Sacrifices have limited [fruits]; but no one has seen the end of these. (8)

By reading the Rik daily, one gratifies the Celestials with streams of honey and milk; by reading the Yajush daily, [one gratifies them] with streams of clarified butter and ambrosia. (9)

By reading the Sáman daily, [one gratifies them] with streams of Soma-Juice and clarified butter; and by reading the Atharvan of Angirash, with streams of sacrifices. (10)

By reading the principal and minor aphorisms, the Purāṇas and Itihāsās (Histories) daily, one gratifies them with streams of meat, thickened milk, oudana (barley cakes) and honey. (11)

By reading daily, according to one's might, any of all these scriptures, headed by the Rik, one gratifies the departed Manes with streams of honey and clarified butter. (12)

They, being gratified, gratify him (the performer) whether alive or dead. He may range at will in all the celestial habitations. (13)

No great sin affects him, and he becomes the sanctifier of the row. With the perusal of the regulations of a sacrifice, one reaps the fruits of that sacrifice. (14)

He comes by the fruits of the threefold gift of earth filled with riches.* (15)

---

Brahmayajña means here the reading of the Védas, and Brahma-dánam means the deliverance gratis of Vedic instructions.
CHAPTER XV.

Whatever sacrificial present is mentioned in a rite, it must be given to Brahmá after the termination thereof. If it is not mentioned, the vessel full of offerings would go [to Brahmá]. (1)

With what gives complete gratification to many eaters, but not with a lesser quantity, one should make a vessel filled. This is the settled regulation. (2)

If any other person performs the rite [for the sacrifice], that Hotá (sacrificial priest) should take half of the sacrificial present; [if the sacrificer] himself performs both [the works of Brahmá and Hotá], he should give it to another. (3)

He, who wishes to make daily gifts and seeks his own well-being, should never supersede the family-priest, the Guru and a preceptor who lives near. (4)

Having addressed [the family preceptor and priest] saying,—“I make this present unto him,” one should give away [a present]; if without asking this, one gives [a present] to a qualified person, it yields no fruit. (5)

Having mentally offered the best part to these two, when they live at a distance, one should give it to others. This is the best regulation about a gift. (6)

He, who by superseding a Bráhmaṇa who delivers religious instructions and lives near, makes a gift, is visited with the sin of theft overcoming [the fruits of the same.] (7)

When an ignorant person lives near one’s house and a qualified person at a distance, there is no sin in superseding that ignorant wight and making a gift unto the qualified one. (8)

There is no [sin in] superseding a Bráhmaṇa [by shunning] a Vipra who is divorced from Vedic learning.
Leaving aside a burning fire, one should not offer oblation to ashes. (9)

In all the offerings of clarified butter, the A'jyasthāḷī (vessel for keeping clarified butter) should be made either of metallic substances or of earth. (10)

One could make the size of A'jyasthāḷī as one likes; one strong and without holes, is described as the best A'jyasthāḷī. (11)

Its expanse and height should be of the size of the sacrificial fuel; but it must be strong and should not have a big (wide) mouth. A Charusthāḷī* made of earth or of Udumvara-tree is most preferable. (12)

Charu should be prepared according to the deliverance of one's own branch; it should be well-cooked,—must not be burnt, nor made hard; it must be good, [and] neither of a highly liquid condition nor stale. (13)

A Mekshana (a vessel for containing clarified butter) should be made of the same class [of trees] from which sacrificial fuels [are made]; its size would be half [of the sacrificial fuel]; its forepart would be heavy like a plump thumb and it should be particularly fit for contraining drops of clarified butter. (14)

Similarly a Darvī (ladle or spoon) [should be made]. I shall describe the distinction thereof. The forepart of a Darvī would measure two fingers; and its size would be four times that of a Mekshana. (15)

A Mushala (pestle for cleaning rice) and a Ulūkhala (mortar for grinding rice) should be made of wood [of the tree from which sacrificial fuels are collected], must be expansive, strong and of any size one likes. A S'ūpra (a winnowing basket) should be made of bamboos. (16)

* A vessel for preparing Charu, a kind of sacrificial food,
While performing a Nyañcha-rite (i.e., reciting Mantras for the earth by lying on the face), one should place one's face down on the right palm, and placing the left hand on it, direct the foreparts of the two hands towards one's own self. (17)

Seated [on one's seat] and directing the two hands, kept in their own places and firmly placed, towards the Fire, one should perform the Pradaksinam and Parsamūhanam (i.e., the collection of Fires, scattered hither and thither, unto one place). (18)

There should be three fences of the size of an arm each, straight, having bark, no cuts, no tops. In the view of one class of men, there should be four on four sides. (19)

One should place two Paridhis fences on two sides of the Fire running towards the east; and one on the west, facing the north; and if another is to be placed, it should be placed in the east, facing the north. (20)

[As in the rites to be performed] with barley, wheat [may be used], as [in the rites to be performed] with Viññi, Śāli [may be used] so; in the absence of proper articles their substitutes may be accepted. (21)

CHAPTER XVI.

A S'ráddha in which Pindas are to be offered for the gratification for a month, is to be preferably performed on the wane of the Moon (Amávasyá-day); it should be performed in the third part of the day, but never towards the evening. (1)

When a Chaturdas'í (the fourteenth day of the dark fortnight) extends over three divisions of the day and the Amávasyá lasts for a shorter period, a S'rāddha should be performed on the previous day. (2)

What has been said [by my father Gobhila,] "that the day on which the Moon is not seen," (i.e., on such an Amávasyá-day, a S'rāddha should be performed,) and the [expression,—] "on the wane of the Moon," must be known as to mean the same.* (3)

The Text,—"being visible once," refers to the Chaturdas'ī-day; [if both the days arrive, one] should wait for the Amávasyá; [but if the Amávasyá does not appear at the time fit for the performance of the S'rāddha [in both the days], one may perform it at the end [of the Chaturdas'ī].† (4)

The Moon disappears in the eighth part of the Chaturdas'ī, and a part of it re-appears in the eighth part of the Amávasyá according to S'astric deliverance. (5)

Persons, conversant with the movements of the Moon, (i.e., the Astrologers), speak of some distinction in the Amávasyá of the month of Agraháyána and Jaistha. (6)

* i.e., A S'rāddha should be performed on an Amávasya-day when the Moon is not visible.

† These S'lokas are very elliptical and require elucidation.

Gobhila said:—"A S'rāddha should be performed on an Amávasyá-day when the Moon is not visible."—Kátyáyana says:—"kshiné rajani," when the Moon wanes. Sanction is given that a S'rāddha is to be performed on the Amávasyá-day succeeding the Chaturdas'ī. But the Moon is visible on the fourteenth day, and Gobhila's Text is:—"Yadahastyāteva Chandramá na drīṣ'yêta"—the day in which the Moon is "not visible." This Text contradicts the Text,—"kshiné rajani." To avoid this contradiction the subsequent S'loka is written. There is no contradiction if it means that the S'rāddha should be performed immediately after the disappearance of the Moon which takes place in the day previous to the Amávasyá.

In these two days, a part of the lunar rays exists in the first Prahara, but it fully disappears in the last part. Astrologers say so. (7)

Even in that year in which one intercalary month is added to twelve,* [the Moon] does not become visible by the third [part];† knowing these movements of the Moon, one should, in the last part of the wane of the Moon, offer [oblations]. (8)

Sometimes an Amāvasyā becomes co-mingled with the Chaturdasi. Some (the Yajurvedins) know it as an inferior [occasion] for the performance of a S'rāddha. Others (the Rikvedins) consider it the best. (9)

If on the next day, one gets an Amāvasyā increased by three Yamas (periods), a Pitriyama (S'rāddha) should be performed at that time. (10)

One should make a fortnightly Charu on the first day of the fortnight. People should do it in the first part of the day. Other learned men [hold that it may be performed] when [the second day of the fortnight] comes upon [the first]. (11)

One has no right to perform the rites for the departed Manes of his own father [while he is alive]. Superseding a living person, one should never make a gift. Such is the S'ruti. (12)

* This intercalary month is called Maia (impure) Māsa (month), because no religious rites are performed in this month.

† The S'loka is very elliptical and obscure. The purport is that in the year in which there is an intercalary month even in these two months, there is a decrease of more than one-fourth part of the lunar ray in the first part of the Amāvasyā. Or, in the eighth part of the Chaturdasi, one-fourth portion of the lunar ray disappears; and in the seventh part of the Amāvasyā, it disappears fully and it reappears on the last part thereof. So a S'rāddha should be performed immediately after the disappearance of the Moon in the seventh part of the Amāvasyā.
If one's father dies while his grandfather is alive, one should offer oblations for him. If the grandfather dies, when the great-grandfather is alive, one should offer oblations [for the both]. (13)

But, one whose great-grandfather is dead, should make three Piṇdas, for the father, grandfather, and the great-grandfather. (14)

Another Text of the S'ruti is:—A twice-born person should offer food and water to the departed Manes superseding a living person. Or his own father should offer oblations to his father. (15)

If one's grandfather dies after the demise of his father, the sixteen S'rāddhas—including one that is performed on the eleventh day—should be celebrated by the grandson. (16)

But it should not be done by the grandson, if the grandfather has got any other son. Having performed the Sapinda-S'rāddha, he should perform the six monthly ones. (17)

The grandson and the great-grandson should not perform the purificatory rites, (i.e., the Sapinda-karan-S'rāddha) for [the grandfather and the great-grandfather,] for whom no purificatory rite has been performed. One should then perform only the purificatory rite for the father. So Katyāyana has said. (18)

One should make one's grandfather, who has attained to the condition of a Prēta (deceased ancestor) or who has got over that position, forsooth, perform the purificatory rites for the father. (19)

One's father being killed by a Brāhmaṇa, [or on being dead] when outcasted, living a life of mendicancy, or committing a transgression,—one should offer oblations unto those to whom he (i.e., the father) used to give. (20)

The Sapindakaran of the mother should be performed [by the daughter] with the grandmother, according to the regulation mentioned before, if she has no son. (21)

Except on the day of death, no separate Pindas should be offered to women since the Smriti says that they get gratification from the part of the Pindas offered to their respective husbands. (22)

A daughter's son should first offer the Pinda to his mother; secondly, to her father; and thirdly, to her father's father. (23)

CHAPTER XVII.

A Karsū (trench), that one digs before one's front, is known as the Pūrvā (first); the one, that is dug on its south, is the middle one; and the one, that is dug on the [further] south, is called the last. (1)

They should be made, beginning with the north-west corner and ending with the south-east, each at a distance of one-and-a-half fingers; their ends should be pointed; the middle parts, like barley; and they should be spacious like a boat. (2)

The S'ankhu (stake) should be made of Khadira (wood) and decorated with silver. The measurement of a S'ankhu and Upavēs'ā (stool), is known as twelve fingers. (3)

Karsūs should be thickly covered with Kus'a, having their tips directed towards the south-east. In a Pitrī-Yājña, one should cover [a Karsū], ending in the south, with [Kus'ás having their tips directed towards the south. (4)

Sweet-scented Tagara-flowers, sandal and other pastes, and Souvira-collyrium for Piñjalís, are known and spoken of [as the best in a S'rāddha]. (5)

Having collected all those articles which are fit [for the rite], one should, without hastiness and in a pure state, perform the S'rāddha after finishing the worship of the Deities. (6)

Having performed the rites, as mentioned by Vasi-shtha, beginning from the gift of a seat to the offering of the Arghya, one should offer, in all the vessels, sesame and water. (7)

Having offered water separately and silently, one should offer sesame and water with the Mantram; scented-water should be offered in order of proximity. (8)

The departed Manes of the person, who offers sesame and water in an A'sura-vessel, do not accept food from him for fifteen years. (9)

In the Smṛiti, a vessel made of earth and in a potter's wheel, is called A'sura; that made by the hand, as a Sthāli, etc., is called Daivika (i.e., vessel for the Deities. (10)

Dedicating, in order, unto the Brāhmaṇás, scents, season-flowers and incense,—one should, thereafter, perform the Agnounakarana-Homa. (11)

Agnounakarana-Homa should be performed by one invested with the sacrificial thread and with the face directed towards the east. The S'ruti Text is that one should offer oblations to the Fire for the Deities. (12)

Or it should be performed by one wearing the sacred thread over the right shoulder and facing the south; having determined the offering of clarified butter for one, one should not give [it] to another. (13)

In this [rite], one should not utter "Swāhā" in the end; nor should any offering of clarified butter be made without it. Having offered oblation to the Fire with "Swāhā," one should, afterwards, complete the recitation of the Mantram. (14)

A person, who has not deposited the Sacred Fire, after pouring libations of clarified butter unto the hand of the person who is the head of [the Brāhmaṇas] representing the Pitṛis, should silently offer the residue into the vessels [belonging to] others. (15)

One should never separately repeat the Homa-Mantrams, in [proper] tune and with A'chamanam, etc.; one should silently recite the others. (16)

When in this rite, Savyéna pāninā (by the left hand) is spoken of [by my father Gobhila]; it means the observance the taking up the Kus'a-reeds by the left hand. (17)

By holding the Piñjali, etc., [by the right hand] from the left, one should, therewith, perform the Ullékhanam (rubbing) by the left hand. (18)

By taking up a little from all sorts of offerings and mixing them up with the Charu, one should begin to offer Pindaś. (19)

In a Parva-S'rāddha, one should offer Pindas to the father in the northern Kars'u, to the grandfather in the middle one, and to the great-grandfather in the one placed in the south. (20)

Some say that one should go to the end of the north by turning round on the left. Gotam, S'ándilya and Sándilyáyan say so. (21)
Circumambulation, suppressing the vital airs and meditating on the Pitris truly and reciting the Mantram, one should return in the same way and pass his breath. (22)

On the eighth day of the month of Phālguna, one should himself, or make his wife, cook vegetable-leaves. Where a Homa with vegetable-leaves is to be performed, it must be done according to the rules of an Ashtaka-S'ráddha where sweet-barley-cakes [are offered]. (23)

Gobhila and Gotama say that Anwāshtakā-S'ráddha should be performed in the middle one. Koutsa Rishi says that Anwāshtakā may be performed in all the Ashtakās (a collection of three days,—seventh, eighth and ninth, beginning with the seventh day after the Full-Moon). (24)

If in the place of an animal, one cooks Sthālī settled afterwards, one should boil it with the milk of a young cow having a calf. (25)

CHAPTER XVIII.

The learned describe one class [of religious rites] beginning with the evening and ending with the morning, and another class as beginning with the Pūrṇamāsa (Full-Moon-day) and ending with the Dars'a (tenth day). (1)

After the offering of full oblation, one should perform a Homa on any day that comes first between the Dars'a and the Pūrṇamāsa. Such is the Sruti. (2)

After Purnāhuti, one should perform the Evening-Homa; thereupon, after the Pāka-Yajña, one should perform the Vais'wadēva-adoration and the Vali-rite. (3)
Afterwards, according to one's own might, one should feed such Brāhmaṇas as one may desire. The sacrificer should, then, take his meals. So says Kātyāyana. (4)

Shorn of idleness, one should perform the morning, and the Evening-\textit{Homa} into the \textit{Vaivāhika-Fire}. After performing the \textit{Chaturthi-Homa}, one should do this. Such is the opinion of S'ātyāyana. (5)

After performing the \textit{Pūrnāhūtī}, one should perform \textit{Homa} in the morning, and then [offer] the Evening Oblation. The \textit{Morning-Homa} should be as usual, and the regulation, for the succeeding \textit{Homa}, is also the same. (6)

After the expiration of the \textit{Pournamāsa} (Full-Moon-day) as well as that of the \textit{Amāvasya}, one should perform \textit{Homa} on the day when worthy articles of offering and qualified priest would be available. (7)

I shall now describe how a \textit{Homa} should be performed afterwards when a person, being unable to offer oblations to the Fire, passes time fasting and being self-restrained. (8)

Calculating the number of offerings [neglected] and placing them in full on a vessel, one should duly offer them in excess to the others with \textit{Mantras}. (9)

When an expiatory \textit{Homa} is to be performed with the \textit{Vyāhritis}, four offerings are known [to be offered] there, as in the case of espousing a maiden. (10)

Or, it should be performed with the \textit{Mantram},—"\textit{Ajñāta}," etc.; or a \textit{Prājāpatya}-offering should be made. This is the threefold regulation of a \textit{Prāyaschitta-} (expiatory) \textit{Homa}, according to the \textit{Smṛiti}. (11)

If, on any occasion, a Sacred Fire comes in contact with an ordinary one,—one should offer oblations of clarified butter with the Mantram,—"Agnayë vīvichayë." (12)

If it comes in contact with lightning-flashes, one should offer oblations to the Fire with the Mantram,—"Apsumn;" [if it comes in contact] with a bad fire, one should offer oblations [with the Mantram,—] "Agnayë s'uchayë." (13)

If a Sacred Fire comes in contact with that consuming a house, a Kshānavān-Homa should be performed by the twice-born. [Similar is the procedure,] when it comes in contact with a wild fire. If the heat generated by these two fires, touches the heart,—one should extinguish the generated one and enkindle the other which is detached. Giri S’arma has said so. (14—15)

One cannot perform a Homa for another, without offering, at least, one sacrificial fuel to one’s own Fire. But one may offer oblations for purifying the embryo till it is not born. (16)

In every Homa for the Naming-Rite, etc., Loukika-(ordinary) Fire [should be improvised]; for a Fire consecrated by the father, does not go to the son. (17)

He, on whose Fire other’s Homa shall be performed, should make a Vais’vānara-Daivata-Charu (sacrificial food); for that is his penance. (18)

If another performs a Homa on one’s own Fire, if one performs one’s own Homa on another’s Fire, if one fails to perform a Pitri-Yajña or two Vais’wadēva-rites, if one takes the newly-grown rice without performing the new Yājña, or if one takes the boiled rice of a degraded caste,—one should make Vais’vānara-Charu. (19—20)

In all the purificatory rites for his son, a father should offer Pindas (funeral cakes) to one’s own father, grandfather, etc. In his absence, [one should offer them] to the higher [manes]. (21)

If in a Bhūtapravāchana (a rite for the promulgation of a child), a wife, disabled by menstrual impurity, does not come near, what would the sacrificers do? (22)

The woman of the same caste, who cooks rice in the kitchen, should be made to make the Pravāchana, or one should perform it with Prānava as said by Katyāyana. (23)

In a sacrifice, in a Vāstu (rite of adoration of the earth), in holding by palms, in making a Stambha (pillar), in making a Kuś'a-Vatu, in making a seat of Kuś'ā and in spreading Kuś'ā, there is no limit of Darbhas. (24)

CHAPTER XIX.

HAVING made over the charge of the Sacred Fire to his wives and selected a sacrificial priest, a Vipra may proceed to a foreign country. One must not uselessly go to a foreign country, nor should one live there for good. (1)

When living in a foreign land, one should mentally think of the daily rites after being purified and shorn of idleness and seated. One should follow all [the rites] in proper time. (2)

A woman devoted to her husband and seeking good fortune, wealth and non-widowhood, should also humbly serve the Fire without any break. (3)

One should engage in this rite a wife who has given birth to heroic sons, who carries out the behests of her consort, is beloved, expert in business, speaks sweet words and is spotless. (4)

If it cannot be performed by one, they (i.e., the wives) should, either according to seniority or ability, severally or jointly, perform the rite, according to their own light and knowledge of the scriptures. (5)

The seniority of women [is determined] by their good fortune, and that of the twice-born, by their bearing. The fame or asceticism of women does not lead to the gratification of their husbands. (6)

The woman following the commands of her husband, who, like Umá, gratifies the Fire with manifold religious observances, attains to good luck in the next world. (7)

The woman,—who, even when bending low with humility, is disliked by her husband,—must have disregarded in a previous birth her husband, Umá and the Fire. (8)

He, who rising up in the morning, sees a S'rotřiya (one learned in the Sruti), a blessed lady, a cow, the Fire, as well as a person who maintains his Sacred Fire, becomes freed from all calamities. (9)

He, who rising up in the morning, sees a sinful wight, an unlucky woman, a degraded person, a nude wight, and one whose nose has been cut off, is visited by Kali. (10)

What hell is there where a woman, disregarding her husband out of stupefaction, does not go to? What sorrow is there which she does not know after attaining to a human birth with great difficulty? (11)

Is there any region which a woman serving her husband, does not attain? Again returning to this world from the celestial region, she becomes like an ocean of happiness. (12)

What Homa is laid down for that person, maintaining his Sacred Fire, who having a living wife wishes for other wives, for some reason or other? (13)

Homa should be performed with his own Fire and never with the ordinary one. It is laid down that no rite of a person who has consecrated the Sacred Fire, should be performed with the ordinary fire. (14)

Till the seeing of Dhruva, he shall have the Homa performed by another with six oblations. Till he is not married, there is no necessity of his own self. (15)

The three forms of Prāyaschitta (penetential rite) that have been spoken of before, have been described by good men conversant with sacrifice, as Shadāhutikam. (16)

CHAPTER XX.

A Homa should never be performed by the Ritwik and others in the absence of the married couple. What is done in their absence becomes profitless. (1)

By leaving aside the Sacred Fire and transgressing the limit, if a person goes away with his wife and the time for Homa expires, he shall have to deposit the Fire again. (2)

If the Sacred Fire is mixed up with the fire that destroys a forest, one should preserve it. And when that fire is extinguished, he should again consecrate it. (3)

If one having many wives goes on superseding the eldest one, some wish that the Fire should be consecrated again. But this is not [the view of] Gotama. (4)
Having cremated a becoming wife, dead before, with the fire of the vessel,—one should get himself re-married without delay [and consecrate the Fire again]. (5)

A twice-born person, who is conversant with religious laws, should cremate a good-charactered wife of the same caste, who dies before, with the sacrificial vessel according to the Agnihotra-method. (6)

One who, having his first wife living, cremates the second wife with the Vaitānika-Fire, is equal to the destroyer of a Brāhmaṇa. (7)

Know him to be a Brahmojjham (abandoning the dignity of a Brāhmaṇa) who renounces the Agnihotra (adoration of the Sacred Fire) on the death of his second wife. (8)

One must not abandon the Vedic Fire on the death of one’s wife, but should perform all the rites therewith as long as one lives. 9)

Having made a golden image of his illustrious wife Sitā, the eternal Rāma celebrated many sacrifices along with his brothers. (10)

He, who any how cremates his wife with his own Sacred Fire, attains to womanhood and his wife attains to manhood. (11)

If a twice-born person be guilty of a heinous crime and if his wife be dead or living in another country, his son would be entitled [to maintain the Sacred Fire. (12)

If a wife, worthy of respect, being insulted by her husband, dies before,—she attains to manhood for three births, and the man becomes born as a woman. (13)

In the rite of consecrating the Sacred Fire again, the former sex shall be as before. But the distinction is that, the rite of Agnypasthānām (placing on the Fire) [should be performed], and eight oblations of clarified butter [offered]. (14)

Finishing up to end the Vyāhṛiti-Homa, one should place the Sacred Fire. He should recite merely the Agnēya-Sūkta, such as,—"Kastējāmi ramāṇasas." (15)

With the Mantrams,—"Agnimīd'e" (I adore Agni), "Agni āyāhi" (come Fire), "Agni āyāhi vītaye" (come Fire to this sacrifice), the three Mantrams,—"Agnirjyoti," etc., "Agniṁ dutam" (Fire the messenger), and "Agni- mrid'a,"—[with these eight Mantrams,]—one should, duly and in proper order, offer eight oblations. Then one should perform the completing oblations and other rites as before. (16—17)

The consecrating of the Fire on the other Araṇīs, is not allowed so long as a little of the first two Araṇīs is visible. (18)

One should throw into the burning Fire, the destroyed Sruka-Sruva (sacrificial ladles), the up-turned vessel and the Mushala (mace), having its top directed towards the east. (18)

---

CHAPTER XXI.

If a person is incapable of performing a Homa himself, he should come before the Fire; if he is unable to do that even, he should sit up on his bed. (1)

If at the time of performing the Evening-Homa, the householder appears so weak [as to die immediately], then the Morning-Homa should be performed. If he survives, [on the morning,] he may perform it again, if he so wishes. (2)
Having bathed the dead body and covered it with a pure raiment, one should place it, having its head turned towards the south, on the ground strewn with Kus'á-reeds. (3)

Having soaked it with clarified butter, one should again sprinkle it with water. It shall then be clothed, invested with another sacred thread, bedecked with flowers and have all its limbs pasted with sandal. (4)

Having placed gold into its seven apertures and covered its face with a cloth, the sons and others should carry it. (5)

Having taken boiled rice in a raw earthen vessel, one should follow the dead body, preceded by an Agnihotrin, and scatter half [of the boiled rice] on the way. (6)

Then reaching the cremation-ground, [the chief mourner,] seated with his face directed towards the south and bending low his left knee-joint, should, mixing up the remaining half [of the rice] with sesame, offer it according to the regulations of Pinda. (7)

Thereupon after bathing, the son and others, on a purified spot of the ground, qualified by its marks for making a funeral pyre, should make a huge collection of wood. (8)

Then placing on it the dead body on its back with its head towards the south, one should place, on its mouth, a Sruk, filled with clarified butter; on its nose, a Sruvam with its top directed towards the south; on its legs, the eastern Araní; on its breast, the northern Araní; on its left side, S'úpra; on its right side, the Chamasa; on the space between the two thighs, the Mushala; and on the collar bones, the Udúkhala (mortar). One who has not consecrated the Fire, should be placed on its face. One who will set fire to the Fire, shall neither have tears in the eyes nor be stricken with fear. (9—11)

Making the sacred thread hang down towards the left part of the body over the right shoulder, controlling speech and facing the south and performing [all rites in that state], bending low one's left knee, and facing the Fire, one should gradually lighten up the fire. (12)

He should recite the Mantram,—"Thou wert created by him; may he, through thee, be born again; may he attain to the celestial region." (13)

When the master of a house is thus cremated, he gets over all his sins. He who cremates his body, also gets praiseworthy children. (14)

As a traveller, carrying his own weapon, traverses fearlessly the forest and reaches the appointed place, so a person, who consecrates the Sacred Fire, adorned with the weapon of a sacrificial vessel, transcends all the regions and attains to Brahma. (15—16)

CHAPTER XXII.

Thereupon without looking [at the Fire], all those who touch the dead body, should go to the water; bathe with their raiments on; rinse their mouths; and offer water on the ground to the departed one. (1)

Reciting the family and name, they should afterwards say,—"Tarpayāmi" (I offer water). Directing the tops of the Kus'ā-reeds towards the south, they should separately [offer water] with sesame. After having thus performed the watery-rite completely and bathed and rinsed their mouths again, they shall be seated on a plot of ground covered with green grass, their followers saying,—(2—3)
"All living creatures do not live for ever; therefore do not grieve. Practise with care religion, for it will go with you. (4)

"Foolish, indeed, is that wight who seeks real essence in a man who is as unsubstantial as the trunk of a plantain tree and the water-bubbles. (5)

"The earth, the oceans and even the Deities run to destruction; why would not then the region of the mortals, like unto a foam, meet with destruction? (6)

"What is there to repent for, if the body, which is known to be composed of five [substances], is again reduced to five [original substances] under the influence of physical actions? (7)

"All collections meet with destruction; all elevations meet with fall; all unions meet with separation; and every life ends with death. (8)

"A departed person, losing all control, eats the phlegms and tears discharged by kinsmen. Therefore none should weep, but [all] must perform the rites with care.” (9)

Having been thus accosted, they should return home preceded by younger persons. Others (but kinsmen) would get themselves purified by bathing, touching the fire and drinking clarified butter. (10)

CHAPTER XXIII.

The assignment of vessels for a person who has deposited the Sacred Fire should be made thus. In this, there is a special regulation mentioned in the Sūtrās about the black-antelope-skin, etc. (1)
If one dies in a foreign country, his bones should be brought, soaked with clarified butter and cremated, covered with wool. The assignment of vessels should be made as before. (2)

If the bones are not procurable, leaves, to the number of bones, should be burnt according to the regulation spoken of; impurity lasts till then. (3)

If a person, who has deposited the Sacred Fire, is accidentally affected with a heinous iniquity, his son and others should maintain the Fire till his sins are not dissipated. (4)

If after committing a sin, a person dies without performing the penetential rite, his Household Fire should be extinguished; and the S'rojita-Fire, together with the ingredients, should be thrown into the water. (5)

Or he should throw them both into the water, for Fire originates from Water; or he should give the vessels unto a Vipra; or [he should] burn, or throw, them into the water. (6)

A woman, wending a righteous way, should be cremated in this way; but the Mantram, for putting the Fire, should not be recited in her case; such is the determined conclusion [of the Smrīti]. (7)

With that Fire, one should cremate one's wife, if she had not proved [herself] independent [of her consort], or degraded [herself]. After that the vessels should be consumed separately near [the funeral pyre]. (8)

On the next, or on the third, day, the depositing of bones should take place. The regulation relating to that, as laid down by the Rishis, should now be spoken of. (9)

Having finished bathing as before; wearing the sacred thread over the right shoulder and under the left arm; and abstaining from speech;—one should soak the bones with cow-milk. (10)

Having taken up the bones from ashes with the branches of a S'ami or a Palāsa-tree, one should soak them with clarified butter made of cow-milk and then sprinkle them with scented water. (11)

Having placed them inside an earthen vessel, one should encircle it with thread. Then digging a hole on a sanctified spot, one should place them in that hole facing the south. (12)

Then filling up the hole with earthen balls and corals, one should perform thereon the remaining portion of the rite that should be performed in the morning. (13)

Such is the rule of cremation for a deceased person who had not deposited the Sacred Fire; fire should be put [to their funeral pyre] like that of women. What has [already] been said, should now be dwelt on [at length]. (14)

CHAPTER XXIV.

In a state of impurity, all rites, beginning with the Sandhyā, should be renounced. A Homa, with dried rice or fruits, may be performed in the S'routa-Fire. (1)

One should offer Akṛita (raw corn); in its absence, Kṛitā-Kṛita (rice); or Kṛita (boiled) according to the regulations obtaining at the rite of first taking the boiled rice. (2)

Odana, S'aktu (kinds of cakes), etc., are called Kṛita; rice, etc., are called Kṛitā-Kṛita; and Vṛīhi, etc., are called Akṛita:—the learned speak of these three classes of offerings. (3)
When any such [preventive] cause appears, as impurity, residence in another country, inability, or partaking of food at a šrāddha,—one should have the Homa performed by another. (4)

A Brahmachārin should not renounce his own work even in a state of impurity; [an impurity would not be an impediment] in a sacrifice after initiation or in the performance of a distressing penance. (5)

Even on the demise of the father, they are not affected by any impurity. The impurity of a Brahmachārin takes place after the performance of his religious rite or lasts for three days. (6)

The šrāddha of a Sāgniṣka would take place on the eleventh day after the cremation. But the annual šrāddha, one should always perform on the day of death. (7)

Twelve monthly šrāddhas, the first šrāddha after the death, two six-monthlies, and the Sapindikāraṇa—these are the sixteen šrāddhas. (8)

[The first] six-monthly šrāddha should take place either one or three days previous to the day of death. And the annual šrāddha, forming the [second] six-monthly, would also take place one or three days previous to the day of death. (9)

The first fifteen šrāddhas should be performed for one who has no son; and the other also should be performed on one day in the year. [The šrāddha,] for the one who has a son, should always be performed.* (10)

The husband of a woman having no son, shall not perform [the Pārvaṇa-šrāddha] for her; nor shall a

* The Commentator Raghunandan has given a different interpretation of this couplet. He says:—"The first fifteen šrāddhas and the annual Ekoddishka-šrāddha should be performed for a sonless man or woman.
father do it for the son; nor the eldest brother, for the younger. (11)

Having duly performed the S'ráddha on the eleventh day, a son who has deposited the Sacred Fire, should subsequently perform the Sapind'a for his father or mother. (12)

After the Sapind'ıkaraṇam, one should not perform a S'ráddha every month according to the Ekoddishtha-regulation. But Gotama says, one should do it. (13).

Leaving off the [Srāddha to be performed for] agricultural operations, the first sixteen S'ráddhas and the annual, there shall be six Piṅḍ'as in the subsequent ones. This is the rule. (14)

In the offering of the Arghya, in that of unending water, in that of Piṅḍ'a, in Avanējana (sprikkling water on the Darbha-grass at a S'ráddha-ceremony) and in reciting Śvādhā, there shall be the stoppage of the ritual. (15)

The S'ráddha and other good offices should not be performed for them, who were punished (i.e., killed) by the Brāhmaṇās, and for whom no cremation has been done. (16)

CHAPTER XXV.

In the collection of Mantramś, the five "Agni," etc., should be recited by those who seek brevity. Twenty Mantramś are necessary in its application. (1)

"Vāyu" [should be used,] instead of "Agni." The word "Chandra" and "Suryya" should be understood. And understanding all in the fifth Sūtra, each Mantram should be recited four times according to the S'ruti. (2)
In the five Mantrams of the first group of five, shall occur the expression,—"Papi Lakshmiḥ." Those, conversant with sacrificial rituals, know it so. (3)

In the second group, shall occur [the word] "Patighnī;" in the third, "Aputrakā;" in the fourth, "Apasavyā." These are the twenty oblations. (4)

In the Dhṛiti-Homa as well as in the eight Gonāma-Homas, one should not use ["Śvākā," with the fourth declension]; in the "Gonāma-Homa," one should offer oblations with "Aghnā," instead of the fourth declension. (5)

The hidden leaves on the top of the branch of a creeper, is described as S'ūṅgā.* According to the S'ruti, a chaste woman, observant of a vow and an unworthy Brāhmaṇa [should buy it].† (6)

S'ālatu is mentioned for indigo, and Granthāḥ is used for a Stavaka. The hairs on both sides of the head, are called Kapushnikā; those on the back, are called Kapuchchhalam. (7)

Salalī means the pointed sticks of a porcupine; and Viratara, an arrow. Sesame and rice, boiled together, passes by the name of Krishara. (8)

In the Naming Rite—the word Muni, Vasu and Pis'ācha should always be used in the plural number. And Yakshas, the Pitris, the Vis'wēdēvas, the guests and other Divinities should be treated with oblations. (9)

In the Homa-rites of Planets beginning with Lunar Mansion called Kṛittikā, of those beginning with Snake (Rohiṇī, etc.), of those beginning with Vis'ākhā (the sixteenth Lunar Mansion consisting of two Stars), of those beginning with A's'da (the twentieth and twenty-first Lunar Mansions), of those beginning with Dhanishtha (the twenty-third Lunar Mansion consisting of four Stars), and of those beginning with A's'winí (the first of the twenty-seven Nakshatras or Lunar Mansions consisting of three Stars)—one should offer oblations with the plural number. Dual should be used for the remaining two pairs; and singular, for the rest. (10—11)

Amongst the Deities [presiding over the Planets], the Serpent, the Air, the Water, the Vis'wédévas and the Pitris should be offered oblations with the plural number. (12)

Being ordered by his preceptor in the performance of a religious rite, a Brahmachárin should follow his behest by saying,—"Vád'áṁ" (well); or "Ôṁ" (yes). (13)

Till the [final] bath, the shaving of the head—except the tuft of hair on the crown, should be done by a Brahmachárin, if he has not taken the vow of a lifelong celibacy. (14)

He must not remove the dirt of his body—except in a calamity, must not sport in water; nor should he wear ornaments. And like a rod, he should take his bath. (15)

How should one offer oblations when the Deities are adverse? Having performed the penetrantary Homa, one should again offer oblations in due order. (16)

If on any occasion, one performs a purificatory rite after the proper time is over, he should perform Homa, on all these occasions destructive of sins. (17)

The Vaishwánara-Charu is laid down as the penance for him who without performing the new sacrifice, eats the boiled rice of new crops, even out of ignorance. (18)
CHAPTER XXVI.

How should the Charu (sacrificial food) be made,—in the rite of the combination of Charu, in a sacrifice attended with cow-slaughter, in the rite of the dedication of a bull, in a Horse-Sacrifice, on the Full-Moon-day in the month of S'rávana, in the evening and at the commencement of agricultural operations? How should the presentations of offerings and libations to the Fire be made, in all those rites? (1—2)

Proportionate to the number of Divinities, offerings should be taken up separately. Twice they should be taken up silently; and Homa, performed separately. (3)

[And] the quantity of the Charu would be such as will leave some remnant after the completion of the Homa as mentioned in a particular rite. (4)

In the rite of the combination of Charu and in that at a sacrifice for the Pitris, one should perform Homa with a Mékshaṇa; others say,—that [a Homa] should be Upastirṇa, (i.e., clarified butter should be poured into a Sruva-vessel with the Srūk or sacrificial ladle) and Abhīghārita (i.e., accompanied with the pouring of clarified butter). (5)

The time and regulation about the dedication of a bull has been described, in brief, by Kátyáyana. Since Gobhila has not spoken of it. (6)

The universally received time, for a Cow-, and a Horse-, Sacrifice, as well as for the rite of Prastarārohaṇa (getting upon a rock or bed), has been mentioned in some other book of instructions. (7)

The regulation in another book of laws, is, that the time for a Cow-Sacrifice, is the day of Mārgapālya, and that for a Horse-Sacrifice is the Nirājana-day.* (8)

Some say that the Sacrifice for the New [Rice] should be performed in the autumn or in the spring. Others say [that it should be performed] when the paddy is ripe; forest-recluses should perform it when S'yāmāka-crop is ripe. (9)

In the rites to be performed on the Full-Moon-day in the month of A's'wina, in agricultural rites, in the worship of the Deity of the household,—the sacrificers, conversant with the secrets of sacrifices, lay down the following Homa. (10)

The Smṛiti enjoins that two, five and two oblations should be offered, in order, with clarified butter. The remaining oblations should be made with clarified butter. So Kātyānana has said. (11)

Milk, according to others, curd mixed with clarified butter, is called Prishātaka. By obtaining that, one should make Payasa-Charu. (12)

The holding of the seven herbs, namely, Vṛīhi, S'ālī, Mudga, wheat, mustard, sesame and barley, dissipates all sins. (13)

The purificatory rites of men have been remembered by Gotama and other Rishis. Then all the Ashtaka-rites should be performed in due time. (14)

The twice-born person, who performs, even once, the Ashtaka-rites, becoming the sanctifier of the row, goes to regions pouring clarified butter. (15)

---

* A kind of military and religious ceremony, performed by kings or generals of armies in the month of A's'wina, before they took the field; (it was, so to say, a general purification of the king's Purohitā, the ministers, and all the various component parts of the army, together with the arms and implements of war by means of sacred Mantrams).
He,—who, being engaged in a religious rite, serves the Fire, in a purified state, even for a day,—lives in the celestial region for a hundred days by the fruits thereof. (16)

He,—who, having consecrated the Fire, does not perform sacrifices in honour of the Deities, after giving them hopes,—that repudiator of the Deities, is called Nirakriti (repudiator). (17)

---

CHAPTER XXVII.

The S'ráddha, that is performed at the commencement of a rite; the sacrificial present, that is given at the end; and the second one, that should be performed on an Amávasyá, is called Anváhárryya.*

In Ekasádhyya—(capable of being performed by one) Homa, there is no spreading of the Kus'á, no sprinkling of water round the Sacrificial Fire, and no Udgisádanam (obtaining of water); for, it is known as Kshipra (quick) Homa. (2)

One should offer oblations with curd or milk in the absence of Vrińi and barley; in its absence, with rice-gruel; and in its absence, with water. (3)

Having recited the Roudra, Ráksasa, Pitrya and the enchanting Mantram,—one should, touching one's own body, touch water. (4)

---

* The Nandimukha-S'ráddha is called Anváhárryya, because it is performed after the adoration of the Mátris. A dakshiná is so called, because, it is offered at the termination of a religious rite. And the Amávasyá-S'ráddha is so called, because it is performed after the adoration of the departed Mánes.
If one is seen offering bones in the quarters presided over by the Moon or the Varuṇa, then offering oblations with Vyāhritis,—one should administer punishment unto the twice-born (5)

He,—who makes offering of salt, honey, meat or any saline substance, must take his meals after fasting. He must not take any thing in the night. (6)

If the sacrificial priest and offerings not being available, the Evening-Homa is not performed in its proper time,—it may be performed in the next morning before the hour of the Morning-Homa. But it should be done after the celebration of the penententiary Homa. (7)

The hour of the Morning-Homa extends till before that of the Evening-Homa. The time for a Dars’ā, extends till before that, for the Full-Moon-day Sṛṅḍḍha; and that for the latter, till before the hour for Dars’ā. (8)

Failing to perform the Vais’vadéva-rites, one should remain fasting for the day and night. Then performing the penententiary rite, one should again undertake the rite. (9)

The two Homas (Morning and Evening) and the Dars’ā and Pourṇamásā-rites being not performed, one should again deposit the Sacred Fire. Such is the deliveryance of Bhárgava. (10)

One who has not studied the Rig-Véda, is called Māṇava; a black antelope is called Enah, according to the Smriti (of Gobhila); a white-coloured deer, is called Ruru; and a stake is called Sumarah. (11)

A Bráhmana’s Danda—a staff given to a twice-born person at the time of his investiture with the sacred thread—should be made, in size, extending up to the end of hairs; that of a Kshatriya, up to the fore-head; and that of a Vais’ya, up to the nose. (12)
They shall be all straight, without knots, handsome to look at, unproductive of anxiety to men, covered with bark and unsullied by fire. (13)

The superiority of a cow is spoken of by the Brāhmaṇās and is mentioned in the Vēdas. There is none superior to her; and a cow is, therefore, called Vara. (14)

In all those rites, at the termination of which no sacrificial present is mentioned, a cow or a raiment should form the presents unto the preceptor. (15)

Exposition at an improper place, recitation in parts and erroneous teaching, bring about the rejection of a S'ruti. (16)

The Annual-Upākarmam* and Utsarga,† duly performed by the twice-born, increase afresh the power of the Vēdas. (17)

Whatever rite the twice-born, even sportively, perform by the help of the Vēdas not rejected, always yields for them Siddhi (supernatural powers). (18)

Having duly instructed the pupils in the three Rich-Mantrams—Gāyatṛi, Gāyattra and Vārhaspatya, a preceptor should begin the Upākarmam of the S'ruti. (19)

In the Sāṃhita (of the Vēda), there are, in order, twenty classes of metres. With the first Mantram composed in each metre, he should perform Homa for all those Chhandas. (20)

With the subsequent portions of the Churchchā-(Recitation) Mantrams, he should perform Homa for hymns, the Brāhmaṇa (portion of the Vēdas) and the Aṅgas (the six auxiliary parts of the Vēda. (21)

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Barley is called Akṣhata; when fried, it becomes Dhāna; Vṛihi-rice when fried, is called Lāja; and a pitcher is called Svāndika. (1)

For the six months when the Sun is in the southern solistice, a wise man should not study the subsequent mysterious subjects and the Upanishads. (2)

A person conversant with religious science, should study during the northern solistice after performing the Upākarman-rite. Utsarga (terminating rite) should be performed on the Full-Moon-day either in the month of S'rāvana or of the Bhādra. (3)

One should not marry a woman who has not auspicious marks, who has profuse hairs on her person, and who is born of a woman giving birth to a single child. (4)

Three attached footsteps pass by the name of Pra-krama in the Smrīti. It is mentioned by the Adhväyar-yyu in all the Smārātta, and S'route, rites. (5)

One should offer oblations of food facing the quarter in which [they should be placed]. Nyañcha-Karma (lying on the face) should not always be performed in all those rites [that are celebrated] [in the month of] S'rāvana. (6)

The oblations at the end of a Vali (food-offering) and Agnipraṇayanam (fetching the Fire) would not take place every day. But Ulmukha (torchlight) must always be done. (7)
All are entitled to the Mantram for despatching Prishátaka (milk mixed with ghee) and for eating the new-boiled rice left after offering it to the Fire. (8)

If Bráhmana's are not near at hand, [the sacrificer] should himself look at the Prishátaka. Even in a New Sacrifice, one should partake of the residue of the clarified butter. (9)

All the jujube branches are called Kalatavya. Conch-shells grown in a sandy soil, are known in the Smriti as Jatas'ila (pitumen). (10)

When with the destruction of a rock a precious stone is destroyed, one should, collecting it, purify the same. He should not wait for the A'graháyanic rite. (11)

If the Sravana-rite is stopped for some impurity consequent upon birth, etc., one should completely perform the A'graháyanic rite, except the offering of the Vali. (12)

Thereupon one should lie down on one's own bed, either for a month, half-a-month, seven nights, three nights, or for a day, or immediately. (13)

After that, one should not use Mantrams. Nor should one follow the rules governing the Room in which the Fire is deposited. No new cloth should be spread, nor should there be any mention of the south or the sides. (14)

If they are very strong, then even when the rite is begun in Agraháyaña, one should sprinkle two pitchers with water reciting the Mantrams all the while. One should recite the Mantrams at every pitcher. (15)

A small impediment has been mentioned by many in the Smriti as an obstacle. Práña-Sammita, etc., has been described as an impediment by Vas'istha. (16)
When there is a contradiction of words, the delivery of the majority is considered as an authority. Where evidence is of equal weight, reason is described as an authority. (17)

A palm is called Traiyamvaka; the head is called Āpūpaḥ; a ball is called Palās'a; and powdered iron is called Chīvara. (18)

In some places, one should touch with the forepart of the Nameless finger; and in some places, one should consecrate with Mantrams by merely looking at them. (19)

CHAPTER XXIX.

In all the rites the Srotas (stream) of animals should be sprinkled with water quietly by a bunch of Kus'a, according to one's desire. The two vessels made of Palis'a, are for keeping the marrow. (1)

The seven apertures in the head, the four udders, the navel, the hip and the anus, are the fourteen Srotas of a cow. (2)

The hoof is for cutting flesh. Having collected the entire quantity of marrow according to the rules of learned men, one should perform Homa and then terminate the Mantrams. (3)

The breast, the tongue, the lap, the bones, the two kidneys, the anus, the udders, the hip, the shoulder, the testes and the sides, are spoken of as the limbs of an animal. (4)

In number, the Avadinam (cutting into pieces) is eleven, as there are eleven limbs. But it is sometimes... fourteen, as there are two kidneys, two sides and two testes (5)

As somehow or other the injunctions of the S’ruti must be carried into effect, so there should be eight Rik-Homas, even when the Charu sacrificial food) is prepared with a goat. (6)

Proportionate to [the number] of Avadānas that one would have made on animals were they available, Piṇḍas of rice boiled with milk, should be made in the absence of animals. (7)

In the absence of animals, one should make a liquid food of rice, milk and sugar boiled together for Uhana-curry; and similarly, in the Anvashtakā-rite. (8)

Some learned men speak of the superiority of the offering of Piṇḍas; for, it is seen that, at holy places, chiefly at Gaya, merely Piṇḍas are offered. (9)

Other great Rishis speak of the superiority of feeding; for, it is seen that, great care is taken in examining the Brāhmaṇas (10)

The regulation of an A’ma-S’rāddha (i.e., one performed with raw materials], is that [it should be done] with Piṇḍas. The study of the Vēdas is forbidden in the case of taking food at a S’rāddha; and in that of listening to the S’rāddha-regulations. (11)

I have arrived at this conclusion, after having collected the opinions of learned men. Since there is the superiority of both the rites, therefore this is the aggregate opinion. (12)

The sprinkling of an animal with water in Pitri-rites, should be done by one wearing the sacred thread over the right shoulder and under the left arm. And one should offer Charu by wearing the sacred thread under the right arm. (13)
The collection of Avadānam and not that of any thing else, is for establishing the superiority. The offering of oblation is the superior part; the remaining portion is but an ordinary affair. (14)

Any elevated place is called Dvīpa; any place covered with green grass is called Ishtakā in the Smṛiti. Any watery place is called Kilina; and that which is distant from a pool is called Maru. (15)

The gate, the window, the pillar, the earth, the plinth and the last corner should have no holes, nor should the gate of the house have any holes; and it must be in the possession of the A'ryyas. (16)

In it Vṛīhi is called Vas'arīgamā; and barley is called S'ankha; reciting the name by such a one, one should offer oblations like those of a Kshipra-Homa. (17)

Arghya is formed by the collection of fried paddy, flowers, water and scents. And Madhuparka is formed by the combination of curd and honey. (18)

With a belmetal vessel, one should pour Arghya into the palms of a venerable person. One should also dedicate Madhuparka placed in a belmetal vessel and covered by a belmetal vessel. (19)

VRIHASPATI SAMHITA

HAVING celebrated a hundred sacrifices [and] completed [them] with profuse presents, King Indra accosted Vṛihaspati, the foremost of orators, saying,— (1)

"O lord, by what gift happiness is always multiplied? Tell me, O thou of great asceticism, of that, which, being given, yields most precious fruits." (2)

Being thus accosted by Indra, the greatly wise Vṛihaspati, the master of speech and the priest of the Celestials, said,— (3)

"O Vāsava, he, who makes gifts of gold, cow and lands, is freed from all sins. (4)

"Gold, silver, raiment, diamond and precious stones, are all given by him who gives away lands. (5)

"By giving away furrowed lands, capable of germinating seeds and filled with corns, one lives gloriously in the celestial region, so long as the solar rays remain in the three regions. (6)

"By making a gift of land, even of the measurement of a Gocharma, one is purged of any sin he commits under the distressing pressure of limited means of livelihood. (7)

"A plot of land, thirty rods of ten cubits in length and ten such in breadth, is called Gocharma. [The gift of such a land yields] great fruits. (8)

"Or the plot of land where a thousand kine, having given birth to young ones, may live comfortably, is called Gocharma in the Smriti. (9)

"By making gift of a land unto a Vipra, endued with accomplishments, asceticism and self-controlled, one enjoys the un-ending fruits thereof, so long as the earth girt by the ocean exists. (10)

"As seeds, scattered on the surface of the earth germinate; so virtue, acquired by the gift of lands, multiplies. (11)

"As a drop of oil, thrown into water, spreads itself; so the virtue of the gift of lands, multiplies itself in every corn. (12)

"The giver of rice becomes ever happy; and that of raiments, beautiful. The man, who makes gifts of lands, becomes always like a king. (13)

"As a milch-cow rears its calf by discharging milk, so, O thousand-eyed Deity, the land, given away, multiplies the prosperity of the giver. (14)

"[By giving away lands, one comes by the fruits of the gifts of] conch-shell, house, umbrella, animate and inanimate objects, and elephants. The fruit of the gift of lands, O Purandara, comprises various virtues and the celestial region. (15)

"The Sun, Varuṇa, Vishṇu, Soma, Fire-God, and the Divine Holder of the Trident (Śivá), gratify the giver of lands. (16)

"The fathers vaunt and the grandfathers become gratified, [and say,—] 'A giver of lands is born in our family. He will become our rescuer.' (17)

"The gifts of kine, lands and learning, are spoken of as supreme gifts. They, forsooth, rescue the giver from all sins. (18)

"The givers of clothes, go [to the other region], being covered therewith. And those, who fail to do so, go nude. The givers of food, go there, gratified [with food]. And those, who do not make gifts of food, go hungry. (19)
"All the departed Manes, afraid of hell, seek it, thinking,—'The son who will go to Gayā would be our rescuer.' (20)

One should desire for many sons, for if one happens to go to Gayā, or one happens perform a Horse-Sacrifice, or to dedicate a Nīla-bull. (21)

"The one, the upper part of whose tail is dark-blue in colour, whose hoops are twany-coloured, and whose horns are white, is called a Nīla-bull. (22)

"If that Nīla-bull, having a twany-coloured tail, goes about eating grass, the departed Manes [of the giver], remain gratified for sixty thousand years. (23)

"If the mud, upraised from the bank, exists on its horns, the departed Manes of the dedicator repair to the most beautiful region of Soma. (24)

"Formerly [this earth [belonged] to Yadu, Dilipa, Nyīga, Nahusha and other kings; and in future it will go to others. (25)

"This earth was given away by many kings, Sāgara, and others. But the fruit belongs to him in whose possession the land exists. (26)

"The perpetrator of sinful deeds,—he, who kills a Brāhmaṇa, who kills a woman, who kills his father, who kills a hundred or a thousand kine, who seizes lands given away by his own self or by another,—rots with his departed Manes by becoming a virmin in his own excreta. (27—28)

"He, who speaks ill of the gift of lands, and he, who gives permission for stealing the same, goes to hell. (29)

"The giver of land and the stealer of the same, reap the virtue or the sin, and no one else. Till the dissolution of the universe, [the giver] remains upwards (i.e., in the celestial region); and the stealer, downwards (i.e., in hell). (30)

"The first offspring of the Fire, is gold. The daughter of Vishnu, is the earth. A cow is the daughter of the Sun. He, who gives away gold, cow, or the earth, becomes the giver of the threefold regions (i.e., enjoys the fruits of such a gift). (31)

"[A part of] the earth, extending over eighty-six thousand Yoyanas, being given away by one of one's own accord, it gives everywhere all sorts of desired-for objects. (32)

"Both he,—who accepts the gifts of lands, and he,—who makes such a gift,—are the performers of pious deeds. And they, forsooth, repair to the celestial region. (33)

"The fruits of all the [other] gifts, follow one birth, but those of the gifts of gold, lands and a seven years old maiden, follow seven births. (34)

"Thinking that I am the soul, he, who does no injury to the fourfold creations (those born of perspiration, those born of eggs, the vegetables, and those born of the uterus), has nothing to fear of, even when he is alienated from his body. (35)

"Those men, by whom a land is improperly stolen, or those by whom it is made to be stolen,—both the stealer and the orderer,—destroy their seven generations. (36)

"That wicked-minded person, stupefied by Tamas (disorganizing tendency), pilfers a land or makes another do the same, is killed by Varuna's noose, and is born in the species of the feathery tribe. (37)

"If denying the gift, one pilfers a land belonging to a Brāhmaṇa, his three generations are destroyed by tears shed [by such a Brāhmaṇa]. (38)

"The stealer of lands, is not purified by [the gift of] a thousand of wells and tanks, by [the celebration of] a hundred Horse-Sacrifices, and by the gift of a Koti (ten millions) of kine. (39)

"He, who wrongly possesses a cow, a piece of gold, or a plot of land half a cubit in measurement, lives in hell till the hour of final dissolution. (40)

"One meets with destruction by wrongfully possessing a boundary land, measuring even half a cubit. By obstructing a road trodden by kine, or the village-road, or the cremation-ground, and striking the kine, one remains in hell till the final dissolution. Vyāsa's deliverance is that one should sow corns in a barren place, dig wells in a waterless place. The false accusation of a maiden, destroys five generations; and that of a cow, ten. (41—43)

"The false accusation of a horse, destroys a hundred generations; that of men (i.e., servants), a thousand. Those born and those who will be born in the family of one who utters a falsehood for gold, are destroyed. (44)

"To speak false for land, destroys all. Therefore, one should never utter a falsehood for land. One should never cherish an inclination for a Brāhmaṇa's property, even if his vital breath comes up to the throat. (45)

"That dreadful poison has no medicine and no physician. Poison is no poison; but a Brāhmaṇa’s property [verily] is spoken of as poison. (46)

"Poison kills only one man [who takes it], but a Brāhmaṇa’s property destroyes even his son and grandson. One can digest iron, powdered stone and even poison. (47)

"What man, in the three regions, can digest a Bráhmaṇa’s property? A Bráhmaṇa’s anger is a weapon, a king’s hand is a weapon. (48)

“A weapon destroys only one man; but a Bráhmaṇa’s anger, the entire family. The Bráhmaṇás have thus ire for their weapons; and Hari (Vishnū) has the discus for his weapon. (49)

"[A Bráhmaṇa’s] anger is fiercer than the discus; one should not, therefore, make a Bráhmaṇa irate. Those destroyed by fire or the Sun, may grow again. (50)

"But there is no re-growth for him, who has been destroyed by a Bráhmaṇa’s ire. Fire destroys [an article] by its power; and the Sun, by its rays. (51)

"The king consumes [a person] with the rod of chastisement; and a Vipra, with anger. That wealth which creates a desire for a Bráhmaṇa’s property and hankering for what is dedicated to a Deity, leads to the destruction of one’s family and self. The theft of a Bráhmaṇa’s property, Bráhmaṇicidie, the pilfering of a poor man’s wealth, and that of a preceptor’s or a friend’s gold, afflicts one, even if one is stationed in the celestial region. The sin, attached to the theft of a Bráhmaṇa’s property, is never dissipated. (52–54)

"If one hides that sin, it will get wind elsewhere. The weapons [bought] and the soldiers fed by a Bráhmaṇa’s wealth, are destroyed in a battle like water in sands. O Vásava, O foremoost of the Celestials, eternal is the gift that is made unto a person who is well-read in the Védas, born in a good family, poor, contented, humble, given to the well-being of all creatures, who studies the Védas, performs penances, has acquired knowledge and controlled the senses. As milk, curd, clarified butter and honey, placed in a raw earthen vessel, are destroyed for the defect of the vessel, so an ignorant man, who accepts cows, gold, raiment, food, land and sesame, is consumed like a wood. If an ignorant person lives in one's own house, and one vastly read in the S'ruti at a distance,—presents should be made unto the one who is master of the Veda. There is no sin in superseding the ignorant wight. A learned person, O Vásava, rescues the family by seven and seven (i.e., seven generations upwards and seven downwards). (55—61)

"He, who excavates a new tank, or reclaims an old one, lives gloriously in the celestial region after rescuing his entire family. (62)

"He, who reclaims old tanks, wells, pools, forests and gardens, enjoys the same fruits of the original maker. (63)

"The person, O Vásava, in whose tank, water exists even in the summer season, never comes by any distressing condition. (64)

"O foremost of the kings, the person, in whose tank on this earth, water exists even for a day, rescues seven generations upwards and downwards. (65)

"By making gifts of lamp, one becomes of a handsome body. By making gifts of edibles, one acquires memory and intellect. (66)

"If, after perpetrating iniquitous deeds, one gives food unto one soliciting the same and especially unto a Bráhmaṇa, one is not affected by the sin [thereof]. (67)

"[The sages] call him the destroyer of a Bráhmaṇa, who, when seeing lands, kine and wives of one, forcibly taken by another, does not communicate [the matter unto the master]. (68)

"If a king, on being communicated by the Brāhma-nās, oppressed by anger, does not save them, him also, they call the destroyer of a Brāhmaṇa. (69)

"He, who, out of stupefaction, puts impediments in an impending marriage, sacrifice or gift, O Vāsava, is born as a virmin after death. (70)

"Wealth is multiplied by a gift; and life [is prolonged] by the protection of lives. By abstention from injury, one enjoys the fruits [thereof in the shape of] beauty, prosperity and freedom from diseases. (71)

"By partaking of fruits and roots, one attains to the adorable celestial region along with the dwellers therein. By fasting, one enjoys a kingdom and happiness everywhere. (72)

"[The] acquisition of] kine, etc., [is the fruit of] initiation. One, by living on grass, attains to the celestial region. One, by bathing three times [a day], acquires women: and by drinking air only [and dying thereby], one reaps the fruit of a sacrifice. (73)

"A kingdom does not accomplish what [is gained by] a twice-born person, who bathes daily, adores the Sun, and recites the Mantrams at the two periods of junction. One attains to the celestial region by meeting with death while fasting. (74)

"Entering into a fire by being self-restrained, one lives gloriously in the region of Brahmā. He, who returns precious stones, comes by creature-comforts and sons. (75)

"He, who fasts, lives, for good, in the celestial region. He, who always lies down on one side, comes by a desired-for condition. (76)
"He, who resorts to a hero's seat, a hero's bed and a hero's place, has eternal regions and desired-for objects. (77).

"By performing fasting, initiation and water-sprinkling for twelve years, one attains to a region superior to that of heroes. (78)

"By studying all the Védas, one is immediately freed from sorrow. He, who performs sanctifying religious rites, lives gloriously in the celestial region. (79)

"The twice-born, who study the holy deliverance of Vṛihaspati, have these four, viz.—longevity, learning, fame and strength, multiplied." (80)

DAKSHA SAMHITA'.

CHAPTER I.

There was a patriarch named Daksha, who was acquainted with the true import of Dharma (religion), Artha (worldly profit), the foremost of all those conversant with the Vedâs, and a perfect master of all forms of learning. (1)

Creation, universal dissolution, preservation and destruction take place of themselves, and the soul abides in Brahman. (2)

A Brahmachārin (religious student), a Grihastha (householder), a Vânaprastha (forest-recluse) and a Yatin (hermit)—for all these, Daksha wrote his Institutes. (3)

As long as a boy does not attain to the age of eight, [he is known] as a new-born babe. He is to be known as an embryo, the difference [only] being that of his individuality. (4)

In the period [that is during the period] that he is not invested with the sacred thread, there is no sin in a food and an interdicted edible, in drink, in what should be spoken or not, and in falsehood. (5)

By doing forbidden deeds, after being invested with the sacred thread, one commits a sin. As long as he is not sixteen years old, he is not entitled to follow an established rule or practice. (6)

As long as one studies the Vedâs and follows the Vedic observances, he is called a Brahmachârin. Thereafter, on being bathed, he becomes a householder. (7)
Two classes of Brahmacārīn have been mentioned by the wise in the Śmrīti. The first is Upakurvānaka (a Brāhmaṇa, in a state of pupilage, who wishes to pass on to the state of a householder); the second is Naishthīka (one who leads a life of perpetual celibacy). (8)

He,—who after having adopted the life of a householder, becomes a religious student again,—is neither a Yatin nor a Vānaprastha, but he is divorced from all the Aś'ramas. (9)

A twice-born person should not live, even for a day, without following any order. If he lives without following an order, he is required to perform a penitential rite. (10)

He,—who, divorced from an order, engages himself in recitation, or in the performance of Homa, or in making gifts, or in Vedic study,—does not reap the fruit thereof. (11)

The three orders should be followed in due succession, and not in a reverse course. There is none more sinful than he who follows them in a reverse order. (12)

A Brahmacārīn is marked by a girdle, a black antelope skin and a staff; a householder, by the sacrifices for the Deities, etc.; and a forest-recluse, by the presence of nails and hairs. And a Yatin [is known] by a threefold staff. These are the different characteristic marks. (13)

He, who has none of these marks, is no follower of an order; and he is required to perform a penitential rite. The order of the above-mentioned rites has not been spoken of, nor has the time [of those rites] been recorded, in the Smṛiti, by the Sages. (14)
For the behoof of the twice-born, Daksha himself has spoken of [all those rites]. (15)

CHAPTER II.

I shall now describe all those rites, which, being conducive to their well-being, should be performed by the twice-born every day, after getting up from the bed early in the morning. (1)

From sunrise to sunset, a Vipra should not remain, even for a moment, without performing the daily and the obligatory rites, as also those performed with an end in view and those, not censurable. (2)

If a twice-born person, abandoning his own rite, performs those of another caste, either unwittingly or out of stupefaction, he becomes degraded thereby. (3)

Instructions would [now] be delivered by me about what should be performed in the first part of the day. I would [also] describe in full all those different rites which should be performed in the various divisions of the day,—the second, third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh and the eighth. (4—5)

When the dawn arrives, one should, after duly performing the purificatory works (i.e., passing urine and excreta) and cleansing the teeth, bathe in the morning. (6)

Bathing in the morning is the purifier of the highly dirty body, having nine apertures, [and] passing [urine and excreta] day and night. (7)

The organs of a sleeping person become moistened and pass discharges. The superior organs thereby come to the level of the inferior ones. (8)
Besmeared with sweat and perspiration, one gets up from the bed. Therefore without bathing, one must not perform any religious rite, such as, the recitation of the Mantrams, the celebration of Homa, etc. (9)

If a Vipra, getting up from the bed at dawn, takes his daily bath early in the morning for three years, he has the sins of his entire birth dissipated. (10)

Bathing in the morning, at the period of conjunction when the Sun rises, is equal to the [penitential rite of] Prájápatya in the destruction even of mighty iniquities. (11)

The Rishis highly speak of early bathing in the morning; for it yields fruits seen and unseen. One who bathes in the morning, with his soul purified, is entitled to perform all, such as, the recitation of the Mantrams, etc. (12)

It is said that one should rinse the mouth after bathing. By performing the A'chamanam (rinsing), according to the following regulation,—one attains to purification. (13)

Having washed both the hands and feet, one should drink water thrice, after seeing it carefully. Then one should rub the mouth twice, with the thumb curved a little. (14)

Having sprinkled his two feet completely with water, one should touch one's limbs with the fingers. Thereafter, one should touch the two nostrils with the thumb and the forefinger. Sprinkling water thrice, one should touch one's face. Then sprinkling the feet completely with water, one should touch the limbs. (15)

Thereafter, one should touch the nose with the thumb and the forefinger. And with the thumb and the nameless one, one should repeatedly touch the eyes and the ears. (16)

Then one should touch the navel with the thumb and the little finger; the breast, with the right palm; then the head, with all the fingers; and the arms, with the tops of all the fingers. (17)

That Brāhmaṇa in particular, who does not perform his Sandhyā-adorations, in the evening, morning and the noon, becomes in his lifetime like a Śūdra. After his death, he is born as a dog. (18)

One, who does not perform the Sandhyā-adorations, is always impure, and is unworthy of all religious rites. The fruit, of any religious rite that he may perform, goes not to him. (19)

After the termination of the Sandhyā-adoration, one should himself perform a Homa. The fruit, which one reaps by himself, performing the Homa, is not attained if it is performed by another. (20)

When a Homa is performed by any of these—a Ritwik, a son, the preceptor, a brother, a daughter's son, and a son-in-law, it is equal to that performed by one's own self. (21)

Having performed the sacrifice for the Deities, one should, thereafter, adore the preceptor and look at the auspicious articles. The rites for the Deities should be performed in the first part of the day; that for men, in the middle part; that for the departed Manes, in the afternoon; all these rites are to be performed with great care. (22—23)

If one performs a rite in the evening which should be performed in the morning, he reaps no fruit thereby, as a barren woman by sexual intercourse. (24)

It is laid down that all the rites, should be performed in the first part of the day. And the Védas, it is laid down, should be studied in the second part. (25)

The study of the Védas is spoken of as the highest austerity for the Vipras. The study of the Védas with its six auxiliaries is to be known as Brhma-Yajña. (26)

The first is the admission [of the superiority] of the Védas; then discussion [on the Védas], then the study, then the recitation [of the Védas], and then the deliverance of instructions unto the disciples. This is the fivefold practice of the Védas. (27)

This time (i.e., the second part of the day) is also spoken of as the fittest time for the gathering of sacrificial fuels, flowers, Kus’a, etc. In the third part of the day, means, for acquiring riches and supporting the dependants, should be thought of. (28)

The father, the mother, the preceptor, the wife, the children, the poor people, the dependants, the incomers and the guests, are spoken of as the Poshyas (i.e., those who should be supported. (29)

Kinsmen, relatives, those suffering from diseases, who have none to look after them, those who seek refuge, and others having no means, are also spoken of as the Poshyas (30)

To support the Poshyas, is the most excellent expedient for attaining to the celestial region. By oppres-sing them, one goes to hell. Therefore one should support them with care. (31)

One should especially offer boiled rice unto all creatures. One should make presents unto the learned, or else he would go to hell. (32)

Blessed is his life, who alone is the instrument of support unto many. Those men are like the dead, although alive, who live for themselves only. (33)
Some live for many; others live for their kith and kin; others [only] for themselves. And some cannot, with difficulty [even], support themselves. (34)

One desiring for lordly powers, should make gifts unto the poor, the helpless and the learned. By making gifts unto unworthy persons, people are born dependant on another's fortune. (35)

I consider that wealth, which one presents unto worthy persons and which one offers every day in Homa, as the true wealth. The rest belongs to some body else which one merely protects. In the fourth part of the day, one should fetch earth for bathing. (36)

[One should in the same part of the day, collect] sesame, flowers, Kus'a, etc. One should bathe in the natural water. Bathing has been spoken of as being threefold, vis.,—Nitya (daily), Naimitika (obligatory, as in the solar or lunar eclipse), and Kāmya (having an end, such as the attainment of the celestial region in view). (37)

Of them that which is Nitya (daily), divides itself again into three:—(1)Malāparationam (that which removes the dirt of the body); (2), the next is the one which is done after reciting the Mantrams. (38)

[The third] is the bathing at the two periods of junction. These are the divisions of bathing described. Mārj'ānam (sprinkling the person with water by means of the hands) should be made in the water. Prāṇā-yāma may be practised anywhere. (39)

Then adorations should be offered to the Sun; afterwards the recitation of the Gāyatrī is spoken of. The Sun is the Deity of the Gāyatrī at whose mouth the threefold Fire is stationed. (40)
The Rishi (Saintly Author) is Vis'vámitra and the metre is Gáyatri. Sávitrí is thus qualified. In the fifth part of the day, due divisions should be made. (41)

[Divisions of food should be made] for the departed Manes, the Deities, the mankind and the insects, etc. Such is the deliverance [of Daksha]. Since a householder gives daily sustenance unto the Deities, the human beings and the bipeds, the order of a Gríhastha is, therefore the foremost of all A's'ramas. The order of a householder is spoken of, as the source of the three other A's'ramas (42—43)

That being deteriorated, the other three also become subject to decay. A trunk has the root for its life, the branches have the trunk, and the leaves have the branches, [for their life]. (44)

The root being destroyed, all these meet with destruction. A householder should therefore be protected with every care. (45)

He is to be reverenced and adored by the king and the three other castes, [except the Bráhmaṇa]. He is called a householder who performs the duties of the order. A householder [does not become a householder] by [merely possessing] a house. (46)

A man,—neglecting his own duties, and failing to bathe, offer oblations to the Fire, recite the Mantrams and make gifts,—does not become [a householder] by [merely having] a son and a wife. (47)

By being indebted to the Deities and others,* one

* This refers to the various debts which a man is to satisfy. The debt to the Deities, one satisfies by performing religious rites; the debt to the departed [Manes, one satisfies by performing the S'ráddha; the debt to the Rishis, one satisfies by making religious studies; and the debt to mankind, one satisfies by feeding them.
goes to hell. One who eats alone, is the taker of food, while the other [who shares it with many,] is the feeder of others. (48)

[The difference between these two, is:—] He, who only takes food for himself, [lives alone for himself and] does not feed others. He,—who makes allotments [of food unto the guests], is forgiving, compassionate, devoted to the Deities and guests,—is a pious householder. He is spoken as the leading householder in whom exists these accomplishments, viz.,—mercy, bashfulness, forgiveness, reverential faith, discriminative knowledge, practice of Yoga and gratitude. Having made an allotment [of the food], a householder should partake of the residue. (49–51)

Having partaken of the food and sat at ease, he should digest the same. He should then spend the sixth and seventh parts of the day in the study of the Itihāsas and the Purāṇas. (52)

In the eighth part [of the day], temporal affairs should be attended to. Then, again, he should adore the Fire in the evening. He should next perform Homa, take meals and finish other household works. (53)

Having performed [all the duties], one should, afterwards, study the Vēdās a little. One should spend the two periods of time after Pradosha (nightfall) in the study of the Vēdās. (54)

He, who then sleeps for the next two periods, is competent to attain to Brahman. Occasional rites and those undertaken with a particular aim, one may perform at any time whatsoever when the necessity arises. No fixed time is laid down for them. One, being born in this world, shall have to meet with death here. (55–56)
One wishing for happiness, should, therefore, perform all the duties with every care. The middle period is the best for all the rites. By partaking of the clarified butter left as remnant of the offering of oblation, and going to sleep in due time,—a Brāhmaṇa has never to suffer from any physical disabilities. (57—58)

CHAPTER III.

A HOUSEHOLDER has nine Sudhās. I shall express these nine in words. Similarly there are nine [proper] acts and nine [improper] acts. (1)

Secret deeds are nine; open works are nine; successful works are nine; and unsuccessful works are also nine. (2)

There are nine objects which are never to be given away [by a householder]. These groups of nine always lead to the aggrandisement of a householder. (3)

I shall now describe the Sudhā-articles. When any distinguished person comes to the house, one should gently offer these four,—the mind, the eye, the face, and the words. One should rise up and say,—"come here;" carry on a pleasant conversation, saying,—"welcome;" treat him with food; and follow him. [All] these works should be carefully [performed]. (4—5)

Other minor gifts [are]:—[pointing out of] a place [for sitting]; [offering of] water [for washing the feet]; [offering of] a Kus'ā-seat; washing the feet; [offering of] oil for rubbing the body; [offering of] a bed; [and offering of] food, according to one's might. A householder should not take his food before his guest is fed, the offering of earth and water;—all these, a householder should always perform. (6—7)

Sanḍhyā-adorations, bathing, recitation of the Gāyatrī, Homa, Vedic study, adorations of the Deities, adoration of the Vis'vadevās, hospitable treatment extended to the guests, according to one’s own might, proper allotment of food for the departed Manes, Deities, human beings, the poor, the helpless, the ascetics, the father, the mother and the preceptor,—these are the nine [sacred] works. Iniquitous deeds are, again, [the following:—] Falsehood, knowing another’s wife, taking forbidden food, knowing a woman who should not be known, drinking what should not be drunk, theft, committing injury, doing works not sanctioned in the S'ruti, transgression of a friend’s duty,—these are nine improper deeds. One should avoid them all. Longevity, wealth, weakness of a house, counsel, sexual intercourse, medicine, austerity, charity, and honour,—these nine should be carefully kept secret. Freedom from a disease, satisfaction of a debt, gift, study, sale, giving away a daughter in marriage, dedication of a bull, secret sin, and the act of not being censured by others,—these nine should be publicly done by a householder. (8—14)

What is presented as a gift to the father, to the mother, to the preceptor, to a friend, to a humble person, to one who has done any good, to the poor, to the helpless and to distinguished persons, yields fruits. (15)

What is given as a present to a wicked person, to a panegyrist, to an ignorant wight, to a bad physician, to a liar, to a cheat, to a flatterer, to a wandering actor, and to a thief, becomes fruitless. (16)
A small property, what is gained by begging, what is kept as a security, trust-money, a woman, a woman's personal property, what is inherited, whole estate and public property,—these nine articles should never be given away even in a calamity, if there is any living member in the family. That foolish wight who gives them away, is required to perform a penitential rite. (17-18)

The Goddess of Prosperity in this world and in the celestial region in the next, does not forsake a person who knows these groups of nine and performs the rites mentioned therein. (19)

Others should be looked upon as his own self by a person desiring for happiness. Happiness and sorrow are equal both unto one's own self and unto others. (20)

Happiness or sorrow, which should be afforded unto others, would afterwards again arise in one's own self. (21)

No article is procurable without trouble. How can any religious rite be performed in the absence of [proper] articles? There is no religion in the absence of rites. And where is happiness in the absence of religion? (22)

All persons seek happiness; but that originates from religion. Therefore religion should always be carefully practised by all the castes. (23)

A rite for the next world should be performed by articles acquired by fair means. A gift should be duly made unto an accomplished person in proper time (24).

In making a gift, the particular fruit multiplies, in order, in equal number, twofold, thousandfold, and endlessly. Similar [is the fruit] in committing injury. (25)
Brāhmaṇa;* a thousandfold, [when it is made unto] a preceptor; and endless, [when it is made unto] one who has mastered the Vēdās. (26)

Not only that which one gives unto an unworthy person who neglects all injunctions, becomes futile, but the remaining virtue is also destroyed [thereby]. (27)

Finding out one who solicits a gift for preventing a calamity or for maintaining his relatives, one should make a gift; otherwise it would yield no fruit. (28)

The virtue of a person, who establishes an orphan by performing the rite of investiture with the sacred thread, marriage, etc., for him, cannot be enumerated. (29)

The well-being, which is attained by a person for settling down a Vipra, is not acquired by an Agnihotra-, or an Agnisthoma-, rite. (30)

Whatever is greatly prized, whatever is the most favourite article in the house, should be given away unto a qualified person by one seeking an endless possession of all those articles. (31)

CHAPTER IV.

The household of men has the wife for its root, if she follows the Vēdās; there is none equal to the domestic mode of life, if a wife is under the control of her husband. (1)

* The Text has Brāhmaṇa Vruvē, i.e., one who pretends to be a Brāhmaṇa but neglects the duties of the caste. It is, however, curious how may the fruit be twofold in this case. But we have rendered the Text literally. Perhaps the Author means Brāhmaṇa Śrēṣṭhāḥ.
With her, one reaps the fruits of the threefold objects of life, namely,—Dharma (Virtue), Artha (worldly profit) and Kāma (desire). If she follows her own will and is not curbed [by her husband] out of love, she becomes uncontrollable afterwards like unto a disease neglected. She who follows the will of her lord, does not give vent to evil words, is an expert, is chaste, speaks pleasant words, is protected by her own self, and is devoted to her consort, is a goddess and not a woman. (2—4)

This world is like a celestial region unto him whose wife follows him obediently. It is like a hell unto him whose wife is against him. There is no doubt in it. (5)

Mutual attachment [between a husband and a wife], is rare even in the celestial region. There is nothing more painful than the fact that one is attached to, and another is unfavourably disposed towards, [the other]. (6)

The domestic mode of life is for happiness; and happiness is dependent on a wife in the house. She, who is humble, knows the mind and is under the control [of her husband],—is a [real] wife. (7)

Otherwise she always becomes miserable and disappointed. Disagreement of the mind always takes place when a person has a wife always going against him, and specially when he has two wives. (8)

All wives are like leeches. Even if daily gratified with ornaments, dresses and food, they never cease to extort a man. (9)

That small leecher merely sucks the blood while the other draws the wealth, property, flesh, energy, strength and the happiness of a man. (10)
In childhood, she always remains afraid; in youth, she becomes disobedient; and afterwards in old age, she considers her own husband as a servant. (11)

Obedient, unsullied by harsh speech, expert, chaste and devoted to her husband,—a wife, endued with all these accomplishments, is, forsooth, the Goddess of Prosperity personified. (12)

She, who is always of a delighted mind, acquainted with the position and number of household articles, and always affords satisfaction unto her husband, is the [real] wife; others are like decrepitude. (13)

Glory is for that person in this world, whose disciple, wife, little child, brothers, grown up son, servants and dependants are all humble. (14)

The first is the Dharmapatni (i.e., a wife helping in the acquisition of virtue); the second is for increasing lust. In the latter, originates the fruit that is seen, but not what is not seen (i.e., virtue). (15)

If she (i.e., the first wife) be freed from any shortcomings, she is called Dharmapatni. If she suffers from any defect, there would be no sin in accepting a second one [for as such], if she happens to be endued with accomplishments. (16)

He, who renounces, in youth, a wife who is free from any fault and is not degraded, will attain, after death, to womanhood and become barren. (17)

A woman who forsakes her poor or diseased husband, is repeatedly born either as a bitch, a vulture, or a shark. (18)

A woman, who, after the demise of her husband, ascends the funeral pyre, becomes of good conduct and lives gloriously in the celestial region. (19)
As a snake-catcher forcibly takes out a snake from a hole, so she, rescuing her husband [from hell, lives happily with him. (20)

CHAPTER V.

What is pure and what is impure have been spoken of, [what is pure,] should be done; [and what is impure,] should be avoided by intelligent men. Wishing for your good, I shall speak a little on their significance. (1)

Care should always be bestowed on the purificatory rites. The purificatory rite has been described in the Smṛiti as the root of the twice-born. All the rites of a person, who is divorced from the purity of conduct, become futile. (2)

Purity is being spoken of as being twofold,—external and internal. It is said in the Smṛiti that external purity [is effected] by earth, water, etc. Purity of thought is internal [purity]. (3)

External purity is superior to impurity; and internal purity is superior to that (i.e., external purity). He who is pure in both (i.e., externally and internally), is [said to be] in a state of purity and no one else. (4)

Earth should be given once in the generative organ; thrice, in the anus; ten times, in the left palm; seven times, in both the palms; and thrice, on the feet. (5)

This is the purification, spoken of, for a householder; for [the followers of] the other three [orders], it is, in order, twofold, threefold and fourfold for the fourth [order]. (6)
The earth [that is to be applied to the first (i.e., the generative organ) should be half-a-handful as described in the Smriti; for the second and the third, it has been described half of each. (7)

The earth with which three knots of a finger are filled up, has been described for being applied to the generative organ. This purification is for the householders. Twice as much is for the Brahmacārins (8)

Threefold is for the forest-recluses; and fourfold for the Yatins. Water should be used as long as the earth is not washed off. (9)

Purification is effected by earth and water. There is no trouble nor [is there any] expenditure of money. His mind has been examined* who is lax in the matter of purification. (10)

This is the purification for the day-time. Another is laid down for the night. One method obtains for the Vipras at the time of calamity, and another when they are at ease. (11)

A half of the purification which is necessary in the day-time, is laid down for the night. Half of it, is for a diseased person; and a half of it, for him who is in a hurry to go in the middle of a road. (12)

More or less should not be done, in the matter of purification, by him who wishes for purity. There is no penance for the transgression of the established practice. (13)

---

* i.e., He who is not inclined to undergo the purifying process, for it is neither troublesome nor expensive.
CHAPTER VI.

I SHALL now describe, fully and in order of precedence, the impurity arising from birth or death, as well as that which lasts for life. (1)

Immediate purification,—one lasting for a day; those for two, three, four, ten, and twelve, days; that for a fortnight; that for a month; and that terminating with death;—these ten form the fixed time of impurity. I shall, in due order, describe them fully. (2—3)

He, who is acquainted with the exposition of the Védás together with their Áṅgas (six auxiliaries), Kalpas (Codes of Law), and their Rahasya (their gnostic portions), and who performs the rites laid down therein,—suffers from no impurity. (4)

Immediate purification is laid down for kings, sacrificial priests, those initiated, children, for a death in a foreign country, for those engaged in a religious observance, and for those engaged in a sacrifice. (5)

One day is spoken of for him who maintains the Sacred Fire and studies the Védás. Two, three, and four, days, are for those who are inferior and more inferior. (6)

A Brāhmaṇa, by caste, is purified in ten days; a Kshatriya, in twelve days; a Vais'ya, in fifteen days; and a Sūdra, in a month. (7)

Perpetual impurity is spoken of for all of them, who, without bathing, offering oblations to the Fire and making gifts, partake of [their] meals. (8)

Perpetual impurity is for a diseased person, a miser, one laden with debts, one who does not perform religious rites, an illiterate person, and especially for a ben-pecked person. (9)
Daily impurity is for one who is addicted to gambling, etc., and for a dependant. The impurity of a person, who does not perform the S'ráddhas, ends with his ashes (i.e., death). (10)

Temporary impurity is not for them, but a lifelong one. Thus impurity, according to the differentiation of merits has been spoken of. (11)

If an impurity, consequent on birth, takes place with that of one arising from death; or if an impurity, originating from death, happens with that of birth—in a case of such a combined impurity, one is purified with [the end of the] impurity consequent on death. (12)

To make gifts, to accept presents, Homa and Vedic study are stopped in a state of impurity. A Vipra, conversant with sacrifices, deserves purification after the tenth day. (13)

Gifts should be duly made, for it saves one from inauspiciousness. If any impurity, consequent on death, takes place within the time of a similar one, and that arising from birth happens in the course of a like one,—in cases of such combined impurities, one is purified at the end of the previous one. In both the cases, within ten days, one should not partake of any food of the family [laden with such an impurity]. (14—15)

On the fourth day, the bones should be deposited by the twice-born. The touching of the limbs is laid down after the depositing of the bones. (16)

If one husband takes wives from all the castes in their natural order, then on the occasion of the childbirth, impurity extends over ten, six, three and one, days respectively. (17)

There would be no impurity, consequent on a birth or death, when a sacrifice is being performed, or a marriage is being solemnized, when there is a revolution in the country, or a Homa is being performed. (18)

All these impurities have been spoken of for the time, place and case. There is no impurity for a person who is visited with a calamity. (19)

CHAPTER VII.

I SHALL now describe that Yoga by which the universe, the soul and the senses are brought under control. (1)

Prānāyāma (suspension of the breath), Dhyāna (meditation), Pratyāhāra (withdrawal of the mind from external objects), Dhāraṇā (concentration), Tarka (abstract reasoning), and Samādhi (absorption of thought into the Supreme Spirit),—are called the six Aṅgos (steps) of Yoga. (2)

Yoga does not consist in resorting to a forest; nor does it consist in thinking of many literary works; nor does Yoga is performed by religious observances, sacrifices and ascetic austerities. (3)

Yoga does not consist in taking any particular food or in fixing one's looks on the tip of the nose. Nor does it originate from the observance of purity, more than what is mentioned in the Śāstras. (4)

Nor is Yoga done by the abstention from speech, the recitation of the Mantrams and the clever performance of the many illusory feats. Sometimes Yoga is attained by one who has disassociated himself from worldly concerns. (5)

Yoga arises from strict concentration, practice, firm resolution, continued disgust in worldly affairs, and not by any other means. (6)
Yoga is accomplished by finding pleasure in the meditation of self, by the toy of purity and by the consideration of all creatures as equal and not by any other means. (7)

He, who is devoted to self; who daily sports in self; who is given to the culture of self; who is always engaged in the meditation of self; who is by nature fond of self; who is contented; who has not his mind attached to any other object; and who is well-satisfied with self;—succeeds in attaining to Yoga. (8—9)

One should be engaged in Yoga even when asleep, especially when awake. In the Smriti, a person, who displays such an exertion, is described as the foremost of those conversant with Brahman. (10)

He, who does not see a self, is like unto Brahman. This is the deliverance of Daksha. (11)

The Yatin, who has his mind attached to worldly objects, does not attain to Moksha (liberation); therefore a Yogin should carefully renounce attachment for things earthly. (12)

Some say that the attachment of the senses to their objects is Yoga. Irreligion is accepted as religion by these ignorant people. (13)

Others say that the union of the mind and the soul is Yoga. These are greater dunces than the first, and are simply deprived of Yoga. (14)

By disbelieving the mind from [all] its faculties and unifying the individual soul with the Supreme One, liberation is to be attained. This is spoken of as the highest Yoga. (15)

Attachment, stupefaction, distraction, bashfulness and fear, are spoken of as the operations of the mind. One should bring these under subjection. (16)
He, who has controlled the five ordinary senses together with the higher six (i.e., the mind) is incapable of being defeated by the Celestials, Asuras and the mankind. (17)

A hero is not spoken of as one, who has forcibly taken possession of another's kingdom: he, who has controlled all the senses, is described by the learned as a hero. (18)

By making all the senses, which run towards the external objects, operate internally, one should engage the mind in [the meditation of] the Atman (self) (19)

Being freed from all distracting thoughts, one should consign the individual soul to the Brähman. This is Dhyāna,—this is Yoga; the remnant is nothing but the amplification of a book. (20)

Renouncing attachment for earthly objects, when the mind becomes steadied in the form of the power of the soul, it is called Samadhi. (21)

Temporary is the position that is attained by the unification of the four (viz., corporal body, subtile body, individual soul and the Supreme Soul). But eternal, real, and unending is what is acquired by the union of the two (i.e., the individual soul and the Supreme Soul). (22)

It is a contradiction when what does not exist for all, is spoken of as existent. Therefore that does not exist in the heart of another. (23)

Brahma is to be known by one's own self, like cohabitation with a maiden. One, who is not a Yogan does not know (Brahman) ;—as one, born blind, does not know a pitcher. (24)

Brahma is completely knowable by him who daily practises Yoga. The Eternal Para-Brahma is not ascertainable on account of subtleness. (25)

Like mental thoughts, the learned know It (Brahman) as one. Women and illiterate people consider it as manifold. (26)

Even the Celestials, who are possessed of Sattwa (harmonising tendency), are under the control of the object of the senses, what to speak of men in this respect who are under the influence of stupefaction and possessed of a very small portion of the Sattwa-guna. (27)

Therefore casting off the impurities of the mind, one should take up the staff [of a Yogin]; others cannot do it and become subject to the objects of the senses. (28)

The water, driven by the wind and converted into waves, does not stand still even for a moment. Therefore, one should not place confidence in any. (29)

Many persons drive their livelihood under the umbrage of a triple staff [i.e., of being a Sannyasin]; he, who does not know Brahmam, is not worthy of holding the triple staff. (30)

[A Yogin] should always preserve his Brahma-charyya [celibacy]. Sexual intercourse is of eight sorts:—viz., thinking of a woman, talking [about it], dalliance with a woman, looking [at a woman with an impure desire], speaking to her secretly, determination [for holding a sexual congress], persistent endeavour [for doing it] and the actual deed. The learned hold that these are the eight divisions of sexual intercourse. (31—32)

This should never be thought or spoken of, not should it ever be done. One, who has mastered all these propensities, is a Yatin, and none else. (33)

Branding him as an outcaste, the king should speedily turn him, who, having adopted the life of mendicancy, does not observe its regulations, out of his kingdom. (34).

One [mendicant] is a Bhikshu; two are called Mithuna in the Smṛiti; three are called Grāma; and more than that, Nagara. (35)

A Nagara, Grāma, or a Mithuna should not be formed [by a Yatin]. By doing these three, a Yatin transgresses his own duty. (36)

If they would thus come to live together, their conversation would [naturally] tend towards begging, the king, the objects of their affection, slandering and jealousy. (37)

The exposition of the Scriptures for lucre and adoration, the collection of disciples and many other similar displays are [in vogue] amongst the bad ascetics (38)

Meditation, purification, begging alms, and always living in a solitary place,—these four are the duties of a Bhikshu. He must not follow the fifth. (39)

[A Bhikshu],—emaciated by ascetic austerities and the recitation of the Mantram, disabled by interruptions of health, age, infirmity or decrepitude, possessed by an evil planet, deranged in intellect,—[may seek refuge in a house]. (40)

But a healthy and youthful Bhikshu cannot betake to a home-life; he would thereby vitiate that place and injure the learned. (41)

Such a healthy and youthful person destroys his Brahmacharyya; when Brahmacharyya is destroyed, his family also meets with destruction. (42)
If while living in a house, a Bhikshu holds sexual intercourse then the root of the master of that house is cut off. (43)

What is the use of any other religious rite for him in whose house a Yatin finds shelter even for a moment? He becomes blessed thereby. (44)

Living even for one night, a Yatin consumes all the sins that are collected by a householder till his death. (45)

The three worlds, consisting of animate and inanimate creations, are fed by him who feeds a Yatin, laden with toil, in the order of hermitage, by the practices of Yoga. (46)

The country, in which a Yogin, well-versed in meditation, resides, becomes purified, what to speak of his relatives? (47)

The thought of dualism, monism, dualism-and-monism, no-dualism and no-monism, leads to the highest acquisition. (48)

Permeated by the thought of Brahman, one should neither think of one's self nor of his relationship with another. Obtaining such a stage, one comes by the most excellent station. (49)

Some firmly believe in dualism; and some, in monism. I would describe the firmly-formed tenets of the monists. (50)

If one sees a second object except the self, then he should study the S'astras and listen to [the views contained] in innumerable books. (51)

The Vipras, who study the Institutes of Daksha, containing an account of the most excellent duties of all the orders as spoken of duly, repair to the celestial religion. (52)
Even if an inferior person studies and listens to it reverentially, he comes by son, grandson, animals and fame. (53)

If a twice-born person makes this Dharma S\'ástra listened to by others at the time of a S\'rāddha, it yields endless fruits and comes to the departed Manes. (54)

THE END.

CHAPTER I.

The Mahapatakins who do not perform the penitentiary rites, are born, after their sufferings in hell, with bodies disfigured with the signs [of their crimes]. (1)

The sin-indicating signs appear in every birth but, with the performance of the penitential rites and repentance [for the commission of the sins] they disappear. (2)

The marks of heinous crimes appear for seven births [consecutively]; those of the Upapataks (minor sins), for five; and those of other sins, for three. (3)

The diseases, begotten of the iniquitous deeds of mankind, disappear with proper treatment. They are cured by the recitation of the Gāyatrī, adoration of the Celestials, performance of Homā and gifts. (4)

A sin, committed in a previous birth, assails people in the shape of a disease after the termination of the sufferings in a hell. It is dissipated by recitation etc., (5)

Leprosy, consumption, gonorrhoea, diarrhoea, obstruction in urination, stone, cough, dysentery, fistula, obstinate ulcers, inflammation of the glands, paralysis, loss of eyes,—these diseases, says the Smrīti, originate from the perpetration of heinous crimes. (6—7)

Dropsy, liver, spleen, colic, ulcer, short-breathing, dyspepsia, fever, cold, forgetfulness, distraction of the senses, Galagraha (a kind of disease), bloody tumour, dry spreading itch, are the diseases begotten of minor sins; convulsive fits, appearance of circular figures of various sizes on the body, trembling of the body, itches, elephantisis, Poondarika (a kind of leprosy), and other diseases, originate from Unupāta-sins. The diseases of mankind, heard by [the name of] piles, originate from Atipapa (heinous crimes). (8—10)

Various other diseases originate from the combination of sins. Their symptoms and penitentiary rites should be spoken of in due order. (11)

In Mahapātakas (gravest sins), [gifts] must be in full; in minor offences, in half; in other sins, one should give away a sixth, according to the nature of the disease and proportionate to one's power or otherwise. (12)

The general rule for making a gift of kine and other rites, is this:—In the gift of a cow, it should be of a good nature, with a calf and yielding milk. (13)

In the gift of a bull, it should be endued with auspicious marks and decorated with gold and a piece of white cloth. In the gift of earth, one should give away, unto the twice-born, lands of the measurement of ten Nivarttana. (14)

A Nivarttana consists of thirty rods, each rod being ten cubits [in length]. Ten Nivarttanas make one Gocharma. By making a gift [of such a piece of land], one lives gloriously in the celestial region. (15)

Where a hundred Nishkas (gold coins) are to be given away, gold, fifty or twenty Nishkas in quantity, [should be given]; in the gift of a horse, one should present a quiet and good-looking animal, bedecked with ornaments. (16)
In the gift of a buffalo, one should give away a she-buffalo endued with a golden weapon. And in a great gift, one should give away an elephant with a golden fruit. (17)

In the adoration of a Deity, one should present a hundred thousand excellent flowers. In the matter of feeding the twice-born, one should offer sweet edibles unto a thousand Brāhmaṇās. (18)

After adoring the Holder of the Trident (S'iva) with a hundred thousand flowers, one should recite the Rudra-Mantram. One should recite the Rudra-Mantram eleven times. Having performed the tenth part of a Homa with oblations of clarified butter covered with Guggula (fragrant gum resin), one should perform A'bhisēchanam (sprinkling with water) with the Varuṇa-Mantram. In a S'anti-(pacification) rite, one should pacify the goblins after pacifying the planets. (19—20)

In the gift of paddy, as laid down in the Smṛiti, good paddy of the quantity of a Khāra (a measure of grain equal to 16 Dronas), or of six [should be given]; and in the gift of cloth, two pieces of silk raiments with camphor [should be given]. (21)

Having made ten, five, eight, or four, good Brāhmaṇās seated, made up the Sāṅkalpa (determination) according to one's own desire, performed the adoration of Vishṇu,—one should make presents of kine, according to one's might, unto the twice-born, after having decorated them, proportionate to one's means, with dresses and ornaments. (22—23)

One should then solicit from them, the due penance [for a sin] as punishable [by the king]. Then having duly performed the penitential rite with their permission, one should, again, for completing the same, properly adore the twice-born persons. Gratified, the Brāhmaṇās should accord permission unto one who wishes to perform a religious rite. (24—25)

If the Brāhmaṇās desire it, all the faults in the matter of recitation, or in austerity or sacrificial rites disappear. (26)

The Deities honour what the Brāhmaṇās say. The Brāhmaṇās are at one with all the Deities and their words never prove otherwise. (27)

Fasting, religious observance, pilgrimage, religious austerity, if all these are performed by the Vipras, complete becomes the fruit thereof. (28)

When the earthly deities (i.e., the Brāhmaṇās) say that it is well-done, one should carry it on his head after saluting them. [Thereby] he reaps the fruit of an Agnisthoma-rite. (29)

The Brāhmaṇās are the moving pilgrimages void of water and granting all desires. Persons suffering from the impurity [of sins], are purified by their word-like water. (30)

Having obtained their permission and received their blessings, one should, after feeding the twice-born according to one’s might, take one’s meals along with one’s own kinsmen. (31)

---

CHAPTER II.

After serving his term in hell, the destroyer of a Brāhmaṇa, is born afflicted with white leprosy. Therefore, for the expiation of that sin, one should perform a penitential rite. (1)
Five pitchers should be placed filled with five gems, five leaves and covered with a piece of white cloth. (2)

Earth collected from horse-stable, etc., should be placed into them; they should be filled to the brim with sacred water and contain five bitters and various sorts of fruits. (3)

Sarvoushadi (sacred medicinal herbs) should be placed inside them. And they should be placed on each side by the twice-born. One should then place on the middle pitcher, a lotus of eight petals made of silver. (4)

On it, one should place the figure of the four-faced Deity Brahmá, made of half-a-Pala of gold. (5)

With scents, flowers, incense, etc., the sacrificer, should duly adore it thrice daily with the Purushasúkta-Mantram. (6)

Thereupon the Bráhmanás, observing celibacy, should gradually, recite their own Védás,—the Rig-Védá, and others, into the pitchers placed in the east and other quarters. (7)

Thereupon after propitiating the planets, one should perform the tenth part of a Homa on the middle pitcher with sesame and gold soaked with clarified butter. (8)

Having finished this rite, extending over twelve days, the foremost of the twice-born should sprinkle the sacrificer with water in the altar. (9)

Thereupon one should, proportionate to his means, present kine, lands, gold, sesame, etc., unto the twice-born. Unto the A'cháryya, he should give the idol. (10)

[He should say: —] "O ye A'dityas, Vasus, Rudras, Vis'wadévás, Maruts, being gratified, do ye destroy my most terrible sin. (11)
Repeatedly reciting this Mantram with reverence, he should beg pardon from the A'cháryya. By observing this regulation, one suffering from white-leprosy, becomes purified. (12)

The slayer of a cow, after his sufferings in a hell, is born as a leper. His redemption is as follows. He should place a pitcher filled with articles mentioned before. Its body should be pasted with red sandal, filled with red flowers and covered with a red cloth. Having thus made that pitcher red, he should place it in the south. (13—14)

He should then place on it a copper plate filled with powdered sesame; he should place on it the image of Yama, made with gold of the quantity of a Nishka. (15)

He should then adore it with the Purushasúkta-Mantram, [praying,—] "May my sin be dissipated." One, well-read in the Sáma-Véda, should finish the recitation of the Saman near the pitcher. (16)

Having performed the tenth part of the Homa with mustard and Abhishéchanam (sprinkling with water) with the Pavamanisúkta, one should present, unto the A'chárya, the image of the King of Righteousness. (17)

"May Yama seated on a buffalo, with a dreadful rod in his hand, the presiding Deity of the south,—may he remove my sin." (18)

Having recited this Mantram, one should perform the Visarjana-rite.* He should then spend a month being filled with reverence and faith. The sin of the destruction of a Bráhmana or a cow is dissipated by this penitential rite. (19)

* The life of a Deity is invoked in the image at the commencement of the worship; and at the end of it, the said life is said to be thrown into water. Visarjana signifies "to throw off."
The destroyer of one's own father is born as an innett;—and that of mother, as a blind person, after undergoing the pangs of a hell. One should, therefore, duly perform the penitential rite. (20)

One should, according to directions, perform thirty Prájápatyas. After the termination of the rite, one should make a boat with gold, in quantity weighing a Pala. (21)

Then placing a pitcher made of silver, one should keep a copper plate on it. Then an image of the Deity (Vishńu), bearing the mystic mark of Srívatsa, should be made of gold of the quantity of a Nishka. (22)

Covering it with a silk cloth, one should duly adore it. He should then present, unto a twice-born person, the boat containing all the requisites. (23)

"O Váヌdeva, O lord of the universe, O thou stationed in all creatures, O thou the destroyer of the calamity of one who bows unto thee, do thou rescue me, who am sunk in the ocean of iniquity." (24)

Having recited this Mantram and saluted it, one should present it (i.e., the image) unto a Bráhmaṇa; one should make presents unto other Bráhmaṇás proportionate to one's means. (25)

The destroyer of a sister is born as a deaf after the termination of sufferings in a hell. In the destruction of a brother, [one is born] as a dumb. The following is the redemption laid down in the Smritis. (26)

One should, for the expiation of the sin, perform a Chándráyana-rite. After the termination of this religious observance, one should make gift of a book with a golden fruit. (27)

Reciting the following Mantrams, one should throw off the image of the divine wife of Brahmá,—“O
Saraswati, O Mother of the universe, O presiding Goddess of the words of the Vedas, O great Goddess, rescue me from the sin originating from the iniquitous deeds. A person, slaying a child, is born as one whose children die on birth. (28—29)

For the purification of this sin, one should perform the wedding of a Brahmana and duly listen to the recitation of [the religious work] Harivamsa. (30)

One should then duly recite the Mahárudra. Eleven Rudras with six Angas pass by the name of Rudra. (31)

The aggregate formed by these eleven, is called Mahárudra. Similarly this aggregate of eleven is also called Atirudra. (32)

[With this Mantram] and ten thousand Durva-grass, the tenth part of a Homa should be performed. Eleven gold Nishkas should be given away as the sacrificial present. (33)

But these eleven Palas, one should present unto a twice-born person according to one's means. One should, also, proportionate to one's might, make presents unto other Brahmanás. (34)

[The priest] should make the pair bathe afterwards with the Varuna-Mantram. [The sacrificer] should give unto the A'cháryya clothes and ornaments. (35)

One, killing a cow, is born as a leper and his family becomes extinct. For the expiation of that sin, one should perform a hundred Prájápatya-penances. (36)

After the termination of the rite, one should, after making gifts of lands, listen to the recitation of the Mahábháratam. The slayer of a woman suffers [in another birth] with chronic diarrhoea. He should plant ten As'wathva-trees. (37)
He should then give away a small quantity of sugar, and feed a hundred Brāhmaṇaś. The destroyer of a king suffers from consumption. The following is his redemption. (38)

By giving away kine, lands, gold, sweetmeats, water, clothes, a small quantity of clarified butter and sesame,—by making gifts in this order, the disease of consumption is cured. A man, killing a Vais'ya, is born suffering from blood discharges. (39—40)

Performing four Prājāpatyas, one should dedicate paddy [to the quantity of] seven [Khari]. The destroyer of a Śūdra is born as a man suffering from the disease of Dandāpatānaka (41)

After performing one Prājāpatya one should give away a cow with a money-present. In the destruction of artizans, one is born as being harsh-speeched. (42)

For the expiation of that sin, a white bull should be given away. A person, slaying an elephant, becomes unsuccessful in all works. (43)

Having a palace made, one should place an image of Gaṇes'a, or he should recite the Gaṇes'a-Mantram a thousand times. (44)

The gratification of Gaṇa should first be done by the leaves of Kulathva-leaves and barley-cakes. By slaying a camel, one is born with a hoarse voice. (45)

For the purification of that sin, one should present camphor to the quantity of a palam. By slaying a horse one is born with a crooked face. (46)

For the expiation of that sin, one should give away sandal wood, one hundred palas, in quantity. By killing a she-buffalo, one is born with Krishnagulma (a chronic enlargement of the spleen). (47)
By killing an ass, one is born with ass-like hairs on his body. One should [for the expiation of the sin] present an idol made of gold weighing three Nishkas. (48)

By killing a Tarakshu-deer, one is born having eyes like those of a crow. For the expiation of that sin, one should give away a cow made of precious stones. (49)

By killing a boar, a person is born with long and projecting teeth. For the purpose of purification, he should make a gift of a pitcher filled with clarified butter and money. (50)

By killing a deer, one is born lame; and a jackal, without foot. By him, a horse made of gold weighing a Pala, should be given away. (51)

By killing a goat, one is born with an extra limb. A she-goat covered with a cloth of variegated colours, should be given away by him. (52)

By killing a lamb, one is born with jaundice. For purification, he should present unto a Brāhmaṇa one Pala of musk. (53)

By killing a cat, one is born with a twany-coloured arm. He should make a present of a pigeon made of gold to the weight of a Nishka. (54)

By killing a S'uka and a Sāri (a pair of parrots), a man becomes a stammerer in his next birth. He should present unto a Brāhmaṇa a good scriptural work with money. (55)

The destroyer of a crane is born with a long nose. He should give away a white cow. The destroyer of a crow is born earless. He should give away a black cow. (56)
The expiation for the sin of destruction, now spoken of, is for the Brāhmaṇas. Half of it, in order, should hold good in the case of the Kshatriyas and other [castes]. 57)

CHAPTER III.

A DRINKER of spirituous liquor is born with black teeth. After performing a Prājāpatya-rite, he should make seven figures with sugar and give them away for the expiation of his sin. (1)

Having recited the Mahārudra-Mantram, one should perform the tenth part of a Homa with sesame. Then Abhisēkha (sprinkling with water) should be performed with the Varuṇa-Mantram. (2)

The drinker of spirituous liquor is born suffering from Raktapitta (discharge of blood from the mouth). For purification he should give away a pitcher [either] filled with clarified butter or one-half filled with honey, together with gold. (3)

By taking a forbidden food, one is born as a worm in the womb. For purification, one should fast on the Bhishma-Paṅchaka-day.* (4)

By taking food seen by a woman in her courses, one is born as a worm in the womb. By living on the urine of cow and barley for three nights, one becomes purified. (5)

By taking food touched by a person who ought not to be touched, one is born as a worm in the womb. By fasting for three nights, he is freed from that sin. (6)

* Five days from the eleventh to the fifteenth in the bright-half of the month of Karttika, sacred to Bhishma.
By putting obstacles in another's feeding, one is born with dyspepsia. He should, as a penance, duly perform a hundred thousand Homas. (7)

He, who partakes of bad food, a good article being available, gets his digestive power impaired. He should perform three Prájápatyas and feed one hundred twice-born persons. (8)

The administrator of poison becomes subject to cold. He should give away ten milch-kine. He, who obstructs a high road, suffers from the disease of foot. He should make the gift of the horse. (9)

A wily person, after sufferings in hell, is born with the afflictions of Asthma and Bronchitis. One thousand Palas of clarified butter should be given away by him. (10)

A wicked person becomes subject to epilepsy. For the expiation of the sin, he should, after performing a Brahmakurcha-penance, give away a cow with a money gift. (11)

By giving pain to another, one is born as a sufferer of colic. For the expiation of that sin, he should give away edibles and recite the Rudra-Mantram. (12)

By putting fire to a forest, one is born as suffering from diarrhoea attended with blood purging. For the expiation of that sin, a fig-tree should be planted by him. (13)

He, who passes urine even once in a temple or in water, is afflicted with the diseases of the rectum (as piles, fistula, etc.,)—diseases as dreadful as the sin itself. (14)

Diseases of the rectum are cured by the adoration of the deities for a month, gift of a couple of kine, and the performance of one Prájápatya-penance. (15)

Liver, spleen and dropsy are the diseases which originate from procuring abortions. For their cure the following penitential rite is laid down in the Smr̥ti. (16)

In these [diseases] one should present unto a Vipra a Jaladhenu, according to the regulation, with three Palas of either gold, silver or copper. (17)

He, who breaks an idol, is born without any residence of his own. He should pour water on a As'wathavatree daily for a year. (18)

He should then perform the nuptials of the As'wathva-tree according to the regulations of his own family. Then he should establish the image of the Deity of Impediments (Gaṇēs' a) duly adored. (19)

He, who gives vent to foul words, is born with a broken limb. He should give unto a twice-born person two Palas of silver and two pitchers filled with milk. (20)

He, who vilifies others, becomes bald-headed [in another birth]. He should make a gift of a cow with gold. He who laughs at others, is born with one ear. He should make a gift of a cow with pearls. (21)

He, who shows partiality in an assembly, is born suffering from paralysis. He should make a gift of gold, three Nishkas in weight, unto one who wends truthful ways. (22)

CHAPTER IV.

The pilferer of a Vipra's gold is born, after the sufferings in a hell, as the destroyer of his own family. After performing three Chāndráyaṇas, he should make a gift of a hundred gold coins. (1)

The pilferer of copper is born, after [serving his term in] hell as suffering from Oudumvāra (a kind of leprosy). After performing one Prājāpatya, he should make a gift of a hundred Palas of copper. (2)

The stealer of bellmetal becomes subject to the disease of Poonḍarīka (a kind of leprosy). Having bedecked a twice-born person with ornaments, he should make a gift, unto him, of a hundred Palas of bellmetal. (3)

The pilferer of brass is born with twany-coloured eyes. Fasting on an Ekādās'ī-day and bedecking a good Brāhmaṇa with ornaments, he should present unto him one hundred Palas of brass. (4)

A person, pilfering pearls, is born with twany-coloured hairs. Fasting, he should give away a hundred pearls according to proper regulations. (5)

A person, stealing tin, is born suffering from eye-diseases. Fasting for a day, he should give away one hundred Palas of tin. (6)

By knowing a maternal uncle's wife one is born as a haunch-back. By making the gift of a black antelope skin one should perform the penitential rite. (29)

By knowing a mother's sister one gets ulcers on the left part of the body. By him redemption shall be effected by making gifts properly. (30)

By knowing a dead wife one is born as one whose wife dies. For the expiation of that sin he should celebrate the nuptials of a Brâhmaṇa. (31)

By knowing a woman of his own family one is born with fistula in ano. By him redemption shall be effected by a careful gift of a She-buffalo. (32)

By cohabiting with a female ascetic a person is born suffering from gonorrhoea. He should recite the Rudra-Mantram for one month and give away gold according to his might. (33)

By knowing one's own wife who is initiated, one is born suffering from the vitiation of blood. For the expiation of that sin he should perform Prájápatyas. (34)
By knowing the wife of a person belonging to his own caste, one is born suffering from the ulceration of the heart. For the expiation of that sin he should perform two Prájápatyas. (34)

By knowing the wife of a person belonging to his own caste, one is born suffering from the ulceration of heart. For the expiation of that sin he should perform two Prájápatyas. (35)

By cohabiting with a beast, one is born suffering from urinary diseases. For self-purification he should give two plates filled with sesame (36)

By cohabiting with a mare, one is born suffering from constipation of the bowels. For expiation he should bathe S'iva for a month with a thousand lotuses. (37)

These diseases undoubtedly affect men after the termination of their residence in hells. Likewise they affect women who associate with similar men. (38)

CHAPTER VI.

Those who have been killed by a horse, boar, horns, [by falling down from] a mountain, tree, or an elevated place, by a cart, fire, wood, weapon, stone, poison or hanging. (1)

Those killed by being wounded by a tiger, serpent, elephant, a king, thief, enemy, or a leopard; those killed by a wood or a dart; those for whom no purificatory rites have been performed. (2)

Those killed by cholera, by having rice-balls stuck in the throat, and long standing diarrhoea; those killed by being possessed by Śákini and other evil Grahas (planets); (3)

Those dead being unworthy of being touched, or suffering from impurity or having no sons—those dead under the following thirty five conditions do not come by a better condition. (4)

The three generations upwards from the father are entitled to Pindas (the remnants of the food sticking to the hand after offering funeral oblations to the first three ancestors), three upwards that are Nándimukhás i.e., to whom a S'raddha is performed on a festive occasion); three upwards that are called A'srumukhás. (5)

Being gratified these twelve orders of Pitris (departed manes) grant children; if they are not placed in proper condition they destroy children. (6)

The ten killed by tiger etc., are destructive of conception; the twelve, killed by weapons etc., destroy the foetus. (7)

The ten or twelve, killed by poison, etc., destroy a boy one year old. A departed mane, dead without any issue, creates childlessness. (8)

He, who cohabits with a maiden, is killed by a tiger; the administrator of poison, by a snake; the mischief-maker of a king, by an elephant. (9)

The destroyer of a royal prince [is killed by the king]; and the destroyer of an animal, by a thief; he who creates dissensions amongst friends, by an enemy; and one of the conduct of a crane, by a wolf. (10)

The destroyer of a preceptor [dies] on the bed; an envious person, being divorced from purificatory rites; one committing mischief unto other, without any

* A kind of female being attendant on Durgá (supposed to be a demon or fairy.)
Samskāra (cremation etc); and the pilferer of a trust money [is killed] by a dog. (11)

One, who kills another by a noose, is killed by a boar in a forest; one making a cloth by killing an insect is killed by an insect (12).

One, who is iminical towards S'ankara, [is killed] by a horned animal; and a wicked man, by a cart; the stealer of lands, by falling down from an elevated place; and one who obstructs a sacrifice, by fire. (13)

The stealer of sacrificial presents [is killed] by forest fire; the vilifier of the S'ruti, by weapons; the vilifier of the twice-born, by a stone; and one who gives evil tendency, by poison. (14)

He, who commits injury [is killed] by hanging; the breaker of a bridge, by water; the filferer of the royal rod, by worms; and the stealer of iron, by chronic diarrhoea. (15)

He who works with pride, is killed by S'ākini and other evil spirits. One studying the Vēdās on an interdicted day is killed by a thunder-bolt. (16)

The pilferer of the sacred books dies touching an article that shall not be touched. The seller of wine dies degraded; and the pilferer of a Brāhmaṇa's cloth, childless. (17)

The penances for all those persons shall in due order be spoken of. One should make with gold, one Nishka in weight, the image of a male being of the form of a Preta (the Regent of the dead having four arms, with a rod in hand, seated on a buffalo). He should make a pinda (funeral cake) to the size of a prastha with flour and black sesame. (18—19)

He should place a pitcher filled with honey, clarified butter, and sugar, and containing a golden ear-ring, the base of which is not black, containing five leaves, covered with a black cloth and consisting of Sarbaushadhi (lit.:—all cure). Thereon he should place a plate filled with paddy and fruits. Then he should place on it seven kinds of paddy with fruits. Having placed the image of the Preta on the pitcher he should adore it. (20—22)

He should daily offer libations of milk with the Purusha-Sūkta Mantram, and then one, conversant with Vadas, should recite in the pitcher the Rudra-Mantram with six divisions. (23)

Similarly, one should celebrate the adoration etc., of Yama with Yama-Sūkta. For self-purification the recitation of the Gāyatrī should be performed. (24)

Having propitiated the planets before, he should perform the tenth part of Homa with sesame. Then with water sacred to the Pitris he should offer sesame and water, and pindas unto the Preta, of unknown family and name. Then he should recite the following Mantram: "I offer this pindas consisting of sesame, honey and clarified butter unto that Preta, who is troubling me. Then in honour of the Prēta, he should dedicate unto Vishnu twelve black pitchers filled with water and containing a plate of sesame. Then he should sprinkle the A'chārya and his wife with the water of the pitcher consecrated with the Varuna Mantram, "S'uchirvarāyudhadhara" (holder of pure and most excellent weapon). Then the sacrificer shall offer the final present unto the A'chārya. (25—29)

Then offerings should be made unto Nārāyana according to the deciscions of the S'āstra. This is the general regulation, spoken of, for these who die under infernal conditions. (30)
Special regulations should be known again in cases of persons killed by tigers. If a person is killed by a tiger for him should be performed the nuptials of another's daughter. (31)

In case of a snake-bite offerings should be given unto snakes; presents of gold should be made in all cases. One being killed by an elephant one should give away an idol of an elephant made of gold, four nishkas in weight. (32)

For one being killed by the king, one should give away a golden figure of a male being; a cow, for being killed by a thief; and a bull, by an enemy. (33)

For one being killed by a wolf, one should give away gold according to his might. On a person dying in bed, a bed made of cotton with an image of Vishnu made of gold, one nishka in weight, lying on it, should be given away. For one dying in an impure state, an image of Hari, made of gold, two nishkas in weight, [should be given away] (34—35)

For one dying without the purificatory rites being performed unto one, the nuptials for a bachelor should performed. A person being killed by a god, one should bury some money, according to his might, under earth. (36)

For a person killed by a boar one should give away a buffalo, accompanied with a money-gift. For one killed by worms one should present food made of wheat unto the twice-born. (37)

For one killed by a horned animal one should give away a bull covered with a cloth. For one killed by a cart one should give away a properly equipped horse. (38)
For one killed by falling from an elevated place one should give away a Dhánья Giri. For one killed by fire one should give away sandals according to his might. (39)

For one killed by forest-fire one should call a meeting in his house; and for one killed by a weapon one should give away a she-buffalo accompanied with a money present. (40)

For one killed by stone one should give away a milch-cow with a calf. For one killed by poison one should give away lands containing cultivated fields. (41)

For one killed by hanging one should give away a milch-cow; and for one killed by water one should give away the image of Varuna made of gold, three nishkas in weight. (42)

For one killed by [falling down] a tree one should give away a golden tree accompanied with a gold coin. For one killed from chronic diarrhoea, one, being self-restrained, should recite the Gáyatrí for a hundred thousand times. (43)

For one killed by a S'âkini or any other evil spirit, one should duly recite the Rudra Mantram. For one killed by a thunder-bolt one should make gifts of learning. (44)

For one dead by touching an article that should not be touched, one should complete the recitation of the Védas. For one dead while touching a degraded caste one should give away books on sacred literature. (45)

For one dying in a degraded state one should perform sixteen Prájápatyas. For one dying childless one should perform ninety Krichchhas (distressing penance) (46)
For one killed by a horse one should give away a horse made of gold, three nishkas in weight. For one killed by monkey one should give away a monkey made of gold. (47)

For one dying of cholera one should treat a century of Brâhmanaś with sweet edibles. For one killed by fire sticking to the throat one should give away a dhenu of sesame. (48)

For one dying of a disease of the hair one should perform eight Krichchhas. According to this regulation one should perform the funeral rites for them. (49)

Thereupon being freed from the condition of a preta (dead) the gratified Pitris (departed manes) grant sons, grand-sons, longevity, health and wealth. (50)

Here ends the [account of the] fruits [of various] acts given by S'átátapa to his disciple S'arabhanga accosting him with humility. (51)

THE END.

Sacrifice or other religious rites, and the digging of tanks, etc., shall be performed with care by a Brāhmaṇa. By Ishta (religious rite) one attains to the celestial region, and by Purtta (digging of tanks, etc.,) one attains to emancipation. (1)

Such a tank at least be excavated] that sacred water may lie on earth at least for a day; that, (i.e., a tank) in which the thirst of a cow is satisfied, rescues seven generations. (2)

By planting trees a mortal attains to those regions which are described [as being attainable] by the gift of lands or kine. (3)

He, who reexcavates and restores delapidated wells, tanks, lakes, and temples, reaps the fruits of Purtta acts. (4)

Adoration of the sacred Fire, ascetic austerity, truthfulness, the protection of the Védas, hospitality, and the worship of the Vis’wadevás are spoken of as Ishta. (5)

The [three] twice-born castes have equal rights in both Ishta and Purtta works. A S’udra is entitled to [perform] Purtta [works] but not Vedic rites. (6)

As long as the bone of a man exists in the Ganges water for so many thousands of years he lives gloriously in the celestial region. (7)

One should offer libations of water in water unto the celestials and the Pitris. For those dead without going through the purificatory rites one should offer libations of water on land. (8)
Likhita Samhita.

The deceased, for whom a bull is let loose on the eleventh day, is released from the region of the dead, and goes to that of the Pitris. (9)

Many sons should be sought for, because one of them at least may happen to go to Gayá, or celebrate a horse-sacrifice, or dedicate a Neela bull. (10)

If one, after entering Benares, leaves that place on any occasion and goes elsewhere, the Bhutas (spirits) laugh, striking their palms, amongst themselves. (11)

The person naming whom one offers a pinda at Gayás'iras, goes to the celestial region, if stationed in a hell; and attains to emancipation, if residing in the celestial region. (12)

One takes him, whether he be his own relative or an out-sider, to the eternal region of Bráhmaṇ, by naming whom he offers a pinda at any place in the sacred shrine of Gayá. (13)

That which has a crimson colour, white hoops, tail and head, is called in the Smriti, a Neela bull. (14)

The first, twelve monthly, two six monthly, and the annual, ones,—these are the sixteen S'ráddhas. (15)

The Pís'áchahood of the person, for whom these sixteen Ekoddhistha S'ráddhas are not performed, remains fixed even if a hundred [annual] S'ráddhas are offered. (16)

After the performance of the Sapindikaran S'ráddha a twice-born person should perform, every year, the Ekoddhisthas on days of their death, separately for his father and mother. (17)

Every year, for the gratification of one's father and mother, one should perform a daiva (rite for the deities) and offer one pinda only. (18)
On the last day of a month, on the two eclipses, on a Parva, and on Mahālayā three pindas should be offered, and one on the day of death. (19)

If a twice-born person performs the Pārvana S'ráddha neglecting the Ekoddhistha, know that as fruitless; and he is known as the destroyer of his father. (20)

After the performance of the Sapindakaraṇa, [the annual S'ráddha] should be celebrated according to the Regulation of the Pārvana for him who dies on an Amāvasya day in the Pitri fort-night (the dark half of Bhādrapada). (21)

[He who dies] after holding the triple staff, does not come by the condition of a pretá (deceased), on the eleventh day of his death a [S'ráddha] should be performed according to the Pārvana regulations. (23)

A twice-born person should offer daily a pitcher filled with water for him for whom a Sapindakaraṇ subsequent to the annual [S'ráddha] is laid down in the Smṛti. (23)

On the day of her death, with one [pinda] a Sapindakaraṇ for a woman should be performed by her husband. It should be mixed with that for the paternal grand-mother. The latter living, it should be mixed with that for her mother-in-law, or grand-mother-in-law. This is the fixed rule. (24—25)

After the termination of the nuptial rite, and on the night of the fourth day, a woman becomes one with her husband, in a pinda, gotra (family), and impurity consequent upon births and deaths therein. (26)

At the seventh pada (foot-step)* after marriage a

* The seven steps at a marriage (the bride and bride-groom walk together seven steps after which the marriage becomes irrevocable).
woman becomes divorced from his own family. Gifts, and the offering of pindas and water should be done [according to the regulation of] her husband's gotra (family). (27)

By taking the name of the two in every pinda it should be offered for the two mothers. Three pindas should be offered for the six. The giver, by doing so, does not become stupefied. (28)

Even if he be a Brâhmana, conversant with Mantras, and affected by physical sins as well as those affecting a row (diners), still Yama calls him sinless; and such a person is the sanctifier of the row. (29)

The residue of the oblation offered to the Fire, one should place in a Pitri vessel and distribute amongst the Pitris; he should never put it in a vessel for the Vis'wadevas. (30)

If a Vipra, who does maintain the Sacred Fire, performs a Pârvana S'râddha, he should always perform fearlessly that for his ancestors in the maternal line. (31)

Ekoddishtha and not a Pârvana S'râddha should be offered unto them, men or women who die sonless. (32)

On the self same Tithi on which a twice-born person dies, gifts and the offering of funeral cakes and water should be made unto him. (33)

Birth-day ceremony and Abisheka (consecration by sprinkling water) should never be done in the redundant month. But the S'râddha, preceding the annual one, may take place in the redundant month. (34)

That month is considered interdicted for every rite. In the other (i.e., pure) part of the month and in the same Tithi any rite may be performed. (35)
One may daily cook rice with the fire, kept in the house, or with an ordinary one. It is laid down that Homa should be performed in that fire with which rice is cooked. (36)

One should zealously offer oblations every day to the Vaidika and Laukika (ordinary) fire. By [offering oblations] to the Vaidika one attains to the celestial region, and those to the Laukika dissipate sins. (37)

He, who does not preserve the sacred fire, should offer oblations to the Fire reciting the S'akala Mantram preceded by Vyahrity, and then, distributing food amongst the Bhutas (evil spirits), should himself take meals. (38)

He should not touch the food so long the Bráhmaṇas are not dismissed. He should then perform Grihasāvali. This is the established religious ritual. (39)

Darbhass (grass), black antelope skins, Mantras, and Bráhmaṇas, in particular, never become desecrated, so they may be employed repeatedly. (40)

A twice-born person should always, with a Kus'ā in his hand, drink water and rinse his mouth. It is not considered as sullied as the residue of his meals. This is always the regulation. A Kus'ā is as unsulliable as the hand. (41—42)

The blades of Kus'ā grass should be caught hold of with the left hand, and the mouth should be rinsed with the right. The ignorant, who do not retain Kus'ās in their left hands on the occasion, are supposed to rinse their mouths with blood. (43)

Kus'ā blades fastened with the waist-knot of a wearing cloth, or with the strings of a holy thread should be always regarded as unsullied, in as much as they are as pure as the body itself. (44)
Kus'á blades in touch with the Pindas dedicated to one's departed manes, or with any kind of excreted matter, as well as those used in offering libations of water to Pitris, should be rejected as unclean. (45)

One should practise Brâhmacharyam (absolute continence) on the occasion of celebrating a Pârvana or Ekoddishta S'râddha, as well as in connection with celebrating the one which is undertaken with the sole object of propitiating one's departed manes. (46)

Oblations should be first given to one's departed manes on the mother's side, then to those on the father's side, and thereafter to those on the maternal grand-father's side, in connection with the celebration of a Vriddhi S'râddha (offerings made to one's departed manes on prosperous occasions such, as the birth of a son, etc.) (47).

Kratu and Daksha, Vasu and Satya, Kâla and Káma, Dhuri and Lochana, and Pururavâ and Madravasa, are, in couples, styled as Vishwadevas. (48)

May the mighty Vishwadevas, of illustrious fate, come, and grant us the boon in respect of the celebration of those S'râddhas of which they have been respectively ordained to act as the presiding deities. (49)

Kratu and Daksha are the Vishwadevas, who should be invoked to preside over an Ishta S'râddha ceremony. (A S'râddha celebrated for the fruition of any earthly desire). Vasu and Satya are the Vishwadevas, who should be invoked in connection with a Deva S'râddha (S'râddha celebrated in honour of the gods.) Kâla and Káma are the Vishwadevas, who should be addressed.

* A Sâma Vedi Brâhmaṇa need not make any offering to manes on his mother's side (Mâtri paksha) in connection with a Vriddhi S'râddha. This is the regulation:—Tr.
on the occasion of an Agni Kāryaya (oblation to the Fire god), Dhuri and Lochona in respect of Ambara Kāryayam, and Pururavā and Madravasā in connection with a Pārvana S'ráddha (the general ceremony of offering oblations to all the manes on days of Pārvana such as, the new moon, etc.) (50)

A wise man should not wed a girl without an uterine (or step-brother) of her own and whose father’s name is not known, apprehending lest she might have been previously given away as a Putrikā. (51)

"I give this daughter, who has got no uterine brother of her own, duly bedecked with ornaments, to you. The male child begotten on her person shall be a son of mine.” The girl, who is thus given away, is called a Putrikā. (52)

The son begotten on a Putrikā daughter should first offer oblations to his mother, then to his mother’s father, and then to his father’s father. (53)

He, who feeds (offers oblations to) his departed manes in earthen vessels on the occasion of a S'ráddha, is consigned to hell in the company of the invited Brāhmaṇas and the priest officiating at the ceremony. (54)

Earthen vessels may be substituted for other kinds of utensils, on the occasion, with the permission of the congregated Brāhmaṇas, provided they be first smeared with clarified butter. Such earthen vessels are not impure. (55)

The departed manes of a person, who himself, having performed a S'ráddha, dines, that day, out of greed, in connection with another’s S'ráddha-ceremony, stand deprived of oblations and libations of water, and come by a worse condition in the nether regions. (56)
The departed manes of a person, who himself having performed a S'rāddha, or having dined in connection with one done by another, travels, that day, more than a distance of one Krosha (two miles), eat dust for a whole month reckoned from that date. (57)

Having performed a S'rāddha ceremony, one should refrain from doing the following eight things, viz., eating a second meal that day, travelling, carrying a weight, reading, sexual intercourse, giving or taking of any gift, and performance of a Homa. (58)

By travelling (under the circumstance) one is born as a horse in one's next birth; by eating a second meal, a crow; by doing any work, a slave; by knowing a wife, a hog. (59)

One should first drink a little water consecrated by ten times reciting the Sāvitri Mantra, and after that attend to one's daily Sanāhyā rite. By so doing one is absolved from all sins incidental to doing forbidden acts [under the auspices of a S'rāddha ceremony]. (60)

An act of Japa, Homa, or gift-taking not performed by one in wet-clothes, or without covering one's knees, proves abortive (in respect of its religious merit.) (61)

A rite of Chāndrāyana penance should be practised before celebrating an A'dya S'rāddha; a Parāka Vrata, in connection with a monthly S'rāddha; a Tapta Krichchha Vrata in connection with the one which is practised at the close of every third week (Tripaksha) or of a complete month, or of the first six months of a year; a three night's fast, in connection with the one to be performed on the completion of the second-half of the year (Unābdika); and one night's (one day and night) fast, in connection with the celebration of a Sapindakarana ceremony (A S'ráddha ceremony, celebrated on the completion of a year from the date of the death of a deceased person, or earlier, if happens to be performed in connection with any special act such as, the marriage or Upanayana of any of his sons or daughters, etc., and which is supposed to liberate his spirit from the mansions of the Pretas). Uncleanliness incidental to an act of helping in the cremation of a dead body is removed by practising a Páda Krichchha (quarter part of a Krichchha Vrata) penance for a month from the date of the cremation. (62—63)

A rite of S'raddha should not be performed unto the spirit of a suicide, nor of one, either dead through the curse of a Bráhmaṇa, or killed by a snake, lizard, or a fanged or horned animal (64)

By touching the corpse of a person killed by a cow, or a Bráhmaṇa, or dead from the effects of voluntary strangulation, a Bráhmaṇa is reborn as a cow, or a horse. The contact of such a dead body is interdicted. (65)

The cutter of a noose or of a chord of binding strings, as well as the one guilty of incendiarism, should expiate his guilt by practising a Tapta Krichchha penance. This is ordained by the patriarch Manu. (66)

The performance of a Tapta Krichchha Vrata consists in living on a little warm water alone for the first three days; on a little worm milk alone for the second three days; on a little warm clarified butter alone for the third three days; and on air alone for the last or fourth three days of the entire term of the penance. (67)

The man, in remembrance of (whose guilt), one, who has been robbed of a wife, field, house, cow, land, or gold, suffers self-immolation, should be regarded as a Bráhmaṇagháti (Bráhmanicide). (68)

There is atonement for the guilt of an abettor or accomplice of a ravisher of female chastity. The ravisher alone should be regarded as Brahmagháti. (69)

By unwillingly partaking of boiled rice (lit. any kind of food) in a Chandala’s house, as well as of that prepared by a fallen or degraded person, one should live on water alone for a fortnight. The term of the penance should be extended to a month in cases where the delinquency has been knowingly committed. (70)

The touch of a fallen yogin should be expiated by an ablution; that of the residue of the meals of the degraded by the performance of a Prájápatya
Vratam. (71)

Killing of a Bráhmaṇa, wine-drinking, theft of gold to the weight of more than eighty Ratis, and desiling one’s preceptor’s bed* are the four cardinal sins, the fifth being the one born of the company of such a sinful person. (72)

By helping a sinner falling under any of the five preceding categories in matters of expiation, either out of affection, greed, fear, or ignorance, one commits the same sin as the sinner seeking such expiation. (73)

A Bráhmaṇa happening to touch before washing his mouth after eating another similarly circumstanced as himself, should bathe that moment and rinse his mouth with water, whereby he would be clean again. (74)

A man commits no sin by marrying before his elder brother’s marriage where the latter is either a hunch-

---

* Guru-talpaga—means the defiler of a preceptor’s bed; but the scholiast interpretes the term as signifying an act of knowing one’s stepmother. —Tr.
back, dwarf, eunuch, or idiot, or is deaf, dumb born-blind, or of indistinct speech. (75)

On one's elder brother happening to loose his virility, or to have resorted to the practice of yoga, or to a life of asceticism, or to be degraded in life on account of a sojourn to a country a residence wherein is considered degrading (i.e., supposed to degrade a man in society), one is at liberty to marry even before the marriage of such an elder brother. (76)

A penitential rite, similar to that laid down in connection with an act of cow-killing, should be practised by one who sells horses or elephants for money, or mischievously fills up a tank or well, or fells or cuts down a tree. (77)

All the hairs of the body should be shaved in cases where a penance to the extent of a Pāda (quarter) measure would be found to be enjoined. In two Pādas or half penances, the penitent should shave his mustaches only; all the hairs of the head excepting the tuft on the crown, in three legged (Tripāda) or three quarter penances; and the hair of the entire head in full or or four-footed ones. (78)

An act of ablution is the expiation for touching boiled rice prepared by a Chandāla; a Prājāpatya Vrata, for touching the remnants of his meal. (79)

A Prājāpatya Vrata is the penance for a Brāhmaṇa unwillingly drinking water out of a Chandāla's cup or water vessel, and vomiting or belching out the same immediately after drinking. (80)

A Krichchha sāntāpana instead of a Prājāpapatya Vrata would be the expiatory penance in his case if the water is not ejected out of, and retained and digested in, the stomach. (81)
A Brāhmaṇa should practise a Krichchha Sāntāpana Vrata; a Kshatriya, a Prājāpatya Vrata; a Vaishya, a half Prājāpatya; and a Śudra, a quarter part of the last named penance. (82)

A woman in her periods, happening to be touched by a dog, hog, or crow, should observe a single night’s fast, and regain her cleanness by taking Pañchagavyam (cowdung, cow’s urine, cow milk, milkcurd and Gṛita. (83)

A man by unintentionally touching a woman in her menses some where below her navel should instantaneously bathe. A three night’s fast is the expiation in cases where the contact is intentional and at a part of the body above her umbilicus. (84)

The Sapindas of a male child, dead within ten days of its birth, are not affected by uncleanness incidental to the death; and no libations of water should be offered to its spirit in such a case. (85)

A birth-uncleanness (uncleanness due to the birth of a child in the family) occurring within the term of one due to a death (in the same family) should terminate with the latter. But a death-uncleanness, occurring within the term of a birth-uncleanness, does not abate with its extinction. Death-uncleanness is stronger than birth-uncleanness. (86)

Agnates related to a deceased person within sixth degree of consanguinity are unclean for one day, within the fifth degree of consanguinity, for seven days; and within the third degree of consanguinity for ten days only.* (87)

The period of uncleanness due to the death of a deceased Brāhmaṇa without the consecrated fire (Niragni) should be counted from after the hour of his death, while that in respect of a Sāgni ka Brāhmaṇa (with the consecrated fire) should be counted from after the cremation of his dead body. (88)

Raw meat, clarified butter, honey, and oils expressed out of the seeds of fruits (such as almond oil, etc.), kept in the vessel of another unclean person, become clean as soon as they are taken out of it. (89)

The dust, raised by the ends of a broomstick, and happening to defile the bathing or drinking water of a person kept in a vessel, or touching his bathing apparel, tends to destroy his religious merit on the moment of such contact or defilement. (90)

Ill luck (Alakshmi) resides in the shade of a Kapiththa tree during the day, in the mixture of milk-curd and barley powder during the night, and constantly in the kernels of Amalaka fruit. (91)

One should perform three Homas and a hundred times recite the Gāyatri Mantram in connection with each act he thinks to be of evil augury. (92)

THE END.

CHAPTER I.

The holy Sages (Munis) approached that repository of penitential sanctity, Vēda Vyāsa, who was blissfully seated in his hermitage at Benares, and asked him questions regarding the duties of the members of different social orders (Varṇas). (1)

He of excellent memory having been thus interrogated by (other holy sages) recollected the Smritis as propounded in the Vēdas, and complacently said, hear, O Munis! (2)

Religious rites inculcated in the Vēdas should be practised in countries where black antelopes are found to roam about in nature. (3)

In matters of discrepancy between the Śrūtis, Smritis, and Purāṇas, the former should be held as decisive, whereas the Smritis should have preference in all topics where there would be a difference of opinion between them and the Purāṇas. (4)

The term “twice-born” denotes the Brāhmānas, Kshatriyas, and Vaishyas. Only these three orders are entitled to practise religious rites propounded in the Śrūtis, Smritis and Purāṇas in exclusion of all other castes. (5)

The fourth order is the Śudra, hence the Śudras are entitled to practise religious rites, but they are not privileged to recite any Vedic Mantra, nor to pronounce the terms Svāha, Svadha and Vashat. (6)
The daughter of a Brāhmaṇa, duly wedded to a Brāhmaṇa, is called a Vipravinnā. All religious rites and ceremonies such as, postnatal rites, etc., should be done unto the male child of a Vipravinnā according to the regulations laid down in respect of a Brāhmaṇa; those unto the male child of a Brāhmaṇa by a Kshatriya wife (Kṣatrapinnā) should be done in the manner of a Kshatriya; while those unto the son of a Brāhmaṇa by his lawfully married S'udra wife in the manner of a S'udra. (7)

All religious rites should be done unto a male child begot by a Brāhmaṇa or a Kshatriya on his married Vaishya wife in the manner of a Vaishya, while those unto the son of a S'udra mother, under the circumstance, should be done in the manner of a S'udra. A son begot by a man of inferior caste on a woman of superior caste is worse than a S'udra. (8)

A son begot by a S'udra on a Brāhmaṇa girl should be considered as a Chandāla. Such a son is debarred from practising any religious rite. There are three kinds of Chandālas. To the first kind or order belong the sons begotten on unmarried girls. To the second order belong the sons begotten by persons on wives belonging to their own Gotras. (9)

To the third kind belong the sons begotten by S'udra fathers on mothers who are Brāhmaṇis. Var-dhakis (carpenters), Nāpitas (barbers), Gopas (milkmen), Ashapas, Kumbhakāras (potters), Vanik (traders), Kāyasthas (Userers), Mālākāras (flower-men), Varatas, Medas, Chandālas, Dāsas, Shvapāchas, Kolas and beekeepers belong to the lowest castes of men. Even a conversation with a person of any of these castes should be expiated by an ablution and a sight of the sun. (10—12).

The rites of Garbhadhānam (religious rites performed for the conception of 'one's wife), Pumsavanam (religious rites performed for the causation of the birth of a male child), Simantonnyānam (described below), Jātakarma (post-natal rites), Nāmakaranam (rite of first nomenclature), Nishkramanam (formal taking out of the child in the open), Annaprāshanam (ceremony of first feeding the child with boiled rice), Vāpanam (ceremony of tonsure), Karṇavēdha (ceremony of perforating the child's ear-lobes), Vratādēsha (the ceremony of investure with the holy thread), Vēdārambhha (ceremonial commencement of the study of the Vēdas), Kes'antam (ceremony of cutting the child's hair), Snānam (ceremonial ablution), Vivāhāgni-parigraha (the ceremony of lighting up the nuptial fire which is kept burning ever afterwards), Tretāgni-samgraha (the ceremony of kindling the three different kinds of fire known as Dakshiṇagnih, Gārhapatyagnih, and A'havanīyagnih which are kept burning till the death of the lighter), are the sixteen purificatory rites ordained to be performed in the case of a Brāhmaṇa in the scriptures.* (13—15)

The recitation of any Mantra by a woman is prohibited in the ten ceremonies commencing with the Jātakarma and ending with the Karṇavēda; but she is privileged to recite Mantras in connection with the celebration of her marriage ceremony. These ten rites should be done unto the S'udras without any Mantras whatsoever. (16)

* The number is reduced to ten in the case of a Brahmaṇa who is not a custodian of the sacred fire. Tr.
The rite of Garbhādhānapam should be done unto one's wife on the first appearance of her menses; the rite of Puṃsavanam, in the third month of her first pregnancy; and the rite of Simantonnayānam (the ceremony of the parting of the hair), during the eighth month of gestation. The rite of Jātakarma should be done unto a child on the sixth day of its birth; the rite of Nāmavaranaṁ, on the eleventh day; and the rite of Nishkrānam, in the fourth month of its birth. (17)

The rite of Annaprāṣṭanam should be done unto it in the eleventh month; and the ceremony of tonsure according to the custom of its father's family (but before it completes the third year of its age). After the ceremony of tonsure that of Karmavēdha should be done unto a child. (18)

The son of a Brāhmaṇa should be invested with the holy thread at the eighth year of his age reckoned from the period of his inter-uterine life. Similarly, the investiture with the holy thread in the case of a Kshatriya or Vaishya child should be made at the eleventh and twelfth year respectively. (19)

Sons of Brāhmaṇas, Kshatriyas, and Vaishyas, not invested with the holy thread, after having respectively attained the ages of fifteen years and two months, twenty-one years and two months, and twenty-three years and two months, become deprived of the right of investiture and studying the Vēdas. They are called Vṛātyas. Such children should expiate their guilt by performing a Vṛātyastoma sacrifice. (20)

Brāhmaṇas, Kshatriyas, and Vaishyas are called the twice-born. Their first births take place when they are delivered of their mother's womb; their second, when they duly accept the Gāyatri Mantra from their preceptors. (21)

Thus made twice-born, and free from all other faults, they become entitled to study the Vedas, Smritis, and Purāṇas. (22)

Having been duly invested with the holy thread; they should reside in the houses of their preceptors, observing perfect celibacy, wearing the girdle, girdle-cloth, holy thread, and using the staff and deer-skin. (23)

On an auspicious day, and having obtained the permission of their preceptors, they should cast oblations into the sacred fire, and commence the study of the Vedas by reciting the Oṃkāra and the Gāyatri (24)

A twice-born (pupil) should study the Dharma S’astras under the guidance of his preceptor for learning the rules of decorum and cleanliness (both mental and physical); and do whatever is beneficial to his master. (25)

Then, having made obeisance to the elders, he should sit beside his preceptor, constantly exert his best for the furtherance of his studies, and do nothing else than what is beneficial to him (preceptor). (26)

Even, having been reprimanded by his preceptor, he should not make any reply in retort, nor go away even when driven away by the former. (27)

Living a life of perfect celibacy, he should renounce all hatred, envy, malice, idle glances at the sun, singing, dancing, intoxication, (lit: insanity), calumny, personal decorations, application of collyrium along the eyelids, contemplation of himself in the mirror, smearing the body with scented unguents, use of sandal pastes, or garlands of flowers, idle strolls, and discontent. (28—29)
A little after midday, and with the permission of his preceptor, he should ungreedily ask for alms of men of good conduct and regulated habits (Niyama), and having obtained the alms, he should instantly retire therefrom, considering the articles of gift as riches. (30)

Having performed the midday rites, he should take his meal with the permission of his preceptor. He should not take only cooked rice, nor that which is the residue of another's meal. At the close of his meal he should rinse his mouth with water. (31)

Even while in distress, the acceptance of any wealth excepting the alms is prohibited. He may dine in connection with a Pitri S'ráddha if thereto invited by a person without any disqualification, and if his preceptor approves it. (32)

A single meal, which is not incompatible with the spirit of Brahmacharyam is what is enjoined to be taken by him (the student), every day. Having partaken of it, he should wait upon his preceptor. Then having cast twigs of sacred trees (Samid) into the sacrificial fire, he should attend to his preceptor's comforts. In the night, and with the permission of his teacher, he should lie down in a recumbent posture, after the former had been comfortably laid in bed. (33—35)

A Brahmachárin should thus daily practise his vow, until the completion of his study of the Védas; he should devote himself to the good of his master, be sweet of speech and devout in spirit. (36)

The twice-born one, who studies the Védas in this manner, becomes capable of (effectively) cursing or granting boon to other persons, and lives in the same region with the Rishis, after death. (37)
Milk, wine, honey, and clarified butter are the articles which the gods are fond of. He should constantly study the Védas except on the interdicted days. On such days their other collateral subjects should be studied with the preceptor's permission. (38)

An infringement of the preceptor's order makes all studies of the Védas abortive. Hence, one should study them in a submissive spirit. Even a little study of the Védas stands their twice-born reader in good stead both in this world and the next. (39)

The ritualistic (Naishthika) Brahmachárin, who practises this vow from his Upanayana (investure with the holy thread) till death, attains to Brahma. (40)

The twice-born one, who practises this vow for thirty-six years, is called a Upákurvanak. At the close of this Vrata, the vowist should shave his head. Thus having finished the study of all the Védas or of any part thereof, he (the student) should give honorarium to his preceptor (Dakhiná) after having obtained his permission thereto, and bathe thereafter (41)

CHAPTER II.

At the close of such Vedic studies, and having performed the rite of Avabhriňha ablution (lit.—ceremony of ablution at the completion of a principal sacrifice) a twice-born one, wishing to be a house-holder, should seek the hands of a girl of unimpeachable birth and family. (1)

The daughter of an erudite father of good conduct and having sons of his own loins, and born of a family free from all blemishes or any contagious or hereditary disease, and not plighted for money to any other bridegroom before, and not of the same Prabara and Gotra with him, nor related to him as a Sapinda in his father's or mothers side and belonging to his own varna and social order, slender, of auspicious signs; clad in silken garments, and not above eight years of age,* and whose paternal ancestors to the tenth degree in the ascending line were all men of renown; should be solemnly wedded by a (twice-born) according to religious rites, if preferred in marriage. (2—4)

A daughter should be given in marriage to a (twice-born) one, befitting her family in respect of learning; birth, etc., and suited to her in years, according to the rites of a Bráhma marriage, or according to any other regulation where the former would not avail. (5)

Her father, grand-father, brother, uncle; cognates and mother are successively entitled to give away a girl in marriage. In the absence of a father, a grand-father will formally give her away, and so on, in the order of enumeration. The bride can herself give her away in the absence of any of these relations. (6)

The sin incidental to (an act of) procuring abortion (lit.: destruction of the foetus) is committed, if through the negligence of her giver a girl menstruates before her marriage. He, who does not give away a daughter in marriage before she attains her puberty, becomes degraded. (7)

Both the giver and the taker of a girl (in marriage) stand exonerated from all penalties if the latter gives her away saying, “I give this girl to you,” and the latter accepts the gift by saying, "I take her (as my wife)." (8)

* Several Commentators interpret the term as denoting “fair-coloured.”

A man by deserting a blameless girl, or defiling an innocent one, makes himself liable to punishment, (9)

(A twice born) one can take a wife who is not of his own caste (Varna), even after marrying one of his own order (Varna). The son begotten on the wife of one's own caste, does not stand as an Asavarna (of a different caste) son to one under the circumstance. (10)

A Brāhmaṇa can marry a Kshatriya or Vaishya girl; a Kshatriya can take a Vaishya wife, and a Vaishya can wed a S'udra's daughter. But the member of an inferior caste can not wed a girl of superior caste. (11)

Amongst wives of different castes, she, who is of the same caste with her lord, should be his companion in matters of piety and religion. Of several wives all belonging to the same caste as their lord, she, who has the greatest attachment to piety, should have preference as regards companionship in the celebration of religious rites, etc. (12)

The god Brahma cleft his body in two, of yore. Out of one part sprang the husbands, and out of the other the wives. This is what the S'ruti relates. (13)

A man, so long he does not take a wife, is but (a) half (incomplete) being. A half (thing) can not beget. A whole (thing) only can beget. This is the dictum of the S'ruti. (14)

A wife is weightier than the world with its virtues, wealth, and enjoyment, since with the help of no other auxiliary than a wife can he bear its burden. Hence, one should marry, and by constant practice of self-control duly maintain her. (15)
Having married, a man should live with his wife and the sacred fire in his own house; not neglecting his duties and the Vaitānika (sacrificial) fire with the advent of opulence. (16)

Each day, he should cheerfully perform the Śārvata rites with the help of the nuptial fire, and those inculcated in the S'rūtis with that of the sacrificial one. (17)

Day and night, the wedded couple should be one in spirit in respect of all matters of piety, gain, and desire (enjoyment). They should be one in vows and practices. (18)

A woman has no separate existence from her lord in matters of piety, gain and desire. The Śāstras have enjoined this dependency of love. (19)

A wife should quit her bed before her lord, cleanse her person, fold up the beds, and make her house clean and tidy. (20)

Then having entered the chamber of Homa (sacrificial fire) she should (first) wash and plaster its floor, and then the yard of her house, and after that, wash with warm water the vessels of oils, clarified butter, etc., which are used in connection with Agnikaryayas, and keep them in their proper places. (21)

Utensils or implements, which are used in couples (such as the pestle and mortar, etc.,) should never be separated. The vessels (of rice, etc.,) should be cleansed and refilled with their respective contents, and the kitchen-utensils should be taken out, cleansed, and replaced in their proper positions. (22—23)

The oven should be repaired and replastered with earth and clay, and the fire should be lighted therein. Thus having performed her morning (house-hold) Vyāsa Samhitā.

Duties, and pondered over the dishes of different flavours (to be prepared, that day), and allotment of work to different workers, and the daily expenditure of the household, she should make obeisance to her elders and superiors. (24)

Then she should decorate her person with the ornaments given to her by her father-in-law, husband, father, mother, maternal uncle, or relations. (25)

Pure in her thought, speech and action, and obedient to the dictates of her lord, she should follow him (in life) like his own shadow, seek his good like a trusted friend, and minister to his desires like a servant. 26—27)

Then having finished cooking, she should report of it to her husband saying, "the rice is cooked." The husband having made offerings therewith to the Vishvadevas, she should first feed the children, and then serve out the morning meal to her lord. (28)

Then, with the permission of her lord, she would partake of the residue of the boiled rice and cooked dishes (described above), and spend the closing portion of the day in contemplation of the family earnings and expenditure. (29)

Having again attended to the cleansings of the house, etc., at evening, she should cook the night meals (of the household) and provide her husband with a sumptuous repast. (30)

Then the cheerful lamps should be lighted, and she, having spread out a comfortable bed, attend to massage the body of her lord. (31)

After her husband had slept, she should lie down by her side, not entirely bereft of clothes, with her mind fully entered in his self, cautious, non-desiring; and with her passions held under a healthy control. (32)

She should not speak too loudly, nor harshly, or unpleasantly to her lord, avoiding all quarrels, lamentations, and perfidies. (33)

She should not be prodigal in her purse, nor hostile to the spirit of piety or gain. Carelessness, fickleness of mind, anger, envy, deception, vanity, rivalry, mischievousness, cruelty, inordinate pride, cunningness, atheism, daringness, discontent, and dissimulation are the fifteen vices which a chaste wife should always try to renounce. (34–35)

A chaste wife, who thus worships her lord, acquires fame and blessings in this life, and lives in the same region with him, after death. (36)

I have described the daily or general duties of wives, now hear me discourse on their specific ones. A wife, on the appearance of her flow, should renounce all those duties, as she becomes unclean. Bashfully she should reside in a lonely chamber, avoiding the eyes of her friends and relations. (37)

Clad in a single sheet of cloth, and forsaking ornaments and ablution, she should sit silent with her eyes cast downward. Avoiding all listless movements of her eyes and extremities, she should take boiled rice at night alone during her periods. (38–39).

Having passed three nights in such a staid condition of mind, she should wash her clothes, and bathe, on the morning of the fourth day. (40)

Then having seen the face of her husband she would be clean again, whereupon she should resume her usual house-hold duties as before. (41)

The sixteen (successive) nights from the first appearance of the flow in women are called the Menstrual period. Healthy male seeds (sperms) cast into healthy fields (female reproductive organs) during this period are found to sprout lead to conception). (42)

The first four nights of the period should be avoided as Parva days, as well as those marked by the asterisms called Révati, Pitraksha and Râkshasa. Fecundation should take place on each even night during the menstrual period alone. (43)

A man, clad in a silk garment and duly bedecked with ornaments, should visit his wife on (any of these even) nights, whereby he would get a son bearing all auspicious signs on his person. (44)

Even the vow of a Brahmachârin, who visits his wife during her menstrual period, is not vitiated by so doing. Even he, who does not know any other woman, commits no sin by going unto his own wife during her menstrual period according to the natural inclinations of his mind. (45)

A husband not visiting his wife during her menstrual period is guilty of fceticide. The infidel wife, who gets herself impregnated by another man is fit to be abandoned by her lord. (46)

A wife, procuring abortion of her pregnancy caused by her husband, is guilty of a Mahâpâtakam. A husband, by unjustly desserting his own innocent wife, becomes a spiritual out-caste. (47)

A chaste wife should not renounce her lord, even if he be guilty of a Mahâpâtakam, praying that his sin might be extinguished in no distant time. (48).

A husband should not look at the face of his faithless wife. He should banish her in a distant country after a good censuring. (49)
A good wife should renounce all pleasures as long as her husband would be absent in a distant country. The widow of a Brähmana should either immolate herself in fire with the corpse of her deceased husband, or observe a vow of life-long Brahmacarayam (continence) from that date, shaving the hair of her head, and foregoing all articles of luxury. (50—51)

A faithless wife may be again entrusted with the wifely duties by her lord after her next menstrual ablation (at the close of her next monthly flow) after the act of infidelity, and treat her as his own wife as before.

A husband may forsake and banish in any distant country, any of the following wives, viz., those who are deceitful, faithless (lit: forsaking virtue or religion) hostile to her husband's desires, invalid (suffering from an incurable or longstanding disease), wicked, addicted to wine, gambling, or hunting excursions, or inimical to his inrests. A husband should count a superseded wife (Adhivinna') still as a wife of his own after he has married a second time. (52—53)

Under no circumstance women should be kept unprotected. Fathers, husbands, and sons should take them under their guardianship in succession. (54)

The dead bodies of deceased and well born wives, who leave behind them sons, grandsons, and great grandsons, etc., should be duly cremated. They (wives) attain to the same region with their husbands, who had performed Pitri Yajnas in their lives and are hence entitled to spiritual emancipation, after death. (55—56)
CHAPTER III.

The acts of a house-holder may be classified as Nityam, Naimittikan and Kāmayam.* Now hear me describe each of these kinds in detail. (1)

A householder should quit his bed at the close of the last quarter of the night, meditating upon the self of (god) Hari. Then having seen auspicious articles, he should commence the necessary works of his daily life. (2)

Then having eased and washed himself, he should bask in the glare of fire. After that, he should cleanse his teeth with water, bathe, perform his rite of Sandhyā worship, and offer libations of water to the gods and Pitris in succession (as regulated). (3)

Then the best of Brāhmaṇas should study the Védas, histories (Itihásas), and the kindred branches of knowledge (Védangas), give instructions to his own pupils, and feed the good Brāhmaṇas. (4)

Acquire that which has not been already acquired, and having obtained it distribute it as soon as possible. Equals should not sit with equals without first reporting their own presence or arrival. (5)

---

* A Kamayam karma is an act whose performance is imperatively obligatory on all persons, and a non-performance whereof detracts one’s religious merits, though its performance does not make any addition to it.

A Naimittikam karma is an act whose performance is not imperatively obligatory, nor its non-performance detracts from, or performance adds to, one’s religious merit. It is a specific act enjoined to be performed on a special occasion.

A Kāmayam Karmā is an act which is performed for the fruition of any definite object, such as a residence in heaven, or the birth of a male child, etc.
In tanks, lakes, wells, and fountains, etc., belonging to others, one should bathe duly after having first taken five handfuls of clay (Pañcha-Pinda) therefrom. (6)

In cases where Tirthas would be unavailable, or in those wherein ablution would not be practicable, one should bathe in the court-yard of a house with water enough to wet, and be rinsed out of, his cloth. (7)

The rite of ablution should be performed by reciting the A'pohishta Mantra; the rite of purification (Mārjanam) should be done by reading the one beginning with Drupadādīva Mumuchāna. After the bath, the bather should thrice practise Prānāyāma, and look at the sun by reciting the Suryopasthāna Mantram. (8)

Then having recited the Gāyatri, the twice-born ones should commence the study of the Védas. Having studied portion of the Saman, Yajus, and Atharvan, they should commence reading the Itihāsas, Purāṇas, and Upanishads, either entirely, or in parts, if a complete perusal is not feasible. This should be done every day. (9—10)

A twice-born one, through the merit of such studies, acquires all the virtues which can be acquired by celebrating religious sacrifices, by making gifts and practising penitential austerities. Hence, he should read the Védas, every day, without indulging in any idle talk. (11)

The Dharma S'astras, Itihāsas and Purāṇas should be read, if possible, in their entireties, and at the end of such studies a twice-born one should first offer libations of water to the gods. (12)

The rite of Tarpanam (offering libation) should be performed as follows:—He (performer of the rite) should sit with his face looking eastward and his right knee-flaxed and placed on the ground. (Thus seated) he should catch hold of his holy thread in the usual posture, and a Kusha blade with the first phalanx of his right thumb, and offer a single libation of water containing barley corn to the Gods by reciting the Devā, Yaksha, etc., Mantra—(May the gods, Yakshas, etc., be pleased, etc.,) (13)

Then he should sit with his knees flexed and placed on the ground, and his face turned towards the north, catching hold of his holy thread in the posture of a necklace, and offer two libations of water containing barley and sesame unto each spirit of men with the end of a kusha blade held at the root of his little finger. The libations should be cast towards the north. (14)

Then seated with his left knee flexed and his holy thread placed on his right shoulder, he, looking eastward, should offer three libations of water, containing sesame only, unto his father, grandfather and great grandfather, as well as unto his departed maternal grandfather, maternal great grandfather, maternal great great grandfather, and so on, unto the spirits of his paternal grandmother and paternal great grandmother, with the end of a Kusha blade, double the ordinary length, held at the root of his right index finger. (15—17)

The spirits of deceased persons belonging to the family of one's maternal grandfather, or to one's own Gotra, and whose corpses had not been duly cremated, should be separately propitiated with the offering of a single oblation, each. (18)

The water squeezed out of the wearing cloth of a performer of Tarpanam should be offered as libations unto the spirits of those deceased in his family, who had died without the site of Annaprásanam having been done unto them, or whose dead bodies had not been cremated. (19)

The departed manes of him, who thus squeezes water drops out of his wearing cloth and offers them as libations (as above described) without first having offered libations of water unto them, despair of obtaining any water at all, with the gods and Rishis, such as Sanaka etc., (20)

A rite of Tarpanam done with water containing Kus'a blades and sesame, and by reciting their Gotras and names with the term svadhā (obei唆ance) appended thereto, becomes gratifying to the Pitris. One done without any of these factors proves abortive. (21)

A rite of Tarpanam done by a person while thinking of other things, or not according to the regulations of the S'astras, or without being seated on a proper cushion, proves as blood to his departed manes. (22)

The Pitris propitiated with a Tarpanam duly performed as above regulated, grants all wished-for things to its performer. (23)

The deities mentioned in the Jalamantra should be worshipped by reciting the Mantras in which the names of Brahmá, Vishnu, S'iva, A'ditya, and Mitrá-Varuna, occur. (24)

Having performed the rite of Suryopasthánam with his face turned towards the east, a twice-born one should purify the water by invoking the names of Brahmá, Agni, Indra, Oshadhi, Jiva and Vishnu. In connection with this rite he should recite the Mantra, Yat, etc., with the term Namas appended to it, by addressing the name of each of these (divinities). After that, he should rinse his mouth, and bathe. (25—26)

Then having entered his house, a twice-born one should perform the four Páka-Yajnas (simple domestic sacrifices) with the help of the A'vasathya fire (the sacred fire kept in the house). He, whose A'vasathya fire has not been lighted at all, should perform the Homa by casting oblations of boiled rice soaked in clarified butter in the Laukika fire, according the regulations of the Sakala (a school of the Rig-Veda) school. (27—28)

The oblations should be cast in the sacred fire by severally and combinedly reciting the Vyāhritis and the six Mantras running as Deva Kritisya etc., (29)

After that, the Prājāpatya Svishta Krita Homa should be performed by offering twelve oblations unto the fire, prefixing Om and appending Svāhā to the Mantra according to the Svishta regulation. (30)

The oblations should be offered on Kusha blades spread out on the ground; and the one, well-versed in the S'astras, should first offer three oblations by prefixing Om and appending Namas to the Mantra as follows:—Om, to Vishvadevas (Namas) obeisance; Om, to all the beings (Bhutas) Namas (obeisance); Om, to the lord of all the beings (Butānām Patayaē) Namas (obeisance); and after that, Om, to Pitris (obeisance) Namas. (31—32)

The washings of the vessels should be cast in the North-west, and sixteen morsels of boiled rice soaked in clarified butter should be offered, by saying, "these (morsels of) boiled rice to men" (Idam Annam Manushyévyah Hanta). (33)

A twice-born one should offer six oblations of boiled rice to his six departed manes (father, grandfather, great-grand father, maternal grandfather, maternal great grand father, and maternal great great grand father) by mentioning the name and Gotra of each, and by appending the term Svadhá to each of these Mantras, according to one's might and the regulations of the PitriYajna. (34)

A few texts of the Vedas should be recited on the occasion for the completion of the BrahmaYajna. (35)

Then having taken a quantity of boiled rice in his hand, he should walk out of his room and offer morsels of it to crows and Svapachas (Chandālas, lit. dog-feeders). (36)

Then in a pure spirit, and for a period of forty-eight minutes (Muhurta), the house-holder should calmly wait at his gate for any chance-comer (Atithi); and having found any hungry, sober Atithi coming from a distance, he should reverentially accost and welcome him to his house. (37—38)

He should give him water for washing his feet, and show him every mark of respect. An Atithi, duly honoured, is greater than a Yajna (sacrifice), inasmuch as he makes his host entitled to the merit of heaven on the very day of his arrival. (39)

An Atithi, and a Brāhmaṇa well-versed in the Vedas, happening to arrive at one's house during the celebration of the Vaisvadeva sacrifice, should be duly honoured. Propitiated with hospitality both of them lead their host to heaven; dishonoured they lead him to hell. (40)

A marriage relation, a Śrutaka; a king, an A'chār- yaya, a friend; and a Ritvik, even happening to call at one's house, each year, should be religiously respected. (41)

One should honour a S'rotriya arrived at one's house, and dismiss him with the gift of a cow. (42)
One should bid farewell to an Atithi, or to a S’ro-triya guest, by following him a little beyond the compound of one’s own house. One should feed one’s friends, maternal uncles, agnates, and marriage-relations arrived at one’s house. A Yati is privileged to accept alms from a house-holder proffered with respect. (43—44)

The man, who partakes of good food himself, comes by a worse fate by giving bad food to another. A house-holder eats sin by eating before the infants, oldmen, sick folks and pregnant women in his house are relieved of their hunger. (45)

Without being invited one should not eat, nor desire to eat, any cooked food at another’s house. A twice-born one is at liberty to reject an invitation by a man of questionable repute. (46)

Boiled rice (cooked food) belonging to a S’udra, to a calumniated person, to an usurer, to one of false speech, to a cruel man, to a thief, to one of an irascible temperament, to one abandoned by one’s parents, to a slave, to the haughty, to a butcher or hunter, to an actor, to a wine-seller, to an arrogant, insane, Vrātya, or shameless person, to a breaker of vows, to an athiest, to a miser, to one who goes naked, to one in danger, to a non-Aryan, to a woman, to a calumniator, to a renowned though dependent person, to a stealer of king’s revenue or divine chattels, to one defiled through evil company, conduct, food, or bed, to an irreverent man, to a degraded person, or to a man of despicable conduct, is unfit to be partaken of. He, who partakes of such a man’s boiled rice, becomes equally degraded with him. 47—51)

Boiled rice belonging to a Nāpita (barber), a Kula mitra, Ardhasiri (ploughman), Dāsa or Gopālaka, (though these men are all S'udras), may be eaten without the fear of committing any sin. Twice born ones of known families can safely partake of one another's boiled rice. (52)

Boiled rice procured with one's own earnings, or kept in a vessel which is not defiled by the touch of wine, nor 'licked' by a dog, nor smelled by a cow, nor touched by a crow or a S'udra, is always pure. (53)

Such boiled rice, as well as that which has not been previously partaken of, nor stale or prepared over night, nor taken out of the kitchen, and is nicely cooked, should be eaten, every day. (54)

The several preparations of (rice, pulse, barley, and wheat, etc..) known as Kris'arâ, Sanja'va, Pupa and Páyasa, are edible, and a Bráhmana while not officiating as a priest at any religious sacrifice, should not take meat or animal food. (55)

A Bráhmana, engaged in the celebration of a religious sacrifice, becomes degraded by not taking meat. A Kshatriya should eat the cooked flesh of a quarry after having propitiated therewith the gods and his departed manes. A Vaishya can take meat, lawfully obtained for money, after having worshipped therewith his departed manes. (56—57)

A twice-born one, by eating the cooked flesh of an animal wantonly slaughtered (not killed in any sacrifice), suffers the pangs of hell for eternal time, or as long as the sun and stars would shine in heaven. A Bráhmana, by abjuring meat, acquires the merit of a horse-sacrifice, all his desires are fructified, and he becomes an emancipated self even though he be a householder. (58)
A twice born one can drink the milk of a cow or she-buffalo; but that milk should be seasonably milched after the tenth day of her parturition, her calf continuing in a healthy state. The milk of a cow or she-buffalo in heat or in pregnancy should be rejected as unwholesome. (59—60).

A twice born one, who has eaten an onion, white bringel, red radish, red garlic or turnip, Jatugarbha fruit, or any unseasonable flower, or taken the milky juice of an Aruna tree, should practise a Chândrâyana Vrata. (61)

Boiled rice (food) which has come from an unknown source, or has been defiled by speech (ordered to be set apart for another), or has been acquired by giving pain to any one, and out of which morsels have not been proffered to any creature, burns down a householder as fire if he partakes of it. (62)

A house-holder should always take his food in golden or silver vessels, or in those made of bell-metal, substituting the fragrant leaves of the Palâsha, Lodhra, or Padma for them in cases where they would be unavailable. A yati or a Brahmachârin should use the kind of utensil which he thinks proper for his cult. (63—64)

Having sprinkled drops of water over the boiled rice (served out to him), a twice-born one should cast three small oblations thereout on the ground, saying, "to the lord of Bhu obeisance (Namas), to the lord of Bhû va obeisance (Namas), and to the lord of beings (Bhutâ-nâmpatayé Namas) obeisance. (65)

Then having moistened his mouth with a handful of water, he should do Homa unto the five vital airs, appending the term Svâdhâ to the name of each of them, and thereafter partake of the boiled rice, as desirable. (66)

Silently and without any other thought in his mind, or anywise condemning it, he should partake of the boiled rice until the satisfaction of hunger. After that, he should sprinkle water over the plate and leave it. (67)

He should take a morsel out of the residue of boiled rice and cast it on the ground. Then having washed his mouth, he should pass the rest of the day in good company with topics of ancient lore and in the study of Itihásas and good literature. (68)

On the approach of evening, he should attend to his Sandhyá worship, and cast oblations in the sacred fire. Every day, a twice-born one should eat in the company of his servants and dependants. An Atithi arrived at the time of his evening Homa should be honoured by a house-holder to the best of his ability, inasmuch as a dishonoured Atithi robs the piety of the household. (69—70)

He should not overload his stomach with food; and having washed his mouth and feet at the close of his evening meal, a house-holder should lie down in a comfortable bed with his head not turned towards the North or the West. (71)

Unless badly jeopardised in health, or otherwise incapable, a twice-born one should never neglect the timely performance of his Homa and Sandhyá rites. (72)

Quitting his bed within forty-eight minutes of the sun-rise, he should ponder over his own earthly interests. A capable and healthy man should thus act every day in his life. (73)
CHAPTER IV.

This Scriptural Code framed by the holy Vyāsa is but a compendium of all kinds of pieties. All virtues and pieties (enjoined to be performed) by the four orders are intimately connected with the liberation of self (1)

Verily verily, (the holy Vyāsa) has repeatedly said unto men that, a household is the best hermitage in the world. He, who faithfully discharges the duties of a house-holder, acquires the merit of visiting all the holy shrines. (2)

The house-holder, who reveres his elders and preceptors, supports his servants, is kind, unenvious, truthful and self-controlled, daily performs his Homa and Japa (divine contemplation and mental recitation of a Mantra), is faithful to his own wife without coveting that of another, and gives no handle to obloquy, acquires the merit of a pilgrimage, without stirring out of his own house. (3—4)

Ablutions in all the holy pools cannot absolve the sin of him, who daily steals, or covets, other men’s wives and riches. (5)

A true and dutiful house-holder bathing in his own yard acquires the merit of all holy ablutions. Three quarters of piety belong to a house-holder as the giver of food, the remaining quarter attaches itself to him as the master of the household. (6)

Sin can never approach the threshold of a house wherein the master hospitably accommodates the Brāhmaṇas, washes the dust off their feet, gratifies them with food, makes offerings to Vis'vadevās, and doles out alms to the indigent. (7)

The god of death (Yama) can never touch the man, who gives to the Brāhmaṇas water for washing their feet, shoes, food, and hermitages to live in, and welcomes them home by waiving lighted lamps before them. (8)

The departed manes of a person drink nectar out of cups of lotus leaves so long as the washings of the feet of Brāhmaṇas stand moistening the earth of his court-yard. (9)

O you foremost of the Rishis! the merit, which is acquired by making gifts of Kapila cows on the day of the full moon in Kārtika, is likewise acquired by washing the feet of Brāhmaṇas. (10)

The fire god can be gratified by welcoming the Brāhmaṇas; Indra, by offering seats unto them; the Pitris, by washing their feet; and the (god) Prajāpati, by giving food unto them. (11)

One's own parents are shrines of excellent sanctity, no doubt, though kine and the Ganges are holier; but the Brāhmaṇas are the holiest of the holies on earth, a holier thing than they is not, nor ever will be. (12)

All the holy pools and shrines such as, Kurukshetra, Naimisha, Pushkara, Gangādvāra, and Kedárá voluntarily visit the house-holder in his own house, who has subdued all his senses and desires. He is absolved of all sin. (13—14)

O you Brāhmaṇas, now I shall relate to you the virtue of charity or gift-making as it should be practised by the members of the four social orders, and as it was narrated by the holy Vyása of yore. (15)

That wealth alone, which a man spends in gifts to the good Brāhmaṇas, or in gratification of his own desires, is the only true wealth, the rest is but trust. (16)

The riches of the rich are what they enjoy and endow. Others play with the widows and riches of those who neither enjoy nor endow, after their death. (17)

What does his wealth avail the soul of a man, after death; (since) transient is the very body which he tries to nourish with the aid there of? (18)

Transient is wealth, transient are the limbs of one's body. The only reality is that death is fast approaching. Acquire pieties, every day. (19)

Why not give away your riches in charity which you shall have to leave behind, after death, if you have not already spent them in acts of piety, enjoyment or fame? (20)

Truly realised is the end of his life on whose life depends the livelihood of his friends, relations, and Brâhmanas. Who does not live for his own ends in this world? (21)

Even the beasts live and pamper their own bellies. Of what use is the strength, health and longevity of him who does not do any act of public good? (22)

If you have but a morsel of food, why don't you give half of it to the poor? Will any body ever get his wished-for riches in this life? (23)

Verily do I consider a miser to be a man of great renunciation, inasmuch as he leaves behind him all his hoarded riches, after death. A charitable man is the veritable miser living, since he would be benefitted by his wealth (spent in charities) in the next world. (24)

One day we shall have to quit this life. He dies not who has realized the end of his life (by making charities). A miser, dead, is like an ass, who only carries other mens' ingots on his back. (25)

Even space and time will die one day, but the merit of a spontaneous and voluntary gift (lit:—Made without the asking, or to a person come without any call) will never suffer any death. (26)

A reciprocity of gifts may be a social function, but is no virtue. It does not bear any religious merit, like the milk of a black cow (whose calf is dead), milked out of greed and proffered to the gods, etc. (27)

Verily the enjoyers (beneficiaries) of a charitable endowment, contingent on the happening of a future calamity, are not actually seen. But since eternal is the merit of a gift, the maker of a gift never reverts to the plain of human existence. (28)

By making gifts to one's parents, brothers, father-in-law, mother-in-law, wife, or children, one is entitled to an eternal residence in heaven. (29)

A gift made to one's father is hundred times more meritorious than the one made to an outsider, those made to one's mother and sister being respectively ten times greater than the latter. A gift made to one's brother bears eternal fruit. (30)

O you lords of Munis! Every day gifts should be made to the Brāhmaṇas. Any one coming and asking for gifts (charities) should be succoured. (31)

Several recipients of gifts (receivers of charities) may be persons well-versed in the Vēdas, or practisers of penitential austerities. But the best of such takers are those who have never partaken of a S'udra's boiled rice. (32)

A gift should be made to an erudiate person living at a distance in preference to an illiterate one living close by one's house. Nothing can be humiliating (insulting) to an illiterate Brāhmaṇa. (33)

The status of well-birth is extinguished by one's being an article consecrated to divine use, or belong... ing to a Brāhmaṇa, and by insulting a Brāhmaṇa as well. (34)

By not making any gift to a Brāhmaṇa, ignorant of the Vedas, one does not commit the sin of insulting a Brāhmaṇa. Oblations are cast in the sacred fire, and not in its ashes. (35)

He, who causes a Brāhmaṇa, who has been studying the Vedas in the vicinity, to be superseded in a matter of feeding or gift-taking, destroys his three fold relations. (36)

A Brāhmaṇa, who has not studied the Vedas, does, like a wooden elephant, or a leather-deer, but bear the name of the genus he belongs to. (37)

Like a deserted hamlet, like a waterless well, a Brāhmaṇa, who has not read the Vedas, is a Brāhmaṇa only in name. (38)

An article given to a Brāhmaṇa (well versed in the Védas) or cast in the sacred fire by way of ablution, constitutes the true wealth (possession) of a person, the rest is but insignificant. (39)

A gift made to a Vruva Brāhmaṇa is doubly meritorious than the one made to a Sama Brāhmaṇa. A gift made to an Achāryaya is a thousand times more meritorious than the latter, while the one made to a Brāhmaṇa well versed in Vedas bears immortal fruit. (40)

One, born of the seeds of a Brāhmaṇa but not purified with any of the purificatory rites or Mantras, and making use of his caste as a means of livelihood, is called a Sama Brāhmaṇa. (41)

A Brāhmaṇa, unto whom all the purificatory rites of Garbhādhānam, etc., have been performed, but who has neither read nor taught any part of the Védas, is called a Vruva Bráhmaṇa. (42)

A Bráhmaṇa, who practises penitential austerities and performs the rite of Homa, every day, and teaches the Védas with their Kalpas and Rahasyas, is called an Acháryaya. (43)

A Bráhmaṇa, who duly celebrates the Pas'uvandha, Cháturmåsya, Agnisthoma and other Vedic sacrifices, propounds the true import of the Vedic texts with the six allied branches of study in cases of doubt or discrepancy, and regularly studies the Itihásas and Purâṇas, should be alone regarded as well versed in the Védas (Védapáraga). (44—45)

Members of no other castes live such a glorious life as the Bráhmaṇas do. Who is that, who having trodden such a glorious path, will relinquish it? (46)

Bráhmaṇas constitute the divinity of the gods. They are the stuff which the energy of Brahma is made of, and form the apparent cause of the creation and continuity of the worlds. (47)

In the field-like mouth of a Bráhmaṇa, which is free from all gravels and thorns (of falsehood and harsh words) should be sown the seeds of sacrificial Mantras. The cultivator, who does this (gets all religious rites and sacrifices performed by Bráhmaṇas) witnesses the fruition of all his desires. (48)

In good fields the seeds must be sown; in good recipients the gifts should be stored. Whatever is cast in a good field or receptient can not suffer any deterioration. (49)

The cereals (foodgrains in one's store) begin to dance with pleasure on the arrival of a modest and erudite Brāhmaṇa at one’s house, saying, “we shall come by a better fate.” (50)

Grains of rice given to an unholy Brāhmaṇa, who has broken his vows and neglected the study of the Vedas, begin to cry in dismay, saying, “what evils have we committed to be punished with such a degradation. (51)

A Brāhmaṇa well versed in the Vēdas should be repeatedly repasted even after satiety, whereas an illiterate one, fasting even for six consecutive nights, should not be helped with food. (52)

Holy things, whose likes are in the stomach of a Brāhmaṇa, should be alone given to him. Who are the more worthy recipients of gifts than the Brāhmaṇas in whose body the gods partake of their Havyas (libations of clarified butter proffered to the gods) and the Pitris, their Kavyas (oblations.)? Beings are not their bodies, and hence organisms cannot be revered as holy. (53—54)

The article of gift eaten or taken by a dutiful, pure-hearted, (Brāhmaṇa) reader of the Vēdas, bears immortal merit, which does not suffer any diminution through one’s successive rebirths. (55)

Several scholars desire for gifts of horses and elephants, others discard them, saying, “to whom does this wealth belong, and who is the real master of grains or riches. (56)

The seeds (of knowledge), previously sown in the fields of Brāhmaṇas duly ploughed with the plough of the Vēdas, have sprouted as the only true corn in life. (57)

Of a hundred, one is born a hero; of a thousand, a wise man; and of a hundred thousand, an orator. I doubt whether a man of true charities will ever take his birth or not. (58)

A conquest does not make a hero, nor studies a wise man. Eloquence does not make an orator, nor gifts a charitable man. (59)

He, who has conquered his senses, is the real hero. He, who practises virtues, is really wise. A speaker is he, who discusses pleasant and beneficial topics, and he, who gives with reverence, is the maker of true gifts. (60)

One by making gifts of varied values to Brâhmanas all seated in the same row, either out of affection, fright or greed, commits the sin of Brâhmanicide. It is so related in the Vedas, and the Riskis sing of it as such. (61)

Gifts made unto an illeterate (Brahmana), like seeds sown in a sandy soil, or clarified butter kept in a pot of ashes, or libations poured over burnt out cinders, prove abortive (fail to bear any merit). (62)

In what kind of womb will the twice-born one (Brâhmana), who lives on boiled rice of those, who are unclean with the uncleanness due to any death or birth in their families, or partakes of that prepared by a S’udra, take his birth (in his next incarnation)? Verily I can not say that. (63)

He, who dies with a Sudra’s boiled rice in his stomach, is sure to be reborn as a hog, and all his progeny will belong to the same genus, after death. (64)

He will be born as a vulture in his twelve successive rebirths; as a hog, in seven; and as a dog, in seven. This is what Manu has opined on the subject. (65)

He, who dies with the boiled rice of a Brâhmana in his stomach, acquires nectar, after death. Dieing with that of a Kshatriya in his stomach, he is punished with indigence in his next birth; with that of a Vaishya in his stomach, he is consigned to the vile necessity of eating a Sudra's boiled rice again; and with that of a Sudra boiled rice in his stomach, he is consigned to the torments of hell, in his next life. (66)

The Brahmana, who partakes of a Sudra's boiled rice continuously for a month, becomes degraded to the status of Sudra, in this life, and will be born as a dog in the next. (67)

The gods and the Pitris desert the Brahmana, who takes a Sudra wife, or partakes of boiled rice cooked by her, and he is consigned to the pangs of Raurava hell, after death. (68)

The Brahmana, who cooks his food in vessels defiled by the touch of men of vile castes, or do those acts which are calculated to degrade a twice born one in his social status, or promiscuously go unto women of forbidden castes, is sure to be consigned to hell, after death. (69)

Cooking of boiled rice for the gratification of one's own hunger without dedicating it to the use of Brahmanas, Atithis, and the god presiding over a row of Brahmana at a dinner, constant vilification of Brahmanas, and selling the Vedas for money (mercenary teaching of the Vedas) are the five acts which rank equally with an act of Brahmanicide in respect of sin. (70)

Every day, this S'asta, framed by Vyāsa, should be carefully studied, and those, who follow the regulations herein laid down, suffer no fall in life. (71)

THE END.
